THE INDIAN COMPANIES ACT, 1913.

ACT NO VII OF 1913.

(RECEIVED THE G.-G.'S ASSENT ON THE 27TH MARCH, 1913.)

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Trading Companies and other Associations.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to Trading Companies and other associations; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

of the English Act Vide Thodapuzha v. Registrar, 42 Ind. Cas. 674=41 M. 307; see also 10 B. 211; 54 P. R. 1915; 7 B. 494; 18 Ind. Cas. 997. The Companies Act is an Act merely legislating for or regulating certain rights recognized under the common law in England. 111 Ind. Cas. 225=A. I R 1928 Mad 571=1928 M. W. N. 442. Where a company duly incorporated under the Indian Companies Act, the presumption is that it is a separate entity for any individual although that individual may practically hold all the partnership; incorporated by special Act, (4) Co operative Societies, (5) Provident Societies, (6) Trade Unions and (7) limited partnerships—Vide Palmer's Company Law p 1,

Partnership—"The word partnership would apply to a body of persons, which cannot change its members or introduce new members without the consent of all the partners. "As between the partners and the outside world, whatever may be the partners' private arrangements between themselves, each partner is the unlimited agent of every other in every matter connected with the partnership business, or which he represents as partnership business, at the scope of the partnership. A partner who may may take moneys or assets of the partnership to partnership by contracts to any amount, and may for any amount and may, even, as has been shown in many painful instances in this Court, involve his innocent partners in unlimited amounts for fraud which he has craftily concealed from them Per Lord Justice James, in Bairds' Case, 5 Ch. 725.

Origin of Companies Act—The Statute 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, 1844 was the first Statute under which companies could be incorporated. As regards that Act, Lord Cranworth said in Oakes v Turquand, L. R. 2 H L at p 358. "When it became the habit and interest of persons engaged in commerce to unite in great numbers for carrying on any particular trade, it soon became evident that the ordinary provisions of the laws of this country were ill adapted to the business of such bodies. It is a general principle of mercantile law, that when two or more persons are associated in partnership for carrying on a trade, every partner can bind his co partners in all contracts made in the ordinary course re engaged in any particular body, that principle become as a principle for our Courts re partners must either as But when numerous mem- persons, were concerned as partners, this rule would, if adhered to, have made litigation practically impossible, and would often have amounted to a denial of justice."

Consolidate—The following rule is laid down by Lord Herschell in construing a Consolidating Act: "I think the proper course is, in the first instance, to examine the language of the Statute, and to ask, what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law, and not to start with inquiring how the law previously stood and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. If a Statute intended to embody in a Code a particular branch of the law is to be treated in this fashion it appears to me that its utility will be almost entirely destroyed, and the very object with which it was enacted will be frustrated. The purpose of such a Statute surely was that on any points specifically dealt with by it, the law should be ascertained by interpreting the language used instead of as before, by roaming over a vast number of authorities in order to discover what the law was—extracting it by a minute critical examination of the prior decisions dependent upon a knowledge of the exact effect even of an obsolete proceeding such as a demurrer to evidence. I am of course, far from asserting that resort may never be had to the previous state of the law for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the provisions of the Code. If, for example, a provision be of doubtful import such

Code of the law of negotiable acquired a technical meaning in relation to such instruments, the same interpretation might well be put upon them in the Code. I take these as examples merely, they, of course, do not exhaust the category. What, however, I am venturing to insist upon is that the first step taken should be to interpret the language of the Statute, and that an appeal to earlier decisions can only be justified on some special ground. Bank of England v. Vagliano (1891) A. C. 144. In Mersey Dock Case 11 H. L. C. 443. Blackburn J. said: "Where an Act of Parliament has received a judicial construction putting a certain meaning on its words and the legislature in a subsequent Act in pari materia, uses the same words there is a presumption that the legislature uses these words intending to express the meaning which it knew has been put upon the same words before and unless there is something to rebut that presumption the Act should be so construed even if the words were such that they might originally have been construed otherwise." #### Memorandum of Association

5 Any seven or more persons (or, where the company to be formed will be a private company, any two or more persons) associated for any lawful purpose may by subscribing their names to a memorandum of association and otherwise complying with the requirements of this Act in respect of registration, form an incorporated company, with or without limited liability (that is to say), either—

- (i) a company having the liability of its members limited by the memorandum to the amount if any unpaid on the shares respectively held by them (in this Act termed a company limited by shares), or
- (ii) a company having the liability of its members limited by the memorandum to such amount as the members may respectively thereby undertake to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up (in this Act termed a company limited by guarantee) or
- (iii) a company not having any limit on the liability of its members (in this Act termed an unlimited company)

Notes—Where the proprietors of a zemindari having grown too numerous formed themselves into a limited liability company and the company was duly registered, it was held that such a company was not bound to register its memorandum of association, as it was not a company as defined in the Act. See 16 C W N 297

Memorandum of company limited by shares 6 In the case of a company limited by shares—

- (r) the memorandum shall state—
  - (i) the name of the company, with 'limited' as the last word in its name,
  - (ii) the province in which the registered office of the company is to be situate,
  - (iii) the objects of the company
  - (iv) that the liability of the members is limited,
  - (v) the amount of share capital with which the company proposes to be registered, and the division thereof into shares of a fixed amount,
- (2) no subscriber of the memorandum shall take less than one share
- (3) each subscriber shall write opposite to his name the number of shares he takes

Memorandum of association—In Ashbury Railway Carriage and Iron Company, (Ltd) v Riche L R 7 H L 633 Lord Chancellor Gifford observed, With regard to the Memorandum of Association your Lordship will find, as has often already been pointed out although it appears some how to have been overlooked in the present case that this is as it were, the charter, and defines the limitation of powers of a company to be established under the Act. With regard to the Articles of Association, those Articles play a part subsidiary to the Memorandum of Association. They accept the Memorandum of Association as the charter of incorporation of the company, and so accepting it the Articles, proceed to define the duties, the rights, and the powers of the company and the company at large and the internal regulations of the company may from time to time be made. With regard, therefore, to the Memorandum of Association, if you find anything which goes beyond that memorandum, or is not warranted by it, the question is not only of the validity of the act, but of the validity of the act within the Memorandum of Association is a violation of the Articles of Association or in excess of them the question will arise, whether that is anything more than an act ultra vires the directors but ultra vires the company. Objects of the company — The third requirement is that the company must state the objects of the proposed company. The object must not include anything in contravention of the Act. Vide Ooregum Co v Roper, (1892) A C 125. The objects stated must not include anything in contravention of the general law. The object clause limits the power of the company. British South Africa Co v De Beers Consolidated Mines (1903) 1 Ch 354. Memorandum of unlimited company

8 In the case of an unlimited company—

- (1) the memorandum shall state—
- (i) the name of the company,
  - (ii) the province in which the registered office of the company is to be situated
  - (iii) the objects of the company,
- (2) if the company has a share capital—
- (i) no subscriber of the memorandum shall take less than one share,
  - (ii) each subscriber shall write opposite to his name the number of shares he takes

Notes—Companies with unlimited liability are rarely formed and while limited companies have been increasing by leaps and bounds unlimited companies have dwindled nearly to zero. An unlimited company requires a memorandum and articles of association and may have a joint stock capital divided into shares or no such capital. Its name will not include the word Limited. If the company is wound up the liability of its members to contribute to the payment of debts and cost of winding up will be unlimited. Palmer's Company Law P 375

9 The memorandum shall be signed by each subscriber in the presence of at least one witness who shall attest the signature

Signature—Any one may sign the memorandum. A subscriber may be a married woman, a bankrupt or an alien. Priestley v Box L R 3 H L 176. It is doubtful whether an infant can be a subscriber. Re Laxon & Co. (1892) 3 Ch 555. A subscription may be by one's agent. Re Whiteley Partners 32 Ch D 447. As regards the witnesses to the signatures of the subscribers, one witness for all signatures will suffice, and, in that case the words 'witness to the above signatures' will be used, but some times the same witness can not attest all the signatures and in that case the attestation clause must be altered. Palmer's Company Law p 36. - (a) to carry on its business more economically or more efficiently, or
- (b) to attain its main purpose by new or improved means, or
- (c) to enlarge or change the local area of its operations, or
- (d) to carry on some business which under existing circumstances may conveniently or advantageously be combined with the business of the company; or
- (e) to restrict or abandon any of the objects specified in the memorandum

(2) The alteration shall not take effect until and except in so far as it is confirmed by the Court on petition

(3) Before confirming the alteration, the Court must be satisfied—

- (a) that sufficient notice has been given to every holder of debentures of the company, and to any persons or class of persons whose interest will, in the opinion of the Court, be affected by the alteration,
- (b) that, with respect to every creditor who in the opinion of the Court is entitled to object, and who signifies his objection in manner directed by the Court, either his consent to the alteration has been obtained or his debt or claim has been discharged or has determined, or has been secured to the satisfaction of the Court

Provided that the Court may, in the case of any person or class, for special reasons, dispense with the notice required by this section

Scope—This section empowers a company by special resolution to add to or alter its articles. Such alterations may be altered and to the conditions contained in the articles. Walker v London & Lancashire Insurance Co (1894) 1 Ch 20. Allen v Landley (1900) 1 Ch 656. Allen v Landley (1900) 1 Ch 656. Allen v Landley (1900) 1 Ch 656.

It must be exercised for the benefit of the company as a whole, and it must not be exceeded. These conditions are always implied and are seldom if ever expressed. But if they are complied with, I can discover no ground for judicially putting any other restrictions on the power conferred by the section than those contained in it. See also Pepe v City, (1873) 2 Clr 311, (1906) A C 35. But in making the alterations no statutory principles of law must be violated. (1893) 1 Ch, 121, (1900) 1 Ch 303; (1908) 1 Ch 84. Notes—When once the memorandum is registered and the company is held out to the world as a company undertaking business, willing to receive share holders and ready to contract engagements then it would be of the most dangerous consequences if, after all that has been done, any person was allowed to go back and enter into an examination of the circumstances attending the original registration and the regularity of the execution of the document. Per Lord Cairns in Peck's Case (1867) 2 Ch 674. Similarly in Cleinsfort said "I think that the matters essential to registration among companies of association by some persons and that it is conclusive that all previous requisitions have been complied with." See also (1897) A C 22. The effect of incorporating a number of persons into a body corporate is to make that body corporate a separate legal entity or "person". (2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section it shall be liable for each offence to a fine, not exceeding ten rupees.

Associations not for Profit

26 (1) Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Local Government that an association capable of being formed as a limited company has been or is about to be formed for promoting commerce, art science religion charity, or any other useful object and applies or intends to apply its profits (if any) or other income in promoting its objects and to prohibit the payment of any dividend to its members the Local Government may, by license under the hand of one of its Secretaries direct that the association be registered as a company with limited liability without the addition of the word 'Limited' to its name, and the association may be registered accordingly.

(2) A license by the local Government under this section may be granted on such conditions and subject to such regulations as the Local Government thinks fit, and those conditions and regulations shall be binding on the association and shall,

if the Local Government so directs, be inserted in the memorandum and articles or in one of those documents

(3) The association shall on registration enjoy all the privileges of limited companies, and be subject to all their obligations, except those of using the word "Limited" as any part of its name, and of publishing its name, and of filing lists of members and directors and managers with the registrar.

(4) A license under this section may at any time be revoked by the Local Government, and upon revocation the registrar shall enter the word "Limited" at the end of the names of the association upon the register, and the association shall cease to enjoy the exemptions and privileges granted by this section.

Provided that, before a license is so revoked, the Local Government shall give to the association notice in writing of its intention, and shall afford the association an opportunity of submitting a representation in opposition to the revocation

Notes—Where an association is about to be formed for promoting commerce, art, science, religion, charity, or any other useful object, and the founders are willing to promote its objects, the Local Government may license it to be incorporated with limited liability, under the provisions of the Indian Companies Law, 1900. The association may be incorporated with perpetual succession. It can adopt in lieu of company a more suitable name, such as chamber club college guild association. It can have a common seal, it can hold property in its own name without the intervention of trustees, it can contract and take and defend legal proceedings in its own name, its affairs can be conducted much more efficiently and finally its officers and members are freed from personal liability. Under clause (4) the Local Government has power to revoke its license after due notice, and thenceforth the word 'limited' must be used. Palmer's Company Law pp 250-252. With the consent of the Local Government and the sanction of the Court, such an association can alter its objects. St Hilda's College, (1901) 1 Ch 556. A company thus registered can pay a pension to an outgoing secretary. Cyclist's Journey Club v Hopkinson, (1910) 1 Ch 179.

Companies limited by Guarantee.

27. (1) In the case of a company limited by guarantee and not having share capital, and registered after the commencement of this Act, every provision in the memorandum or articles or in any resolution of the company purporting to give any person a right to participate in the divisible profits of the company otherwise than as a member shall be void.

(2) For the purpose of the provisions of this Act relating to the memorandum of a company limited by guarantee and of this section, every provision in the memorandum of articles, or in any resolution, of any company limited by guarantee and registered after the commencement of this Act, purporting to divide the undertaking of the company into shares or interests, shall be treated as a provision for a share capital, notwithstanding that the nominal amount or number of the shares or interests is not specified thereby.

Notes—Prior to the English Companies Act, 1900, it was permissible to form a company limited by guarantee, with articles dividing the undertaking into shares of nominal amount—a most convenient form of association, but section 27 of the Act of 1900 prohibited this and section 21 of the English Companies Act of 1908 which corresponds to this section has continued the prohibition. ## Register of members

31 (1) Every company shall keep in one or more books a register of its members, and enter

therein the following particulars—

- (i) the names and addresses, and the occupations if any, of the members, and in the case of a company having a share capital, a statement of the shares held by each member, distinguishing each share by its number, and of the amount paid or agreed to be considered as paid on the shares of each member,
- (ii) the date at which each person was entered in the register as a member,
- (iii) the date at which any person ceased to be a member

(2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section, it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues, and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty

Register of members—A mere list of members is not a register (1894) 2 Ch 492 But a register may be kept in any form provided the requirements of the Act is satisfied (1879) 4 A C 547 Such a register must be properly kept 47 C 401 The name of a firm as a member can 653 but see (1910) W N 187 Where effected by a change in the register the according to law determines the liability of 1930 P C 10, Att Gen v Higgings 2 H C 371

year make a list of all persons who, on the day of the first or only ordinary general meeting in the year, are members of the company, and of all persons who have ceased to be members since the date of the last return or (in the case of the first return) of the incorporation of the company

(2) The list shall state the names addresses, and occupations of all the past and present members therein mentioned and the number of shares held by each of the existing members at the date of the return specifying shares transferred since the date of the last return or (in the case of the first return) of the incorporation of the company by persons who are still members and persons who have ceased to be members respectively and the dates of registration of the transfers and shall contain a summary distinguishing between shares issued for cash and shares issued as fully or partly paid up otherwise than in cash, and specifying the following particulars—

- (a) the amount of the share capital of the company, and the number of the shares into which it is divided
- (b) the number of shares taken from the commencement of the company up to the date of the return
- (c) the amount called up on each share,
- (d) the total amount of calls received,
- (e) the total amount of calls unpaid
- (f) the total amount of the sums (if any) paid by way of commission in respect of any shares or debentures, or allowed by way of discount in respect of any debentures since the date of the last return,
- (g) the total number of shares forfeited,
- (h) the total amount of shares or stock for which share warrants are outstanding at the date of the return,
- (i) the total amount of share-warrants issued and surrendered respectively since the date of the last return,
- (k) the number of shares or amount of stock comprised in each share warrant,

- (l) the names and addresses of the persons who at the date of the return are the directors of the company and of the persons (if any) who at the said date are the managers of the company, and
- (m) the total amount of debt due from the company in respect of all mortgages and charges which are required to be registered with the registrar under this Act.

(3) The above list and summary shall be contained in a separate part of the register of members, and shall be completed within seven days after the day of the first or only ordinary general meeting in the year, and the company shall forthwith file with the registrar a copy signed by a director or by the manager or the secretary of the company, together with a certificate from such director, manager or secretary that the list and summary state the facts as they stood on the day aforesaid.

(4) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty.

Notes—Where shares are registered in the joint names of several executors (Barton v North Staffordshire Railway 38 Ch D 458) they must all be parties to a transfer even where the register contains a note that they are executors. Barton v London and North Western Railway (1890) 24 Q B D 77—Stibel p 298. Where a member of a company dies, his shares as personal estate vest in his executors or administrators, and the estate is liable (Baird's Case, 5 Ch 723), but the executors or administrators do not ipso facto become members of the company, nor is the company entitled without their consent, to register them as members. Such registration (as members) may involve them in a personal liability, and to justify it there must be some distinct and intelligent request on their part. Butcher's Case, 9 App Cas 588. 42 (1) A British register shall be deemed to be part of the company's register of members (in this section called the principal register)

(2) It shall be kept in the same manner in which the principal register is by this Act required to be kept, except that the advertisement before the closing the register shall be inserted in some news paper circulating in the locality wherein the British register is kept

(3) The company shall transmit to its registered office in India a copy of every entry in the British register as soon as may be after the entry entered in the British register, and the duplicate shall be deemed to be part of the principal register

(4) Subject to the provision of this section with respect to the duplicate register, the company shall be registered in any other register

(5) The company may discontinue to keep any British register, and thereupon all entries in that register shall be transferred to the principal register

(6) Subject to the provisions of this Act, any company may, by its articles, make such regulations as it may think fit respecting the keeping of a British register.

- (1) make arrangements on the issue of shares for a difference between the shareholders in the amounts and times of payment of calls on their shares,
- (2) accept from any member who assents thereto the whole or a part of the amount remaining unpaid on any shares held by him although no part of that amount has been called up
- (3) pay dividend in proportion to the amount paid up on each share where a larger amount is paid up on some shares than on others

Notes—A company will not have powers under this section unless they are conferred by its articles

Power of company limited by shares to alter its share capital

50 (1) A company limited by shares, if so authorised by its articles may alter the conditions of its memorandum as follows, (that is to say), it may—

- (a) increase its share capital by the issue of new shares of such amount as it thinks expedient,
- (b) consolidate and divide all or any of its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares
- (c) convert all or any of its paid up shares into stock and reconvert that stock into paid up shares of any denomination
- (d) sub divide its shares, or any of them, into shares of smaller amount than is fixed by the memorandum, so however, that in the sub division the proportion between the amount paid and the amount, if any, unpaid on each reduced share shall be the same as it was in the case of the share from which the reduced share is derived,
- (e) cancel shares which, at the date of the passing of the resolution in that behalf, have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person, and diminish the amount of its share capital by the amount of the shares so cancelled

(2) The powers conferred by this section with respect to sub division of shares must be exercised by special resolution

(3) Where any alteration has been made under this section in the memorandum of a company every copy of the memorandum issued after the date of the alteration shall be in accordance with the alteration and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty.

(3) A cancellation of shares in pursuance of this section shall not be deemed to be a reduction of share capital within the meaning of this Act

Clause (b)—The doubt raised in Wakefield Rolling Stock (1892) 3 Ch 165 is set at rest by this clause There is no reason why the articles should not entrust the

51 (1) Where a company having a share capital has consolidated and divided its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares, or converted any of its shares, into stock or reconverted stock into shares, it shall within fifteen days of the consolidation and division conversion or reconversion file notice with the registrar of the same, specifying the share consolidated and divided, or converted or the stock reconverted

(2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section, it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty

52 Where, company having a share capital has converted any of its shares into stock of the share capital is converted into stock, and the register of members of any loss incurred by any person by reason of the company entering in its register the name of a bearer of a share-warrant in respect of the shares or stock therein specified without the warrant being surrendered and cancelled

46. The bearer of a share warrant may, if the articles of the company so provide, be deemed to be a member of the company within the meaning of this Act, either to the full extent or for any purposes defined in the articles, except that he shall not be qualified in respect of the shares or stock specified in the warrant for being a director or manager of the company, in cases where such a qualification is required by the articles

47. (1) On the issue of a share warrant, the company shall strike out of its register of members the name of the member then entered therein as holding the shares or stock specified in the warrant as if he had ceased to be a member, and shall enter in the register the following particulars namely —

- (i) the fact of the issue of the warrant,
- (ii) a statement of the shares or stock included in the warrant, distinguishing each share by its number, and
- (iii) the date of the issue of the warrant.

(2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section, it shall be liable to a fine of fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues, and the company who knowingly contravenes this section shall be liable to the like penalty.

Notes—When a share warrant is issued, the name of the prior holder of the share is struck out of the register of members. Hence, whilst the share warrant is outstanding there will be no registered holder. Palmer's Company Law P 141

48 Until the warrant is surrendered, the above particulars shall be deemed to be the particulars required by this Act to be entered in the register of members and, on the surrender, the date of the surrender shall be entered as if it were the date at which a person ceased to be a member

Notes—It would seem that the bearer of a stock or share warrant must, before he is entitled to exercise any of the rights of a member in respect of the stock or shares comprised in his warrant, produce such warrant to the company. Cf Wedgwood Coal and Iron Co (1877) Ch D 627—Cited in Stiebel p 311. A member cannot surrender his share and company cannot accept the surrender except as forfeiture. A shareholder when his shares are forfeited ceases to be a member but a shareholder who surrenders his share does not cease to be a member. 107 Ind. Cas. 394=A. I R 1923 Lah 240. To hold that a company can by resolution of its Directors accept surrender of shares would be to allow a company to reduce its capital at its pleasure. Ibid, see also Bellerby v Rowland, (1902) 2 Ch 14.

49. A company, if so authorised by its articles may do any one or more of the following things, namely —

- (1) make arrangements on the issue of shares for a difference between the share-holders in the amounts and times of payment of calls on their shares,
- (2) accept from any member who assents thereto the whole or a part of the amount remaining unpaid on any shares held by him although no part of that amount has been called up
- (3) pay dividend in proportion to the amount paid up on each share where a larger amount is paid up on some shares than on others

Notes—A company will not have powers under this section unless they are conferred by its articles.

Power of company limited by shares to alter its share capital

50 (1) A company limited by shares, if so authorised by its articles, may alter the conditions of its memorandum as follows, (that is to say), it may—

- (a) increase its share capital by the issue of new shares of such amount as it thinks expedient,
- (b) consolidate and divide all or any of its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares
- (c) convert all or any of its paid up shares into stock and reconvert that stock into paid up shares of any denomination
- (d) sub divide its shares, or any of them, into shares of smaller amount than is fixed by the memorandum, so however, that in the sub division the proportion between the amount paid and the amount, if any, unpaid on each reduced share shall be the same as it was in the case of the share from which the reduced share is derived,
- (e) cancel shares which, at the date of the passing of the resolution in that behalf, have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person, and diminish the amount of its share capital by the amount of the shares so cancelled

(2) The powers conferred by this section with respect to sub division of shares must be exercised by special resolution

(3) Where any alteration has been made under this section in the memorandum of a company every copy of the memorandum issued after the date of the alteration shall be in accordance with the alteration

(4) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of sub section (3) it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding ten rupees for each copy in respect of which default is made, and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty.

(5) A cancellation of shares in pursuance of this section shall not be deemed to be a reduction of share capital within the meaning of this Act

Clause (b)—The doubt raised in Wakefield Rolling Stock (1892) 3 Ch 165 is

50 as to take any such power and to exercise the power so taken Vide Campbells Case, (1879) 9 Ch 1, Sewell's Case, (1868) 3 Ch 131

51 (1) Where a company having a share capital has consolidated and divided its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares, or converted any of its shares, into stock or reconverted stock into shares, it shall within fifteen days of the consolidation and division conversion or reconversion file notice with the registrar of the same, specifying the share consolidated and divided, or converted or the stock reconverted

(2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section, it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty

52 Where, company having a share capital has converted any of its shares into stock, and filed notice of the conversion with the registrar, all the provisions of this Act which are applicable to shares only shall cease as to so much of the share capital as is converted into stock, and the register of members of the company, and the list of members to be filed with the registrar, shall show the amount of stock held by each member instead of the amount of shares and the particulars relating to shares hereinbefore required by this Act have not been converted into stock, has increased its share capital beyond the registered capital, and where a company not having a share capital has increased the number of its members beyond the registered number, it shall file with the registrar in the case of an increase of share capital, within fifteen days after the passing or in the case of a special resolution the confirmation, of the resolution authorising the increase, and in the case of an increase of members within fifteen days after the increase was resolved on or took place, notice of the increase of capital or members, and the registrar shall record the increase.

(2) If a company makes a default in complying with the requirements of this section it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues, and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty

Att Gen v Anglo Argentine Tramways (1930) 1 K B 676

54 (1) A company limited by shares may, by special resolution confirmed

Reorganization of share capital

by an order of the Court modify the conditions contained in its memorandum so as to recognise its share capital, whether by the consolidation of shares of different classes or by the division of its shares into shares of different classes

Provided that no preference or special privilege attached to or belonging to any class of shares shall be interfered with except by resolution passed by a majority in number of share holders of that class holding three fourths of the share capital of that class and confirmed at a meeting of share holders of that class in the same manner as a special resolution of the company is required to be confirmed, and every resolution so passed shall bind all share holders of the class

(2) Where an order is made under this section, a certified copy thereof shall be filed with the registrar within twenty one days after the making of the order, or within such further time as the Court may allow, and the resolution shall not take effect until such a copy has been so filed

Notes—'The proviso in the section is very badly drafted, but it will be observed that it does not speak of the majority in number of the share-holders but of a majority in number of share holders, at a meeting and it is thought that if a meeting of the share holders be called the majority at that meeting will be sufficient, if they are present in person or by proxy and voting in favour of the scheme share holders representing three fourths of the capital of the class. At the confirmatory meeting a bare majority of the members of the class present in person or by proxy will be enough. The application to the Court it is thought, should be by petition'— to abolish existing classes of shares and to section does not contemplate such a mode of only to two modes of reorganizing share shares of different classes into shares of one class, into shares of different classes 30

Reduction of Share Capital

55 (1) No company limited by shares shall have power to buy its own shares unless the consequent reduction of capital is effected and sanctioned in manner hereinafter provided.

Subject to confirmation by the Court, a company limited by shares, is so authorised by its articles may by special resolution reduce its share capital, in any way, and in particular (without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power) may—

- (a) extinguish or reduce the liability on any of its shares in respect of share capital not paid up, or
- (b) either with or without extinguishing or reducing liability on any of its shares, cancel any paid up share capital which is lost or unrepresented by available assets, or
- (c) either with or without extinguishing or reducing liability on any of its shares, pay off any paid up share capital which is in excess of the wants of the company, and may, if and so far as is necessary, alter its memorandum by reducing the amount of its share capital and of its shares accordingly

(3) A special resolution under this section is in this Act called a resolution for reducing share capital

Notes—The reduction of capital without the assent of the court is opposed to this section 52 M 915—A I R 1929 Mad 773—120 Ind Cas 71 Reduction of capital should be made under statutory authority or by forfeiture in strict accordance with procedure if any laid down in that behalf in the articles of association 125 Ind Cas 419=54 B 178=A I R 1930 B 267, see also 128 Ind Cas 641=A I R 1930 P C 303=1930 A L J 1345, 110 Ind Cas 471, 83 Ind Cas 94

Clause (2)—In order to reduce capital, the company must be authorised by its articles Power in the memorandum will not do 88 L T 791, (1893) W N 82 Where the articles do not contain any such powers, they are to be altered by special resolution 31 Ch D 166, 9 Ch D 11, Oregon Mortgage Co (1910) S C 964, Court of Session Stock may be reduced under these powers Household Property and Investment Co (1912) W N 110

56 Where a company has passed and confirmed a resolution for reducing share capital, it may apply by petition to the Court for an order confirming the reduction

Application to Court for confirming order

Notes—An application is then made by petition to the Court for an order confirming the reduction The Court means the Court having jurisdiction to wind up the company Vide Rugby Gas Co (1899) W N 127, (1908) W N 203, (1911) W N, 235

57 On and from the confirmation by a company of a resolution for reducing share capital, or where the reduction does not involve either the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid share capital or the payment to any share holder of any paid up share capital, then on and from the presentation of the petition for confirming the reduction, the company shall add to its name, until such date as the Court may fix, the words "and reduced" as the last words in its name, and those words shall until that date, be deemed to be part of the name of the company

Provided that, where the reduction does not involve either the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid share capital, or the payment to any share holder of any paid up share capital, the Court may, if it thinks expedient, dispense altogether with the addition of the words "and reduced"

Notes—The words 'and reduced' must be added to the name of company as a warning to the public. (1892) 3 Ch 155 5 Eq 155 The omission of the words without leave will deprive the Court of its jurisdiction to sanction reduction John T Clark & Co, (1911) S C 243 Where the scheme for reduction is abandoned the words may be discontinued with the sanction of the Court 53 L. T 736, 5 Ch D 535 In case of companies carrying on business abroad this practice may be dispensed with Vide (1890) W N 89, (1906) W N 182, (1910) 1 Ch 414.

58 (1) Where the proposed reduction of share capital involves either diminution of liability in respect of unpaid share-capital, or the payment to any share holder of any paid up share capital, and in any other case if the Court so directs, every creditor of the company who at the date fixed by the Court is entitled to any debt or claim which, if that date were the commencement of the winding up of the company, would be admissible in proof against the company, shall be entitled to object to the reduction

(2) The Court shall settle a list of creditors so entitled to object, and for that purpose shall ascertain, as far as possible without requiring an application from any creditor, the names of those creditors and the nature and amount of their debts, or claims and may publish notices fixing a day or days within which creditors not entered on the list are to claim to be so entered or are to be excluded from the right of objecting to the reduction

Notes—The Court cannot dispense with the list of creditors being settled Lamson Store Service Co Ltd (1895) 2 Ch 726 Such as do not consent must be paid off or provision be made for paying their debts into Court Vide Sharp v Stewart & Co (1867) 5 Eq 155, 31 W R 781, (1885) W N 61 The debenture holders are creditors 17 W R 304 (Eng), 12 Ch D 254 But a creditor can object only in cases mentioned in clause (1) (1919) 1 Ch 28, (1891) 2 Ch 354

59 Where a creditor entered on the list of creditors whose debt or claim is not discharged or determined does not consent to the reduction, the Court may, if it thinks fit, dispense with the consent of that creditor, on the company securing payment of his debt or claim by appropriating as the Court may direct, the following amount (that is to say) —

- (i) if the company admits the full amount of his debt or claim, or, though not admitting it, is willing to provide for it, then the full amount of the debt or claim,
- (ii) if the company does not admit or is not willing to provide for the full amount of the debt or claim, or if the amount is contingent or not ascertained, then an amount fixed by the Court after the like inquiry and adjudication as if the company were being wound up by the Court

Notes—A lessor is entitled to have a sum appropriated to answer future rent Telegraph Construction Co (1870) 10 Eq 384 Palace Billiard Rooms, (1912) S C 5

60 The Court, if satisfied, with respect to every creditor of the company who and Order confirming reduction has been obtained or his debt or claim determined or has been secured, may make terms and conditions as it thinks fit.

Notes—A when his debt is settled p 639 section have refuse the sanction if it considers the reduction is not fair and equitable as between different classes of share holders (1907) A C 229, (1894) A C 399 See also (1902) 2 Ch 178

61 (1) The registrar on production to him of an order of the Court confirming the reduction of the share capital of a company, and on the filing with him of a certified copy of the order and of a minute (approved by the Court) showing, with respect to the share capital of the company as altered by the order, the amount of the share capital, the number of shares into which it is to be divided and the amount of each share, and the amount (if any) at the date of the registration deemed to be paid up on each share, shall register the order and minute

(2) On the registration, and not before, the resolution for reducing share capital as confirmed by the order so registered shall take effect

(3) Notice of the registration shall be published in such manner as the Court may direct

(4) The registrar shall certify under his hand the registration of the order and minute, and his certificate shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this Act with respect to reduction of share capital have been complied with, and that the share capital of the company is such as is stated in the minute

Notes—The minute, together with a copy of the order, has to be filed with the Registrar who gives a certificate. This certificate is conclusive evidence of reduction. Re Walker and Smith Ltd 72 L J Ch 57. see also (1900) 2 Q B 376 (1903) W N 82 (Eng)

62 (1) The minute when registered shall be deemed to be substituted for the corresponding part of the memorandum of the company, and shall be valid and alterable as if it had been originally contained therein and shall be embodied in every copy of the memorandum issued after its registration

(2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section, it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding ten rupees for each copy in respect of which default is made, and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty

63 (1) A member of the company, past or present, shall not be liable in respect of any share to any call or contribution exceeding in amount the difference (if any) between the amount paid, or (as the case may be), the reduced amount, if any, which is to be deemed to have been paid, on the share and the amount of the share as fixed by the minute

Provided that, if any creditor, entitled in respect of any debt or claim to object to the reduction of share capital, is, by reason of his ignorance of the proceedings for reduction or of their nature and effect with respect to his claim not entered on the list of creditors, and, after the reduction the company is unable, within the meaning of the provisions of this Act with respect to winding up by the Court, to pay the amount of his debt or claim, then—

(i) every person who was a member of the company at the date of the registration of the order for reduction and minute, shall be liable to contribute for the payment of that debt or claim an amount not exceeding the amount which he would have been liable to contribute if the company had commenced to be wound up on the day before that registration, and

(ii) if the company is wound up, the Court, on the application of any person as aforesaid may if it thinks so liable to contribute, any debts settled on the list of creditors in a winding up

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of the contributories among themselves

64. If any officer of the company wilfully conceals the name of any creditor entitled to object to the reduction, or wilfully misrepresents the nature or amount of the debt or claim of any creditor, or if any officer of the company abets any such concealment or misrepresentation as aforesaid, every such officer shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both

65. In any case of reduction of share capital, the Court may require the company to publish as the Court directs the reasons for reduction, or such other information in regard thereto as the Court may think expedient with a view to give proper information to the public, and, if the Court thinks fit, the causes which led to the reduction

66. A company limited by guarantee and registered after the commencement of this Act may, if it has a share capital and is so authorised by its articles, increase or reduce its share capital in the same manner and subject to the same conditions in and subject to which a company limited by shares may increase or reduce its share capital under the provisions of this Act

Registration of Unlimited Company as Limited.

67. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section, any company registered as unlimited may register under this Act as limited or any company already registered as a limited company may register under this Act, but the registration of an unlimited company as a limited company shall not affect any debts, liabilities, obligations or contracts incurred or entered into by or with or on behalf of the company before the registration, and those debts, liabilities, obligations and contracts may be enforced in manner provided by Part VIII, of this Act in the case of a company registered in pursuance of that Part

(2) On registration in pursuance of this section the registrar shall close the former registration of the company, and may dispense with the delivery to him of copies of any documents with copies of which he was furnished on the occasion of the original registration of the company, but, save as aforesaid, the registration shall take place in the same manner and shall have effect as if it were the first registration of the company under this Act

68. An unlimited company having a share capital may, by its resolution for registration as a limited company in pursuance of this Act, do either or both of the following things, namely —

- (a) increase the nominal amount of its share capital by increasing the nominal amount of each of its shares, but subject to the condition that no part of the amount by which its capital is so increased shall be capable of being called up except in the event and for the purposes of the company being wound up,
- (b) provide that a specified portion of its uncalled share capital shall not be capable of being called up except in the event and for the purposes of the company being wound up

Reserve Liability of Limited Company

69 A limited company may by special resolution determine that any portion of its share capital which has not been already called up shall not be capable of being called up, except in the event and for the purposes of the company being wound up, and thereupon that portion of its share capital shall not be capable of being called up except in the event and for the purposes aforesaid

Notes—There is nothing to prevent a limited company providing by its Memorandum of Association that part of its capital shall only be capable of being called up in the event and for the purposes of a winding up and such a provision would be unalterable Ashbury v Watson 30 Ch C 376 Where there is no provisions in the Memorandum of Association such a provision may also be made under this section by special resolution It is well settled that a power to charge uncalled capital conferred by the Memorandum or Articles of Association of a company is good Fyle Works, (1890) 44 Ch D 534 Newton v Anglo Australian Investment Co (1895) A C 244.

Unlimited Liability of Directors

70 (1) In a limited company the liability of the directors or of any director, may, if so provided by the memorandum, be unlimited

(2) In a limited company in which the liability of any director is unlimited, the directors of the company (if any) and the member who proposes a person for election or appointment to the office of director shall add to that proposal a statement that the liability of the person holding that office will be unlimited, and the promoters and officers of the company, or one of them, shall, before the person accepts the office or acts therein, give him notice in writing that his liability will be unlimited

(3) If any director or proposer makes a default in adding such a statement or if any promoter or officer of the company makes default in giving such a notice, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand rupees and shall also be liable for any damage which the person so elected or appointed may sustain from the default, but the liability of the person elected or appointed shall not be affected by the default.

71 (1) A limited company, if so authorised by its articles may, by special resolution, alter its memorandum so as to render unlimited the liability of its directors or of any director

(2) Upon the confirmation of any such special resolution, the provisions thereof shall be as valid as if they had been originally contained in the memorandum and a copy thereof shall be embodied in or annexed to every copy of the memorandum issued after the confirmation of the resolution

(3) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding ten rupees for each copy in respect of which default is made, and every officer of the company, who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default, shall be liable to the like penalty

PART IV.MANAGEMENT AND ADMINISTRATION.Office and Name

72 (1) Every Company shall have a registered office to which all communications and notices may be addressed

Registered office of company

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of the contributories among themselves

64 If any officer of the company wilfully conceals the name of any creditor entitled to object to the reduction, or wilfully misrepresents the nature or amount of the debt or claim of any creditor, or if any officer of the company abets any such concealment or misrepresentation as aforesaid, every such officer shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one year or with fine, or with both

65 In any case of reduction of share capital, the Court may require the company to publish as the Court directs the reasons for reduction, or such other information in regard thereto as the Court may think expedient with a view to give proper information to the public, and, if the Court thinks fit the causes which led to the reduction

66. A company limited by guarantee and registered after the commencement of this Act may, if it has a share capital and is so authorised by its articles, increase or reduce its share capital in the same manner and subject to the same conditions in and subject to which a company limited by shares may increase or reduce its share capital under the provisions of this Act

Registration of Unlimited Company as Limited.

67 (1) Subject to the provisions of this section, any company registered as unlimited may register under this Act as limited or any company already registered as a limited company may register under this Act, but the registration of an unlimited company as a limited company shall not affect any debts liabilities obligations or contracts incurred or entered into by or to with or on behalf of the company before the registration, and those debts liabilities obligations and contracts may be enforced in manner provided by Part VIII of this Act in the case of a company registered in pursuance of that Part

(2) On registration in pursuance of this section the registrar shall close the former registration of the company, and may dispense with the delivery to him of copies of any documents with copies of which he was furnished on the occasion of the original registration of the company but save as aforesaid, the registration shall take place in the same manner and shall have effect as if it were the first registration of the company under this Act

68 An unlimited company having a share capital may by its resolution for registration as a limited company in pursuance of this Act, do either or both of the following things, namely —

(a) increase the nominal amount of its share capital by increasing the nominal amount of each of its shares but subject to the condition that capital is so increased shall be the event and for the purposes

(b) its uncalled share capital shall not in the event and for the purposes

Reserve Liability of Limited Company

69 A limited company may by special resolution determine that any portion of its share capital which has not been already called up shall not be capable of being called up, except in the event and for the purposes of the company being wound up, and thereupon that portion of its share capital shall not be capable of being called up except in the event and for the purposes aforesaid

Notes—There is nothing to prevent a limited company providing by its Memorandum of Association that part of its capital shall only be capable of being called up in the event and for the purposes of a winding up and such a provision would be unalterable Ashbury v Watson 30 Ch C 376 Where there is no provisions in the Memorandum of Association such a provision may also be made under this section by special resolution It is well settled that a power to charge uncalled capital conferred by the Memorandum or Articles of Association of a company is good Fyle Works, (1890) 44 Ch D 534 Newton v Anglo Australian Investment Co (1895) A C 244

Limited company may have directors with unlimited liability 70 (1) In a limited company the liability of the directors or of any director, may, if so provided by the memorandum, be unlimited

(2) In a limited company in which the liability of any director is unlimited, the directors of the company (if any) and the member who proposes a person for election or appointment to the office of director shall add to that proposal a statement that the liability of the person holding that office will be unlimited, and the promoters and officers of the company, or one of them shall, before the person accepts the office or acts therein, give him notice in writing that his liability will be unlimited

(3) If any director or proposer makes a default in adding such a statement or if any promoter or officer of the company makes default in giving such a notice, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand rupees and shall also be liable for any damage which the person so elected or appointed may sustain from the default, but the liability of the person elected or appointed shall not be affected by the default

71 (1) A limited company, if so authorised by this articles may, by special resolution, alter its memorandum so as to render company making liability of directors unlimited unlimited the liability of its directors or of any director

Publication of name by a limited company

73. Every limited company—

(a) shall print or affix, and keep painted or affixed, its name on the outside of every office or place in which its business is carried on, in a conspicuous position, in letters easily legible and in English characters and also, if the registered office be situated in a place beyond the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a High Court, in the characters of one of the vernacular languages used in that place,

(b) shall have its name engraven in legible characters on its seal,

(c) shall have its name mentioned in legible English characters, in all bill heads and letter paper and in all notices, advertisements and other official publications of the company, and in all bills of exchange, hundis promissory notes, endorsements, cheques and orders for money or goods purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the company, and in all bills of parcels, invoices, receipts and letters of credit of the company

Notes—The Legislature whilst allowing limited liability desires by this means to make the company itself continually bring to the notice of those who deal or may deal with it the fact that it is limited—Palmer's Company Law p 248. 77 (1) Every company limited by shares and registered after the commencement of this Act shall, within a period of six months, from the date at which the company is entitled to commence business, hold a general meeting of the members of the company which shall be called the statutory meeting

(2) The directors shall, at least ten days before the day on which the meeting is held, forward a report (in this Act called "the statutory report") to every member of the company and to every other person entitled under this Act to receive it

(3) The statutory report shall be certified by not less than two directors of the company or, where there are less than two directors, by the sole director and shall state—

- (a) the number of shares allotted as fully paid up, and stating in the case of shares which have not been fully paid up, the amount which has been paid up, and how they have been allotted,
- (b) the total amount of cash received by the company in respect of all the shares allotted distinguished as aforesaid,
- (c) an abstract of the receipt of the company whether from its share capital or from debentures, and of the payments made thereout, up to a date within seven days of the date of the report exhibiting under distinctive headings the receipts of the company from shares and debentures and other sources, the payments made thereout and particulars concerning the balance remaining in hand and an account or estimate of the preliminary expenses of the company,

(d) the names, addresses and descriptions of the directors, auditors (if any), managers (if any) and secretary of the company,

(e) the particulars of any contract, the modification of which is to be submitted to the meeting for its approval, together with the particular of the modification or proposed modification

(4) The statutory report shall, so far as it relates to the shares allotted by the company and to the cash received in respect of such shares and to the receipts and payments of the company on capital account be certified as correct by the auditors (if any) of the company

(5) The directors shall cause a copy of the statutory report, certified as by this section required, to be filed with the registrar forthwith after the sending thereof to the members of the company

(6) Every director of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits a default in complying with the provisions of sub section (2) or sub-section (5) shall be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty rupees for every day during which the default continues

(7) The directors shall cause a list showing the names, descriptions and addresses of the members of the company, and the number of shares held by them respectively to be produced at the commencement of the meeting, and to remain open and accessible to any member of the company during the continuance of the meeting

(8) The members of the company present at the meeting shall be at liberty to discuss any matters relating to the formation of the company or arising out of the statutory report, whether previous notice has been given or not, but no resolution of which notice has not been given in accordance with the articles may be passed

(9) The meeting may adjourn from time to time, and at any adjourned meeting any resolution of which notice has been given in accordance with the articles either before or subsequently to the former meeting may be passed, and the adjourned meeting shall have the same powers as an original meeting

(10) If a petition is presented to the Court in manner provided by Part V for winding up the company on the ground of default in filing the statutory report or in holding the statutory meeting, the Court may instead of directing that the company be wound up, give directions for the statutory report to be filed or a meeting to be held, or make such other order as may be just

(11) The provisions of this section as to the forwarding and filing of the statutory report shall not apply in the case of a private company

Notes—The obvious purpose of the statutory meeting with its preliminary report is to put the shareholders of the company as early as possible in possession of all the important facts relating to the new company—what shares have been taken up, what monies received, what contracts entered into, what sums spent on preliminary expenses, etc. Furnished with these particulars, the shareholders are to have an opportunity of meeting and discussing the whole situation—the management method and prospects of the company. (e) the number and amount of shares and debentures which within the two preceding years have been issued, or agreed to be issued, as fully or partly paid up otherwise than in cash, and in the latter case the extent to which they are so paid up, and either case the consideration for which those shares or debentures have been issued or agreed to be issued, and

(f) the names and addresses of the vendors of any property purchased or acquired by the company, or proposed so to be purchased or acquired, which is to be paid for wholly or partly out of the proceeds of the issue offered for subscription by the prospectus, or the purchase or acquisition of which has not been completed at the date of issue of the prospectus, and the amount payable in cash shares or debentures to the vendor, and where there is more than one separate vendor or the company is a sub purchaser, the amount so payable to each vendor. Provided that where the vendors or any of them are a firm the members of the firm shall not be treated as separate vendors, and

(g) the amount (if any) paid or payable as purchase money in cash, shares or debentures, for any such property as aforesaid, specifying the

(h) as ring
or agreeing to procure subscriptions for any shares in or debentures of the company or the rate of any such commission provided that it shall not be necessary to state the commission payable to sub-underwriters and

(i) the amount

(k) the amount to be paid to a, r, nt and

(l) the dates of, and parties to, every material contract and a reasonable time and place at which any material contract or a copy thereof may be inspected. Provided that this requirement shall not apply to a contract entered into in the ordinary course of the business carried on or intended to be carried on by the company, or to any contract entered into more than two years two years before the date of issue of the prospectus, and

(m) the names and addresses of the auditors (if any) of the company, and

(n) full particulars of the nature and extent of the interest (if any) of every director in the promotion of, or in the property proposed to be acquired by, the company, or, where the interest of such a director consists in being a partner in a firm the nature and extent of the interest of the firm, with a statement of all sums paid or agreed to be paid to him or to the firm in cash or shares or otherwise by any person either to induce him to become, or to qualify him as, a director, or otherwise for services rendered by him or by the firm in connection with the promotion or formation of the company, and

(o) where the company is a company having shares of more than one class, the right of voting at meetings of the company conferred by the several classes or shares respectively

(z) Where any such prospectus as is mentioned in this section is published as a newspaper advertisement, it shall not be necessary in the advertisement to specify the contents of the memorandum, or the signatories thereto, and the number of shares subscribed for by them

(3) This section shall not apply to a circular or notice inviting existing members or debenture-holders of a company to subscribe either for shares or for debentures of the company, whether with or without the right to renounce in favour of other persons.

(4) The requirements of this section as to the memorandum and the qualification, remuneration and the interest of directors, the names, descriptions and addresses of directors or proposed directors, and of managers or proposed managers, and the amount or estimated amount of preliminary expenses shall not apply in the case of a prospectus issued more than one year after the date at which the company is entitled to commence business.

(5) Nothing in this section shall limit or diminish any liability which any person may incur under the general law or this Act apart from this section.

Sub-Clause 1—The object clearly is to strip off the mask—as Lord Dalrymple said—which often conceals the real vendor, and to get at the truth of who is and what amount of profit he or the expense of the company. But is one thing, and its operation is traversed by it, the unscrupulous director can easily comply with the letter, and yet, by a multiplicity of devices, mislead inquiry and throw dust in the eyes of investors—Palmer's Company 110 p. 46. An assessor cannot challenge the appointment of Director or contest a Director's authority to act on behalf of the company where the company has recognised a person to be a director for a long time, without repudiating his acts on any single occasion. 31 Ind. Cas. 595.

Clause (3)—A circular of which a few copies are printed or typewritten, and which is only given to the directors and few other persons for distribution among personal friends does not come within this section. Slough v. Gluzo, (1904) 61 T. 420. Shervell's Combined Ice and Cold Utilities (1907) 23 T. L. R. 432, 111 T. Ch. 5.

Clause 6—No penalty is imposed for non-compliance with the section, and the inference seems to be that it is one aggrieved by the neglect of the statutory duty has a right of action for damages against the directors or promoters or other persons responsible for the neglect—Palmer's Company 110 p. 46. Atkinson v. Newcliffe 118 D. 441. City v. Venner (1892) A. C. 345. Municipality v. Gellert (1893) A. C. 52. Smith v. Hoorn (1895) 1 Q. B. 64. Johnson v. Constable (1895) A. C. 44.

91 If the purpose of section 93 every person shall be deemed to be a vendor who has entered into any contract, absolute or conditional, for the sale or purchase, or for any option of purchase, of any property to be required by the company in any case where—

- (a) the purchase-money is not fully paid at the date of issue of the prospectus,
- (b) the purchase-money is to be paid or satisfied wholly or in part out of the proceeds of the issue offered for subscription by the prospectus, or
- (c) the contract depends for its validity or fulfilment on the result of that issue.

Notes—Very wide meaning is given to the word "vendor"—Palmer's Company 110 p. 346.

95 Where any of the property to be required by the company is to be taken on lease section 93 shall apply as if the expression "vendor" included the lessor, and the expression "purchase money" included the consideration for the lease, and the expression "sub-purchaser" included a sub-lessee.

Notes—This corresponds to clause (3) of section 81 of the English Act.

96 Any condition requiring or hindring any applicant for shares or debentures to waive compliance with any requirements of section 93 or purporting to affect him with notice of any contract, document or matter not specifically referred to in the prospectus, shall be void

97 In the event of non compliance with any of the requirements of section 93, a director or other person responsible for the prospectus shall not incur any liability by reason of the non compliance, if he proves that—
 Saving in certain cases of non-compliance with section 93

(a) as regards any matter not disclosed, he was not cognisant thereof, or

(b) the non-compliance arose from an honest mistake of fact on his part

Provided that, in the event of non compliance with the requirements contained in clause (u) of subsection (1) of section 93, no such director or other person shall incur any liability in respect of the non compliance unless it be proved that he had knowledge of the matters not disclosed

98. (1) A company which does not issue a prospectus on or with reference to its formation shall not allot any shares or debentures unless before the first allotment of either shares or debentures there has been filed with the registrar a statement in lieu of prospectus signed by every person who is named therein as a director or a proposed director of the company or by his agent authorised in writing in the form and containing the particulars set out in the Second Schedule

(2) This section shall not apply to a private company or to a company which has allotted any shares or debentures before the commencement of this Act or, in so far as it relates to the allotment of shares to a company limited by guarantee and not having a share capital.

Notes.—The Registrar will not file a statement in lieu of a prospectus unless every point in such form is dealt with either by a definite affirmative statement or by a negative statement and he is bound in this case to see the statute is complied with.—Steebel p 219 A scheme was set on foot to purchase a cotton mill as a going concern at an excessive price and to promote a company greatly over capitalised, to which it was to be sold at a profit to the promoters. One of the promoters introduced the scheme to the respondent Lewis, and induced him to provide £30,000 in cash for which he was to receive £30,000 in debentures and 95,000 £1 shares, 20,000 of which were to go to the promoter who introduced the matter to him. The allotment of shares and debentures was made to the respondent on the day on which the company was registered but before the registration and at that time no prospectus, or statement in lieu of a prospectus had been filed as required by s 98 (1) (=this section) of the English Companies Act. Held that the respondent was liable as a promoter. Jubilee Cotton Mills v Lewis, (1924) A C 958. The statement is also open to inspection (1914) 1 Ch 390. The requirements of the section are satisfied by the mere filing of the statement. (1914) 1 Ch 390

Restriction on alteration of terms mentioned in prospectus or statement in lieu of prospectus

99 A company shall not at any time, vary the terms of a contract referred to in the prospectus or statement in lieu of prospectus, except subject to the approval of the company in general meeting

Notes.—A company cannot previously to its statutory meeting alter the terms of a contract referred to in a prospectus or statement in lieu of a prospectus except subject to the approval of the statutory meeting. Steebel p 330

100 (1) Where a prospectus invites persons to subscribe for shares in or debentures of a company, every person who is a director of the company at the time of the issue of the prospectus, and every person who has authorised

the naming of himself and is named in the prospectus as a director or as having agreed to become a director either immediately or after an interval of time, and every promoter of the company, and every person who has authorised the issue of the prospectus, shall be liable to pay compensation to all persons who subscribe for any shares or debentures on the faith of the prospectus for all loss or damage they may have sustained by reason of any misleading or untrue statement therein, or in any report or memorandum appearing on the face thereof, or by reference incorporated therein, or issued therewith, unless it is proved—

- (a) with respect to every misleading or untrue statement not purporting to be made on the authority of an expert or of a public official document or statement, that he had reasonable ground to believe and did up to the time of the allotment of the shares or debentures, as the case may be believe that the statement fairly represented the facts or was true
- (b) with respect to every misleading or untrue statement purporting to be a statement by or contained in what purports to be a copy of or extract from a report or valuation of an expert, that it fairly represented the statement, or was a correct and fair copy of or extract from the report or valuation. Provided that the director, person named as director, promoter or person who authorised the issue of the prospectus shall be liable to pay compensation as aforesaid if it is proved that he had no reasonable ground to believe that the person making the statement, report or valuation was competent to make it
- (c) with respect to misleading or untrue statement purporting to be a statement made by an official person or contained in what purports to be a copy of or extract from a public official document, that it was a correct and fair representation of the statement or copy of or extract from the document , or unless it is proved—
- (i) that having consented to become a director of the company he withdrew his consent before the issue of the prospectus, and that it was issued without his authority or consent, or
- (ii) that, after the issue of the prospectus and before allotment thereunder he on becoming aware of any misleading or untrue statement therein, withdrew his consent thereto, and gave reasonable public notice of the withdrawal and of the reason therefor

(2) Where a company existing at the commencement of this Act has issued shares or debentures and for the purpose of obtaining further capital by subscriptions for shares or debentures issues a prospectus, a director shall not be liable in respect of any statement therein unless he has authorised the issue of the prospectus or has adopted or ratified it

(3) Where the prospectus contains the name of a person as a director of the company, or as having agreed to become a director thereof, and he has not consented to become a director, or has withdrawn his consent before the issue of the prospectus and has not authorised or consented to the issue thereof, the directors of the company except any without whose knowledge or consent the prospectus was issued, and any other person who authorised the issue thereof, shall be liable to indemnify the person named as aforesaid against all damages, costs and expenses to which he may be made liable by reason of his name having been inserted in the prospectus, or in defending himself against any suit or legal proceedings brought against him in respect thereof

(4) Every person who, by reason of his being a director or named as a director, or as having agreed to become a director, or of his having authorised the issue of the prospectus, becomes liable to make any payment under this section, may recover contribution, as in cases of contract, from any other person who, if sued separately would have been liable to make the same payment, unless the person who has become so liable was, and that other person was not, guilty of fraudulent misrepresentation.

(5) For the purposes of this section—

(a) the expression "promoter" means a promoter who was a party to the preparation of the prospectus, or the portion thereof containing the misleading or untrue statement, but does not include any person by reason of his acting in a professional capacity for persons engaged in procuring the formation of the company;

(b) the expression "expert" includes engineer, valuer, accountant and any other person whose profession gives authority to a statement made by him

Notes—A prospectus set forth that the company had been formed for the purpose of acquiring a concession to work and sell rubber in a certain district, and inter alia, stated, 'L reports as follows,' and then quoted the report. L's name had been already mentioned as a director of the company. The prospectus also stated that the statements in it were based mainly upon L's report and further stated that no portion of the price would be paid until the directors received an independent report substantially confirming L's report. A shareholder in the company brought an action to have his name taken off the register, averring that the statements quoted in the report were untrue and that he had subscribed in reliance on their truth. Held that the averment was relevant. Muir v Rio Grande Rubber Estates, (1913) A C 853. Where a company issues a prospectus inviting applications for shares on the faith of a bona fide statement of fact expressly based on the bona fide report of an expert the accuracy of those statements is prima facie the basis of the contract. If the company does not intend to contract on that basis, it must dissociate itself from the report in such clear and unambiguous terms as to warn intending applicants that it does not vouch for the accuracy of the report or any statement based thereon. Otherwise, if the report proves to be inaccurate any material inaccuracy in the company's statements, though based thereon, will be a ground for rescission. In such a case, calculations of future profits based on the date of the report may amount to a material misrepresentation of fact. In Re Pataya Rubber, and Produce

101. (1) No allotment shall be made of any share capital of a company offered to the public for subscription, unless the following conditions have been complied with, Restriction as to allotment namely :—

- (a) the amount (if any) fixed by the memorandum or articles and named in the prospectus as the minimum subscription upon which the directors may proceed to allotment ; or
- (b) if no amount is so fixed and named then the whole amount of the share capital so offered for subscription, has been subscribed, and the sum payable on application for the amount so fixed and named or for the whole amount offered for subscription, has been paid to and received in cash by the company.

(2) The amount so fixed and named and the whole amount aforesaid shall be reckoned exclusively of any amount payable otherwise than in cash, and is in this Act referred to as the minimum subscription

(3) The amount payable on application on each share shall not be less than five per cent of the nominal amount of the share

(4) If the conditions aforesaid have not been complied with on the expiration of one hundred and twenty days after the first issue of the prospectus, all money received from applicants for shares shall be forthwith repaid to them without interest and if any such money is not so repaid within one hundred and thirty days after the issue of the prospectus, the directors of the company shall be jointly and severally liable to repay that money with interest at the rate of seven per cent per annum from the expiration of the one hundred and thirtieth day. Provided that a director shall not be liable if he proves that the loss of the money was not due to any misconduct or negligence on his part

(5) Any condition requiring or binding any applicant for shares to waive compliance with any requirement of this section shall be void

(6) This section, except subsection (3) thereof, shall not apply to any allotment of shares subsequent to the first allotment of shares offered to the public for subscription

(7) In the case of the first allotment of share capital payable in cash of a company which does not issue any invitation to the public to subscribe for its shares no allotment shall be made unless the minimum subscription (that is to say)—

(a) the amount (if any) fixed by the memorandum or articles and named in the statement in lieu of prospectus as the minimum subscription upon which the directors may proceed to allotment, or

(b) if no amount is so fixed and named the whole amount of the share capital other than that issued or agreed to be issued as fully or partly paid up otherwise than in cash

has been subscribed and an amount not less than five per cent of the nominal amount of each share payable in cash has been paid to and received by the company

(8) Subsection (7) shall not apply to a private company or to a company which has allotted any shares or debentures before the commencement of this Act

Notes.—This section applies to a company's first allotment of shares offered to the public subscription. Once the company has allotted shares offered for public subscription it will not if it makes a further issue have again to comply with the section, nor does the section touch or affect in any way (except by subsection 7) an allotment of shares not offered for public subscription e.g. offered to a limited circle of friends or relations. Palmer's Company Law p. 108. The section except subsection (3) requiring the amount payable on application to be not less than 5 per cent of the nominal amount of each share does not apply to any allotment of shares subsequent to the first allotment of shares offered to the public for subscription. Studels p. 213.

A person who has taken shares on the strength of an offer made before incorporation of the company can not avail himself of these provisions to void his contract. Shewell v Combined Incandescent Co (1907) 23 T L R 482. Where the company has issued two prospectuses one of which does and the other does not comply with these provisions a person who has taken shares on the strength of the first

102 (1) An allotment made by a company to an applicant in contravention of the provisions of section 101 shall be voidable at the instance of the applicant within one month after the holding of the statutory meeting of the company and not later and shall be so voidable notwithstanding that the company is in course of being wound up.

(2) If any director of a company knowingly contravenes or permits or authorises the contravention of any of the provisions of section 101 with respect to allotment, he shall be liable to compensate the company and the allottee respectively for any loss, damages or costs which the company or the allottee may have sustained or incurred thereby. Provided that proceedings to recover any such loss, damages or costs shall not be commenced after the expiration of two years from the date of the allotment.

One month—It is not necessary that the actual proceeding should be commenced within the month—it is enough if notice of intention to avoid the allotment is given within the month—and proceedings are taken as soon as it is clear that the directors of the company do not intend to remove the applicant's name. National Motor Mail Coach Co (1908) 2 Ch 228

Voidable—After allotment the remedy under section 101 is gone and a company cannot avoid a wrongful allotment unless the allottee demands that they shall do so. Burton v Bevan (1908) 2 Ch 240

Knowingly—Knowingly signifies knowledge of facts and not of the law. Knowledge after allotment is not enough. Burton v Bevan (1908) 2 Ch 240

Compensation—The amount of such compensation will probably not be limited to the amount by which the shares applied for fall short of the minimum subscription. Daily Events Co, Times Newspaper and Murch, 1911 cited in Stiebel p 224

Invalid allotment—Vide 1 Lah L J 1, 51 Ind Cas 812. Secretaries can allot shares if so empowered. 26 Ind Cas 349=16 M L T 538. Restrictions on commencement of business—103 (1) A company shall not commence any business or exercise any borrowing powers unless—

- (a) shares held subject to the payment of the whole amount thereof in cash have been allotted to an amount not less in the whole than the minimum subscription, and
- (b) every director of the company has paid to the company on each of the shares taken or contracted to be taken by him, and for which he is liable to pay in cash, a proportion equal to the proportion payable on application and allotment on the shares offered for public subscription or, in the case of a company which does not issue a prospectus inviting the public to subscribe for its shares, on the shares payable in cash, and
- (c) there has been filed with the registrar a duly verified declaration by the secretary or one of the directors, in the prescribed form, that the aforesaid conditions have been complied with, and
- (d) in the case of a company which does not issue a prospectus inviting the public to subscribe for its shares, there has been filed with the registrar a statement in lieu of prospectus.

(2) The registrar shall, on the filing of a duly verified declaration in accordance with the provisions of this section certify that the company is entitled to commence business and that certificate shall be conclusive evidence that the company is so entitled.

(b) in the case of shares not offered to the public for subscription, disclosed in the statement in lieu of prospectus or in a statement in the prescribed form signed in like manner as a statement in lieu of prospectus and filed with the registrar and, where a circular or notice, not being a prospectus inviting subscription for the shares is issued, also disclosed in that circular or notice

(2) Save as aforesaid, no company shall apply any of its shares or capital money either directly or indirectly in payment of any commission, discount or allowance, to any person in consideration of his subscribing or agreeing to subscribe, whether absolutely or conditionally, for any shares of the company, or procuring, or agreeing to procure subscriptions whether absolute or conditional for any shares in the company whether the shares or money be so applied by being added to the purchase money of any property acquired by the company or to the contract price of any work to be executed for the company, or the money be paid out of the nominal purchase money or contract price, or otherwise.

(3) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of any company to pay such brokerage as it has heretofore been lawful for a company to pay, and a vendor to, promoter of, or other person who receives payment in money or shares from, a company shall have and shall be deemed always to have had power to apply any part of the money or shares so received in payment of any commission the payment of which, if made directly by the company, would have been legal under this section.

Notes—This section only applies to the under writing of shares and not of debentures as there was never any legal objection to the under writing of debentures but sums paid for under writing of shares or debentures, or allowed by way of discount in respect of debentures or so much thereof as has not been written off must be stated in every balance sheet of the company, until the whole amount has been written off—Stedtel 518c.

Payment of interest out of Capital

107 Where any shares of a company are issued for the purpose of raising money to defray the expenses of the construction of any works or buildings or the provision of any plant which cannot be made profitable for a lengthened period, the company may pay interest on so much of that share capital as is for the time being paid up for the period and subject to the conditions and restrictions in this section mentioned, and of the cost of construction of the work or

(1) no such payment, shall be made unless the same is authorised by the articles or by special resolution,

(2) no such payment, whether authorised by the articles or by special resolution, shall be made without the previous sanction of the Local Government, which sanction shall be conclusive evidence for the purpose of this section that the shares of the company, in respect of which such sanction is given, have been issued for a purpose specified in this section,

- (3) before sanctioning any such payment, the Local Government may, at the expense of the company, appoint a person to inquire and report to such Local Government as to the circumstances of the case, and may, before making the appointment, require the company to give security for the payment of the costs of the inquiry,
- (4) the payment shall be made only for such period as may be determined by the Local Govt beyond the close of the financial year in which the works are completed or the plant provided,
- (5) the rate of interest shall in no case exceed four per cent per annum or such lower rate as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, prescribe,
- (6) the payment of the interest shall not operate as a reduction of the amount paid up on the shares in respect of which it is paid,
- (7) the accounts of the company shall show the share capital on which, and the rate at which, interest has been paid out of capital during the period to which the accounts relate;
- (8) nothing in this section shall affect any company to which the Indian Railways Companies Act, 1895,* or the Indian Tramways Act, 1902† applies

Debentures—I cannot find" said Chitty J in Levey v Abercorns Co (1888), 37 Ch D 264, "any precise legal definition of the term (i.e. debenture). It is not either in law or commerce a strictly technical term, or what is called a term of art. It is very wide term, but it is now generally used to signify a security for money called on the face of a debenture, and providing for the payment of a specified sum—say £100—at a fixed date, with the interest meantime half yearly. It usually gives a charge by way of security, and in most cases is expressed to be one of the series of like debentures. (4) The re-issue of a debenture or the issue of another debenture in its place under the power by this section given to or deemed to have been possessed by, a company, whether the re-issue or issue was made before or after the commencement of this Act, shall be treated as the issue of a new debenture for the purposes of stamp-duty, but it shall not be so treated for the purposes of any provision limiting the amount or number of debentures to be issued any of a debenture re-issued, may give the debenture without payment of the stamp duty or any penalty in respect thereof, unless he had notice or, but for his negligence, might have discovered, that the debenture was not duly stamped, but in any such case the company shall be liable to pay the proper stamp-duty and penalty

(5) Nothing in this section shall prejudice—

- (a) the operation of any decree or order of a Court of competent jurisdiction pronounced or made before the twenty fifth day of February, 1910, as between the parties to the proceedings in which the decree or order was made, and any appeal from any such decree or order shall be decided as if this Act had not been passed, or

(3) Every company shall at each annual general meeting appoint an auditor or auditors to hold office until the next annual general meeting

(4) If an appointment of an auditor is not made at an annual general meeting the Local Government may, on the application of any member of the company, appoint an auditor of the company for the current year and fix the remuneration to be paid to him by the company for his services

(5) The following person, that is to say,

(i) a director or officer of the company,

(ii) a partner of such director or officer, and

(iii) in the case of a company, other than a private company, any person in the employment of such director or officer, shall not be appointed auditors of the company

(6) A person, other than a retiring auditor, shall not be capable of being appointed auditor at an annual general meeting unless notice of an intention to nominate that person to the office of auditor has been given by a member of the company to the company not less than fourteen days before such annual general meeting and the company shall send a copy of any such notice to the retiring auditor, and shall give notice thereof to its members either by advertisement or in any other mode allowed by the articles not less than seven days before the annual general meeting

Provided that, if after notice of the intention to nominate an auditor has been given to the company, an annual general meeting is called for a date fourteen days or less after the notice has been given, the requirements of this section as to time in respect of such a notice shall be deemed to have been satisfied, and the notice to be sent or given by the company may, instead of being sent or given within the time required by this section, be sent or given at the same time as the notice of the annual general meeting

(7) The first auditors of the company may be appointed by the directors before the statutory meeting and if so appointed shall hold office until the first annual general meeting unless previously removed by a resolution of the members of the company in general meeting, in which case such members at that meeting may appoint auditors

(8) The directors may fill any casual vacancy in the office of auditor, but while any such vacancy continues, the surviving or continuing auditor or auditors (if any) may act

(9) The remuneration of the auditors of a company shall be fixed by the company in general meeting, except that the remuneration of any auditors appointed before the statutory meeting or to fill any casual vacancy, may be fixed by the directors

Notes—In a general meeting the shareholders of a company appointed certain persons as auditors who acted as auditors, signed the balance-sheet as auditors and were shown as auditors on the front page of the Directors' report issued to the shareholders. But it was subsequently discovered that their appointment was irregular in as much as the general meeting in which they were appointed was without proper quorum. Helf, in a proceeding against the auditors under section 214 for misfeasance as auditors, that they were not only de facto auditors and also de jure auditors and that no irregularity in their appointment could avail them. *Stuart Smith v. 145 (1) Every auditor of a company shall have right of access at all times to the books and accounts and vouchers of the company, and shall be entitled to require from the directors and officers of the company such information and explanation as may be necessary for the performance of the duties of the auditors

(2) The auditor shall make a report to the members of the company on the accounts examined by them, and on every balance sheet laid before the company in general meeting during their tenure of office, and the report shall state—

- (a) whether or not they have obtained all the information and explanations they have required, and
- (b) whether, in their opinion, the balance sheet referred to in the report is drawn up in conformity with the law, and
- (c) whether such balance sheet exhibits a true and correct view of the state of the company's affairs according to the best of their information and the explanations given to them, and as shown by the books of the company.

(3) In the case of a banking company, if the company has branch banks beyond the limits of India, it shall be sufficient if the auditor is allowed access to such copies of and extracts from the books and accounts of any such branch as have been transmitted to the head office of the company in British India.

Sub section (1)—This sub section gives the auditors right of access to the books of the company and to make enquiries for his report—vide Stuebel p 408

Winding up by Court

Circumstances in which company may be wound up by Court— 162. A company may be wound up by the Court—

- (i) if the company has by special resolution resolved that the company be wound up by the Court,
- (ii) if default is made in filing the statutory report or in holding the statutory meeting
- (iii) if the company does not commence its business within a year from its incorporation, or suspends its business for a whole year
- (iv) if the number of members is reduced, in the case of a private company, below two or, in the case of any other company, below seven
- (v) if the company is unable to pay its debts:
- (vi) if the Court is of opinion that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up

186 (1) The Court may, at any time make an order in respect of the debts by contributory being set in manner directed by the order, any money due from him or from the estate of the person whom he represents to the company exclusive of any money payable by him or the estate by virtue of any call in pursuance of his Act

(2) The Court in making such an order may, in the case of an unlimited company, allow to the contributory by way of set off any money due to him or to the estate which he represents from the company on any independent dealing or contract with the company, but not any money due to him as a member of the company in respect of any dividend or profit, and may, in the case of a limited company, make to any director whose liability is unlimited or to his estate the like allowance

Provided that, in the case of any company, whether limited or unlimited, when all the creditors are paid in full, any money due on any account whatever to a contributory from the company may be allowed to him by way of set off against any subsequent call.

Notes.—Subsection (1) does nothing more than create a new machinery for bringing in debts due by a contributory to the company. It does not create new liabilities or confer new rights. It merely provides a summary procedure for enforcing existing legal liabilities. The words "at any time," in the sub-section do not authorize the Court to order the payment of a statute barred debt, they can only mean at any time in the course of liquidation proceedings, commencing from the date of the order Sri Narain v Liquidator Union Bank 74 Ind Cas 600 The Court has upon a summary application presented to it the power to direct the contributory to pay not only all moneys due from him as a member; but also any debt due from him to the company. The jurisdiction is permissible, but when a case is made out for the exercise thereof, it should not be declined unless very cogent reasons to the contrary are shown The Lahore Bank v Kidar Nath, 31 Ind Cas 746 The summary procedure under this section can be resorted to recover money from a firm, by selecting from among the partners one who is a contributory and calling upon him to liquidate the whole debt 4 Lah 239=77 Ind Cas 338; see also 53 Ind Cas 653, 7 Ind Cas 724, 3 Lah 382, 3 Lah L J 80 An order of payment made under section 186 must be regarded as a decree and enforced as such Tharya Rim v Popat Rim, 47 Ind Cas 997 A representative of a share-holder is liable to contribute to the extent of the assets in his hands 10 Pat 249=193 Pat 44

187 (1) The Court may, at any time after making a winding up order, and either before or after it has ascertained the sufficiency of the assets of the company, make calls on and order payment thereof by all or any of the contributories for the time being settled on the list of the contributories to the extent of their liability, for payment of any money which the Court considers necessary to satisfy the debts and liabilities of the company, and the costs, charges and expenses of winding up, and for the adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves

(a) In making the call the Court may take into consideration the probability that some of the contributories may partly or wholly fail to pay the call.

Extraordinary Powers of Court

195 (1) The Court may, after it has made a winding up order, summon before it any officer of the company or person known or suspected to have in his possession any property of the company, or supposed to be indebted to the company or any person whom the Court deems capable of giving information concerning the trade, dealings, affairs or property of the company

(2) The Court may examine him on oath concerning the same, either by words of mouth or on written interrogatories, and may reduce his answers to writing and require him to sign them

(3) The Court may require him to produce any documents in his custody or power relating to the company, but, where he claims any lien on documents produced by him, the production shall be without prejudice to that lien, and the Court shall have jurisdiction in the winding up to determine all questions relating to that lien

(4) If any person so summoned after being tendered a reasonable sum for his expenses refuses to come before the Court at the time appointed not having a lawful impediment (made known to the Court at the time of its sitting and allowed by it) the Court may cause him to be apprehended and brought before the Court for examination

(2) The official liquidator shall take part in the examination, and for that purpose may if specially authorised by the Court in that behalf, employ such legal assistance as may be sanctioned by the Court.

(3) Any creditor or contributory may also take part in the examination either personally or by any person entitled to appear before the Court.

(4) The Court may put such questions to the person examined as the Court thinks fit.

(5) The person examined shall be examined on oath, and shall answer all such questions as the Court may put or allow to be put to him.

(6) A person ordered to be examined under this section may at his own cost employ any person entitled to appear before the Court, who shall be at liberty to put to him such questions as the Court may deem just for the purpose of enabling him to explain or qualify any answers given by him: Provided that if he is in the opinion of the Court exculpated from any charges made or suggested against him the Court may allow him such costs as in its discretion it may think fit.

(7) Notes of the examination shall be taken down in writing and shall be read over to or by, and signed by, the person examined and may thereafter be used in evidence against him in civil proceedings, and shall be open to the inspection of any creditor or contributory at all reasonable times.

(8) The Court may, if it thinks fit, adjourn the examination from time to time.

(9) An examination under this section may, if the Court so directs, and subject to any rules in this behalf, be held before any District Judge or before any officer of the High Court, being an Official Referee, Master, Registrar or Deputy Registrar, and the powers of the Court under this section as to the conduct of the examination, but not as to costs, may be exercised by the person before whom the examination is held.

Clause (1)—The Court cannot order the official receiver to pay the costs of the examination personally John Twiddle & Co (1910) 2 K B 697. A summons to discharge an order for a public examination can be taken out as soon as the person to be examined knows of the order Stuebel p 1019 citing, Trust and Investment Corporation of South Africa (1892) 3 Ch 332. Before public examination is ordered the official liquidator must make out a prima facie case of fraud (1896) A C 146; (1893) 2 Q B 385, (1873) 1 Ch 210, (1879) 1 Ch 215 at p 231. #### Enforcement of and Appeal from Orders

199 All orders made by a Court under this Act may be enforced in the same manner in which decrees of such Court made in any suit pending therein may be enforced

Notes — Where applications are made to the High Court for directing the District Courts concerned to enforce the payment orders made by another High Court in the matter of the winding up of the company, the proper procedure as indicated by the conjoint effect of this section and next section is that the order that is filed should be treated in the same manner as a decree passed by the High Court in which it is filed and transferred for execution to the respective District Courts concerned and it is not competent for the High Court to authorize the official liquidator to apply to the District Courts concerned for enforcing the order under s 164 A I R 1927 Mad 271

200 Any order made by a Court for or in the course of the winding up of a company shall be enforced in any place in British India other than that in which such Court is situate, by the Court that would have had jurisdiction in respect of such company if the registered office of the company had been situate at such other place and in the same manner in all respects, as if such order had been made by the Court that is hereby required to enforce the same

Notes — Sections 200 and 201 must be held to be subject to the special provisions of R 16 of O 21 of the C P Code and therefore a transferee of an order under section 186 of the Companies Act must in the first instance, apply to the Court which made the order. Thirja Ram v Popat Ram, 92 P R 1918 = 168 P W R 1918 = 47 Ind Cas 997

201 Where any order made by one Court is to be enforced by another Court, a certified copy of the order so made shall be produced to the proper officer of the Court required to enforce the same, and the production of such certified copy shall be sufficient evidence of such order having been made; and thereupon the last mentioned Court shall take the requisite steps in the matter for enforcing the order, in the same manner as if it were the order of the Court enforcing the same.

Notes—An order for the wind Chief Court, and under section 164 were taken in the Court of the District in districts within the jurisdiction of A to enforce these orders. Held that the High Court had jurisdiction to enforce the orders by proceedings in execution before itself, or to authorise the Official Liquidator, to apply to the various District Courts in respect of each of the persons against whom orders for contribution had been passed, and that as the balance of convenience as in favour of the latter course, the Official Liquidator was authorised to proceed accordingly. In the matter of the National Insurance and Banking Company, Ltd., 54 Ind Cas 384.

202 Re hearings of, and appeals from, any order or decision made or given in the matter of the winding up of a company by the Court may be had in the same manner and subject to the same conditions in and subject to which appeals may be had from any order or decision of the same Court in cases within its ordinary jurisdiction.

Notes—An order of District Judge dismissing objections to attachment is not appealable 1927 Lah 282. Notice of an appeal from any order or decision made in the winding up of a company should be given within three weeks after the order complained of unless such time is extended by the Court of appeal 22 M 291, see to set aside an ex-liquidatory Judge sanctioned by the predecessor of the Judge, and consequently no appeal from such an order can be entertained. Ghansham Das v Hindusthan Bank, 1 Lah 73=55 Ind Cas 928. Consequences of voluntary winding up 207 The following consequences shall ensue on the voluntary winding up of a company.—

- (i) the assets of the company shall be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu, and, subject thereto, shall, unless the articles otherwise provide be distributed among the
- (ii) the directors of the company, and may fix the remuneration to be paid to him or them;
- (iii) on the appointment of a liquidator all the powers of the directors shall cease, except so far as the company in general meeting, or the liquidator, sanctions the continuance thereof;
- (iv) the liquidator may, without the sanction of the Court, exercise all powers by this Act given to the official liquidator in a winding up by the Court;
- (v) the liquidator may exercise the powers of the Court under this Act of settling a list of contributories, and of making calls, and shall pay the debts of the company, and adjust the rights of the contributories among themselves;
- (vi) the list of contributories shall be prima facie evidence of the liability of the persons named therein to be contributories,
- (vii) when several liquidators are appointed, every power hereby given may be exercised by such one or more of them as may be determined by the company at the time of their appointment, or in default of such determination by any number not less than two,
- (viii) if from any cause whatever there is no liquidator acting, the Court may, on the application of a contributory, appoint a liquidator, and
- (ix) the Court may, on cause shown, remove a liquidator, and appoint another liquidator

208 (1) The liquidator in a voluntary winding up shall, within twenty-one days after his appointment, file with the registrar Notice by liquidator of his appointment a notice of his appointment in the form prescribed.

(2) If the liquidator fails to comply with the requirements of this section, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues

Notes—Where a person is appointed a liquidator of any company however imperfect he may consider his appointment to be, if he is nominally a liquidator and

209 (1) Every liquidator, appointed by a company in a voluntary winding up shall, within seven days from his appointment, send notice by post to all persons who appear to him to be creditors of the company that a meeting of the creditors of the company will be held on a date, not being less than twenty one days nor more than one month after his appointment, and at a place and hour, to be specified in the notice, and shall also advertise notice and once at least in some news the registered office or principal

(2) At the meeting to be held in pursuance of the foregoing provisions of this section the creditors shall determine whether an application shall be made to the Court for the appointment of any person as liquidator in the place of, or jointly with, the liquidator appointed by the company and, if the creditors so resolve, an application may be made accordingly to the Court at any time not later than fourteen days after the date of the meeting, by any creditor appointed for the purpose at the meeting

Provided that the Court may by order at any time, extend the time for making an application under this subsection for such period as the Court thinks proper

(3) may make an order either for the removal of some company and for the appointment of some other person to act as liquidator jointly with the liquidator appointed by the company, or such other order as, having regard to the interests of the creditors and contributories of the company, may seem just

(4) The Court shall make such order as to the costs of the application as it may think fit, and if it is of opinion, that having regard to the interests of the creditors, in the liquidation, there were reasonable grounds for the application, may order the costs of the application to be paid out of the assets of the company, notwithstanding that the application is dismissed or otherwise disposed of adversely to the applicant

Notes—By an extraordinary resolution it was resolved that a company be wound up voluntarily and that a person (A) be appointed as liquidator. Subsequently it was resolved that another person (B) be appointed as liquidator. The liquidation was made under the joint liquidator, Held, that the appointment of B as joint liquidator by the company does not give him any rights whatsoever and no order can be made ratifying B's appointment with retrospective effect. Held also that, when an application is made to the Court for the appointment of a person as liquidator, the Court may make such order as to the costs of the application as it may think fit, and if it is of opinion, that having regard to the interests of the creditors, in the liquidation, there were reasonable grounds for the application, may order the costs of the application to be paid out of the assets of the company, notwithstanding that the application is dismissed or otherwise disposed of adversely to the applicant.

213 (1) Where a company is proposed to be, or is in course of being wound up altogether voluntarily, and the whole or part of its business or property is proposed to be transferred or sold to another company (in this section called the transferee company) the liquidator of the first mentioned company (in this section called the transferor company) may, with the sanction of a special resolution of that company conferring either a general authority on the liquidator or an authority in respect of any particular arrangement, receive, in compensation or part compensation for the transfer or sale, shares policies or other like interest in the transferee company for distribution among the members of the transferor company, or may enter into any other arrangement whereby the members of the transferor company may, in lieu of receiving cash, shares, policies or other like interests, or in addition thereto, participate in the profits of, or receive any other benefit from, the transferee company.

(2) Any sale or arrangement in pursuance of this section shall be binding on the members of the transferor company.

(3) If any member of the transferor company who did not vote in favour of the special resolution at either of the meetings held for passing and confirming the same expresses his dissent therefrom in writing addressed to the liquidator, and left at the registered office of the company within seven days after the confirmation of the special resolution, he may require the liquidator either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect or to purchase his interest at a price to be determined by agreement or by arbitration in manner hereinafter provided.

(4) If the liquidator elects to purchase the member's interest, the purchase-money must be paid before the company is dissolved, and be raised by the liquidator in such manner as may be determined by special resolution.

(5) A special resolution shall not be invalid for the purposes of this section by reason that it is passed before or concurrently with a resolution for winding up the company, or for appointing liquidators, but if an order is made within a year for winding up the company by or subject to the supervision of the Court, the special resolution shall not be valid unless sanctioned by the Court.

Special resolution.—A clause for winding up the company or for the appointment of liquidators may form part of a special resolution and be passed along with it. 224 (1) Where an order is made for a winding up subject to supervision the Court may by the same or any subsequent order appoint any additional liquidator

(2) A liquidator appointed by the Court under this section shall have the same powers be subject to the same obligations and in all respects stand in the same position as if he had been appointed by the company

(3) The Court may remove any liquidator so appointed by the Court, or any liquidator continued under the supervision order and fill any vacancy occasioned by the removal or by death or resignation

225 (1) Where an order is made for a winding up subject to supervision, the liquidator may subject to any restrictions imposed by the Court exercise all his powers without the sanction or intervention of the Court in the same manner as if the company were being wound up altogether voluntarily

(2) Except as provided in subsection (1) and save for the purposes of section 196, any order made by the Court for a winding up subject to the supervision of the Court shall for all purposes including the staying of suits and other proceedings, be deemed to be an order of the Court for winding up the company by the Court and shall confer full authority on the Court to make calls, or to enforce calls made by the liquidators and to exercise all other powers which it might have exercised if an order had been made for winding up the company altogether by the Court

(3) In the construction of the provisions whereby the Court is empowered to direct any act or thing to be done to or in favour of the official liquidator, the expression "official liquidator" shall be deemed to mean the liquidator conducting the winding up subject to the supervision of the Court.

Notes—The commencement of the voluntary liquidation is from the time of the passing of the special resolution Hornby's Case, (1868) 37 L J Ch 929, Daw's Case, (1868) 6 Eq 232. This is also the time when a voluntary liquidation under supervision commences even where a petition has been presented and a provisional liquidator has been appointed at an earlier date Steele p 1264 citing (1889) 40 C D 361, (1888) 39 C D 306, (1885) 31 C D 78, (1868) 3 Ch 20, (1870) 11 Eq 478, (1868) 6 Eq 496.

226 Where an order has been made for the winding up of a company subject to supervision, and an order is afterwards made for winding up by the Court, the Court may, by the last mentioned order or by any subsequent order, appoint the voluntary liquidators or any of them, either provisionally or permanently, and either with or without the addition of any other person, to be official liquidator in the winding up by the Court.

Notes—The Court can make a compulsory order after it has made a supervision order in a very strong case London and Mediterranean Bank (1866) 13 L T 153, Orrel Colliery and Fire Brick Co (1879) W N 105, United Service Co (1868) 7 Eq 76, New Oriental Bank Corporation (1892) 3 Ch 563. - (b) all wages or salary of any clerk or servant in respect of service rendered to the company within the two months next before the said date, not exceeding one thousand rupees for each clerk or servant, and

(c) all wages of any labourer or workman, not exceeding five hundred rupees for each, whether payable for time or piece work, in respect of services rendered to the company within the two months next before the said date.

(2) The foregoing debts—

(a) rank equally among themselves and be paid in full, unless the assets are insufficient to meet them, in which case they shall abate in equal proportion, and

(b) so far as the assets of the company available for payment of general creditors are insufficient to meet them, have priority over the claims of holders of debentures under any floating charge created by the company, and be paid accordingly out of any property comprised in or subject to that charge.

(3) Subject to the retention of such sums as may be necessary for the costs and expenses of the winding up, the foregoing debts shall be discharged forthwith so far as the assets are sufficient to meet them.

(4) In the event of a landlord or other person distraining or having distrained on any goods or effects of the company within three months next before the date of a winding up order the debts to which priority is given by this section shall be a first charge on the goods or effects so distrained on, or the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Provided that in respect of any money paid under any such charge, the landlord or other person shall have the same rights of priority as the person to whom the payment is made.

(5) The date hereinafter in this section referred to is—

(a) in the case of a company ordered to be wound up compulsorily which had not previously commenced to be wound up voluntarily, the date of the winding up order, and

(b) in any other case, the date of the commencement of the winding up.

(2) In the case of creditors, regard shall be had to the value of each creditor's debt.

(3) In the case of contributories regard shall be had to the number of votes conferred on each contributory by the articles.

Notes—Under this section the Court has power to direct meetings of creditors or contributories in the directions as to the manner in which they are to be held. (1893) W. N. 128. 110 For the purposes of this Part the expression "unregistered company" shall not include a Railway company incorporated by Act of Parliament or by an Act of the Governor-General in Council, nor a company registered under the Indian Railway Companies Act, 1866* or under any Act repealed thereby or under the Indian Companies Act 1832† or under this Act but, save as aforesaid, shall include any partnership association or company consisting of more than seven members

Includes. The companies at the date of petition should consist of more than seven members Bolton Benefit Loan Society (1879) 12 C. D. 679. In New York and Continental Line (1909) 54 Sol. J. 117 it was suggested by Edy J. that under the English Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908 it was not necessary for an unregistered company to have more than seven members in order to enable it to be wound up. It will be observed that this section merely includes the companies herein named under the court can section, if present at the date of the

271 (1) Subject to the provisions of this Part, any unregistered company may be wound up under this act, and all the provisions of this Act, with respect to winding up shall apply to an unregistered company, with the following exceptions and additions —

(i) an unregistered company, shall for the purpose of determining the Court having jurisdiction in the matter of the winding up, be deemed to be registered in the province where its principal place of business is situate or if it has a principal place of business situate in more than one province then in each province where it has a principal place of business, and the principal place of business situate in that province in which proceedings are being instituted shall, for all the purposes of the winding up, be deemed to be the registered office of the company,

(ii) no unregistered company shall be wound up under this Act voluntarily or subject to supervision,

(iii) the circumstances in which an unregistered company may be wound up are as follows (that is to say) —

(a) if the company is dissolved or has ceased to carry on business or is carrying on business only for the purpose of winding up its affairs

(b) if the company is unable to pay its debts

(c) if the Court is of opinion that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up,

(iv) an unregistered company shall for the purposes of the Act, be deemed to be unable to pay its debts —

(a) if a creditor by assignment or otherwise to whom the company is indebted in a sum exceeding five hundred rupees then due, has served on the company, by leaving at its principal place of business, or by delivering to the secretary, or some director, manager or principal officer of the company, or by otherwise serving in such manner as the Court may approve or direct, a demand under his hand requiring the company to pay the sum so due, and the company has for three weeks after the service of the demand neglected to pay the sum, or to secure or compound for it to the satisfaction of the creditor,

(b) If any suit or other legal proceeding has been instituted against any member for any debt or demand due or claimed to be due from the company or from him in his character of member, and notice in writing of the institution of the suit or other legal proceeding having been served on the company by leaving the same at its principal place of business or by delivering it to the secretary, or some director, manager or principal officer of the company or by otherwise serving the same in such manner as the Court may approve or direct, the company has not within ten days after service of the notice paid, secured or compounded for the debt or demand, or procured the suit or other legal proceeding to be stayed or indemnified the defendant to his reasonable satisfaction against the suit or other legal proceeding, and against all costs, damages and expenses to be incurred by him by reason of the same,

(c) if, execution or other process issued on a decree or order obtained in any Court in favour of a creditor against the company, or any member thereof as such, proved authorised to be sued as nominal defendant on behalf of the company is returned unsatisfied, and

(d) if it is otherwise proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the company is unable to pay its debts

(2) Nothing in this Part shall affect the operation of any enactment which provides for any partnership association or company being wound up, or being wound up as a company or as an unregistered company, under any enactment repealed by this Act, except that references in any such first mentioned enactment to any such repealed enactment shall be read as references to the corresponding provision (if any) of this Act

273 The provision of this Act with respect to staying and restraining suits and legal proceedings against a company at any time after the presentation of a petition for winding up and before the making of a winding up order shall in the case of an unregistered company, where the application to stay or restrain is by a creditor, extend to suits and legal proceedings against any contributory of the company

Notes—In a compulsory winding up the onus lies upon the person who wishes to show that the action should be continued notwithstanding the winding up Currie v Consolidated Kent Collieries Corporation (1905) 1 K B 134 cited in Stiebel p 900

274 Where an order has been made for winding up a company, no suit or proceedings shall be instituted against any contributory of the company in respect of any debt of the company except by leave of the Court, and subject to such terms as the Court may impose

Notes—This section is applicable to action against a contributory as such and not to an action by a holder of promissory notes though they had been given as security for advances to the company South of France Pottery Works Syndicate (1877) 37 L T 260

275. If any unregistered company has no power to sue and be sued in a common name, or if for any reason it appears expedient, the Court may, by the winding up order, or by any subsequent order, direct that all or any part of the property, moveable or immoveable, including all interests and rights in, to and out of property, moveable and immoveable, and including obligations and actionable claims as may belong to the company or to trustees on its behalf, is to vest in the official liquidator by his official name, and thereupon the property or the part thereof specified in the order shall vest accordingly, and the official liquidator may, after giving such indemnity (if any) as the Court may direct, bring or defend in his official name any suit or other legal proceeding relating to that property, or necessary to be brought or defended for the purposes of effectually winding up the company and recovering its property

SCHEDULES.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

TABLE A

REGULATIONS FOR MANAGEMENT OF A COMPANY.

Preliminary.

1. In these regulations, unless the context otherwise requires, expressions defined in Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any statutory modification thereof in force at the date at which these regulations become binding on the company, shall have the meanings so defined; and words importing the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa, and words importing the masculine gender shall include females, and words importing persons shall include bodies corporate

Business.

2 The directors shall have regard to the restrictions on the commencement of business imposed by section 103 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, if, and so far as, those restrictions are binding upon the company.

( Notes —Section 282 makes provision for untrue declaration under section 103. 46 A. 218

Shares.

3 Subject to the provisions, if any, in that behalf of the memorandum of association of the company, and without prejudice to any special rights previously conferred on the holders of existing shares in the company, any share in the company may be issued with such preferred, deferred or other special rights, or such restrictions, whether in regard to dividend, voting, return of share capital, or otherwise, as the company may from time to time by special resolution determine

Notes —Very frequently the different classes, conferring different shares conferring a preferential dividend after a specified dividend (Will v. United Lankat Plantations, 50 Jor J 3/4) and either with or without a right to repayment of capital on a winding up in priority to other shares. In such last

Vol 1 p 802.

4. If at any time the share capital is divided into different classes of shares, the rights attached to any class (unless otherwise provided by the terms of issue of the shares of that class) may be varied with the consent in writing of the holders of three fourths of the issued shares of that class, or with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution passed at a separate general meeting of the holders of the shares of the class the provisions to these regulations relating and apply, but so that the necessary and holding or representing by proxy one-third of the issued shares of the class

5 No share shall be offered to the public for subscription except upon the terms that the amount payable on application shall be at least five per cent of the nominal amount of the share, and the director shall as regards any allotment of shares, duly comply with such of the provisions of sections 101 and 104

Ch 305 In allotting shares the directors must exercise the powers with good faith
(1903) 2 Ch 506, (1920) 1 Ch 77

6 Every person whose name is entered as a member in the register of members shall without payment, be entitled to a certificate under the common seal of the company specifying the share or shares held by him and the amount paid up thereon provided that, in respect of a share or a shares held jointly by several persons, the company shall not be bound to issue more than one certificate and delivery of a certificate for a share to one of several joint holders shall be sufficient delivery to all

7 If a share certificate is defaced, lost or destroyed it may be renewed on payment of such fee if any, not exceeding eight annas, and on such terms, if any, as to evidence and indemnity as the directors think fit.

8 No part of the funds of the company shall be employed in the purchase of, or in loans upon the security of the company's shares

Lien

9. The company shall have a lien on every share (not being a fully paid share) for all moneys (whether presently payable or not) called or payable at a fixed time in respect of that share and the company shall also have a lien on all shares (other than fully paid shares) standing registered in the name of a single person for all moneys presently payable by him or his estate to the company but the directors may at any time declare any share to be wholly or in part exempt from the provisions of this clause The company's lien if any, on a share shall extend to all dividends payable thereon

Notes—This lien has priority over mortgagee of the shares Borlan's Trust v Steel Brothers (1901) 1 Ch 279 see also New London and Brazilian Bank v Brockbank 21 Ch D 30, Brilford v Briggs 12 A C 29 The transferee takes subject to a lien the company had against his transferor Stiebel p 274

10 The company may sell, in such manner as the director thinks fit any shares on which the company has lien but no sale shall be made unless some sum in respect of which the lien exists is presently payable, nor until the expiration of fourteen days after a notice in writing stating and demanding payment of such part of amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable, has been given to the registered holder for the time being of the share or the person entitled by reason of his death or insolvency to the share

11 The proceeds of the sale shall be applied in payment of such part of the amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable, and the residue shall (subject to a like lien for sums not presently payable as existed upon the shares prior to the sale) be paid to the person entitled to the shares at the date of the sale The purchaser shall be registered as the holder of the shares, and he shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase money, nor shall his title to the shares be affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the proceedings in reference to the sale

Calls on Shares

12 The directors may from time to time make calls upon the members in respect of any moneys unpaid on their shares, provided that no call shall exceed one fourth of the nominal amount of the share, or be payable at less than one month from the last call, and each member shall (subject to receiving at least fourteen days' notice specifying the time or times of payments) pay to the company at the time or the times so specified the amount called on his shares

Notes—The articles of association usually contain provisions for enabling calls to be made, and not infrequently provide that not more than a certain amount is to be called up at a time and that a specified period must lapse between two calls. An article authorising calls to be made from time to time but providing that no calls shall exceed a specified sum, will not prevent two calls each of which calls are payable at different dates Stiebel p 261 citing Universal Corporation v Hughes (1909) 5 C 1434. A director not validly appointed but who does not know of his defective appointment can make a call Dawson v African Co (1898) 1 Ch 6 British Asbestors v Boyd (1903) 2 Ch 439, Boschok Proprietary v Fuke (1906) 1 Ch 148, Transport Co v Schomberg (1905) 21 T L R 305, British Medical v Jones (1896) 74 L T 384. But a person who has not been appointed a director at all cannot make a call Tyne Mutual Steamship Co v Brown (1896) 74 L T 283 Gordon Gally etc v Co McLister, (1876) 1 A C 39

13 The joint holders of a share shall be jointly and severally liable to pay all calls in respect thereof

14 If sum called in respect of a share is not paid before or on the day appointed for payment thereof, the person from whom the sum is due shall pay interest upon the sum at the rate of five per cent per annum from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment, but the directors shall be at liberty to waive payment of that interest wholly or in part

Notes—This provision does not ing up Welsh

Eq 184

15 The provisions of these interest shall apply in the case of non payment of any sum which, by the terms of issue of a share, becomes payable at a fixed time, whether on account of the amount of the share or by way of premium, as if the same had become payable by virtue of a call duly made and notified

16 The directors may make arrangements on the issue of shares for a difference between the holders in the amount of calls to be paid and in the times of payment

17 The directors may if they think fit receive from any member willing to advance the same all or any part of the moneys uncalled and unpaid upon any shares held by him and upon all or any of the moneys so advanced may (until the same would but for such advance become presently payable) pay interest at such rate (not exceeding without the sanction of the company in general meeting six per cent) as may be agreed upon between the member paying the sum in advance and the directors

Notes—The powers given under this article is perfectly valid Lock v Queensland Co, (1896) A C 461 (1896) 1 Ch 397 Dale v Martin (1883) 11 L R 371. When such a payment has been made the relation of debtor and creditor and not that of company and share holder exists qua such payment between the company and the member making the payment Stiebel p 263 citing Lock v Queensland Co, (1896) A C 461

Transfer and transmission of shares

18 The instrument of transfer of any share in the company shall be executed both by the transferor and transferee, and the transferor shall be deemed to remain holder of the share until the name of the transferee is entered in the register of members in respect thereof

Notes—Where the article is silent on the subject the transfer is to be made in accordance with the custom of the company Morino v Cise (1867) 2 Ch 596

19 Shares in the company shall be transferred in the following form or in any usual or common form which the directors shall approve

I, A B of _____ in consideration of the sum of rupees _____ paid to me by C D of _____ (hereinafter called "the said transferee"), do hereby transfer to the said transferee the share (or shares) numbered in the undertaking called the _____ Company, Limited, to hold unto the said transferee, his executors, administrators and assigns, subject to the several conditions on which I held the same at the time of the execution thereof, and I, the said transferee do hereby agree to take the said share (or shares) subject to the conditions aforesaid. As witness our hands the day of _____

Notes—This article is directory only. (1904) 1 Ch 815

20 The directors may decline to register any transfer of shares, not being fully paid shares, to a person of whom they do not approve, and may also decline to register any transfer of shares on which the company has a lien. The transfers during the fourteen days of the next general meeting in each year of the transfer unless—

(a) a fee not exceeding two rupees is paid to the company in respect thereof, and

(b) the instrument of transfer is accompanied by the certificate of the shares to which it relates, and such other evidence as the directors may reasonably require to show the right of the transferor to make the transfer

Notes—Where the deed of transfer is not properly stamped a company may refuse registration. Maynard v Consolidated Kent Collieries (1903) 1 K B 331. Where the articles restrict transfers by a person indebted to the company it was held that it must be read with the articles giving the company a lien. Stockton Malleable Iron Co, (1876) 2 Ch D 101 cited in Stiebel p 285

21 The executors or administrators of a deceased sole holder of a share shall be the only persons recognized by the company as having any title to the share. In the case of a share registered in the names of two or more holders, the survivors, or survivor or the executors or administrators of the deceased survivor, shall be the only persons recognised by the company as having any title to the share of an article to the contrary personal representatives will have the same right of property conferred on them by the shares as would the member through whom they claim. James v Buchanan & Co, Syndicate, (1896) 1 Ch 456, New Zealand

22. Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death or insolvency of a member shall, upon such evidence being produced as may from time to time, be required by the directors, have the right, either to be registered as a member in respect of the share or, instead of being registered himself to make such transfer of the share as the deceased or insolvent person could have made. In either case he shall have the same right to decline or to accept the transfer of the share in the case of a transfer of the share with or insolvency.

Notes—Transfers of share or other interest of a deceased member of a company which are made by his personal representative will bind the personal representative

tative is not himself a member, he valid as if he had been a member at the time of the execution of the transfer Stichel p 284

23. A person becoming entitled to a share by reason of the death or insolvency of the holder shall be entitled to the same dividends and other advantages to which he would be entitled if he were the registered holder of the share, except that he shall not, before being registered as a member in respect of the share, be entitled in respect of it to exercise any right conferred by membership in relation to meetings of the company

Forfeiture of shares.

24. If a member fails to pay any call or instalment of a call on the day appointed for payment thereof, the directors may at any time thereafter during such time as any part of such call or instalment remains unpaid, serve a notice on him requiring payment so much of the call or instalment as is unpaid, together with any interest which may have accrued,

Notes—The power of forfeiture is not implied and as such the articles of association must make provision for the same Clarke v Hurst, 6 H L C 633; Barton's Case (1859) 4 De G & J 46 A prospective notice that shares will be forfeited without any further resolution of the directors, be directors is necessary 130 Ind Cas 534 = A I R 1931 Pat 44 A valid default are conditions precedent to and necessary for a valid forfeiture 125 Ind Cas 419

25. The notice shall fourteen days from the (required by the notice is payment at or before the time appointed, the shares in respect of which the call was made will be liable to be forfeited

26. If the requirements of any such notice as aforesaid are not complied with, any share in respect of which the notice has been given may at any time thereafter, before the payment required by the notice has been made, be forfeited by a resolution of the directors to that effect

Notes—The provisions of the articles dealing with forfeiture must be strictly followed as any irregularity in the forfeiture (Johnson v Lytle Agency 5 Ch D 687) or even in a call out of which the forfeiture arose (Bottomley's Case, 16 Ch D 631, Gordon Gullely v McLister (1876) 1 A C 39) may void the whole forfeiture Stichel p 276

27. A forfeited share may be sold or otherwise disposed of on such terms and in such manner as the directors think fit, and at any time before a sale or disposition the forfeiture may be cancelled on such terms as the directors think fit.

Notes—The directors have right to sell forfeited shares at a discount Rimmell's Case, 50 L J Ch 827 = 45 L T 431 Where the balance of unpaid shares has been paid by the defaulting share holder a person who has purchased forfeited shares is discharged from all calls due prior to his purchase Randit Gold Co (1904) 2 Ch 468 The company may issue forfeited shares as paid up to the extent of the money actually paid on them before forfeiture 68 I J Ch 11, 50 L J Ch 827

cease if and when the company receives payment of all or the nominal amount of the shares

Notes—A forfeited share holder ceases to be a member but his liability for money payable to the company at the time of forfeiture in respect of the forfeited share including any interest on arrears of calls remains Stocken's Case (1868) 3 Ch 412, Ladies Dress Association v Pulbrook (1900) 2 Q B 276. On forfeiture of share the share holder ceases to have any liability for future calls and becomes liable for unpaid calls as a debtor of the company 110 Ind Cas 33. If the forfeiture takes place within 1 year from the winding up such a forfeited share holder is placed in the B list of the contributories Creyke's Case, (1870) 5 Ch 63, Marshall v Glamorgan (1868) 7 Eq 129, Biles Case (1878) 8 Ch D 334.

29 A duly verified declaration in writing that the declarant is a director of the company, and that a share in the company has been duly forfeited on a date stated in the declaration, shall be conclusive evidence of the facts therein stated as against all persons claiming to be entitled to the share, and that declaration, and the receipt of the company for the consideration, if any, given for the share on the sale or disposition thereof, shall constitute a good title to the share, and the person to whom the share is sold or disposed of shall be registered as the holder of the share and shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase money (if any,) nor shall his title to the share be affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the proceedings in reference to the forfeiture, sale or disposal of the share.

Notes—It is usual for the articles to provide that where forfeited shares have been sold the purchaser shall have good title and the right of the person aggrieved shall be in damages against the company only. Such a right may be enforced in winding up New Chile Gold Mining Co (1890) 45 Ch D 398 cited in Stiebel p 276.

30 The provisions of these regulations as to forfeiture shall apply in the case of non payment of any sum which by the terms of issue of a share becomes payable at a fixed time, whether on account of the amount of the share, or by way of premium as if the same had been payable by virtue of a call duly made and notified.

Conversion of shares into stock

31 The directors may with the sanction of the company previously given in general meeting, convert any paid up shares into stock and may with the like sanction re-convert any stock into paid up shares of any denomination.

32 The holders of stock may transfer the same or any part thereof, in the same manner, and subject to the same regulations as and subject to which the shares from which the stock arose might previously to conversion have been transferred, or as near thereto as circumstances admit, but the directors may from time to time fix the minimum amount of stock transferable and restrict or forbid the transfer of fractions of that minimum but the minimum shall not exceed the nominal amount of the shares from which the stock arose.

33 The holders of stock shall, according to the amount of the stock held by them, have the same rights, privileges and advantages as regards dividends, voting at meetings of the company, and other matters, as if they held the shares from which the stock arose, but no such privilege or advantage (except participation in the dividends and profits of the company) shall be conferred by any such aliquot part of stock as would not, if existing in shares, have conferred that privilege or advantage.

34 Such of the regulations of the company (other than those relating to share-warrants) as are applicable to paid up shares shall apply to stock, and the words "share" and "shareholder" therein shall include "stock" and "stockholder".

Share-warrants

35 The company may issue share-warrants, and accordingly the directors may, in their discretion with respect to any share which is fully paid up or applicable

ie share, and authentic time to time require as receiving the certificate the warrant and such ice as the directors may from time to time require issue under the company's seal a warrant, duly stamped, stating that the bearer of the warrant is entitled to the shares therein specified, and may provide by coupons or otherwise for the payment of dividends, or other moneys, on the shares included in the warrant

36 A share warrant shall entitle the bearer to the shares included in it, and the share shall be transferred by the delivery of the share warrant, and the provisions of the regulations of the company with respect to transfer and transmission of shares shall not apply thereto

37 The bearer of a share warrant shall, on surrender of the warrant to the company for cancellation, and on payment of such sum as the directors may from time to time prescribe, be entitled to have his name entered as a member in the register of members in respect of the shares included in the warrant

38 The bearer of a share warrant may at any time deposit the warrant at the office of the company, and so long as the warrant remains so deposited, the depositor shall have the same right of signing a requisition for calling a meeting of the company and of attending and voting and exercising the other privileges of a member at any meeting held after the expiration of two clear days from the time of deposit as if his name were inserted in the register of members as the holder of the shares included in the deposited warrant. Not more than one person shall be recognised as depositor of the share warrant. The company shall on two days' written notice return the deposited share warrant to the depositor

39 Subject as herein otherwise expressly provided, no person shall as bearer of a share warrant sign a requisition for calling a meeting of the company or attend or vote or exercise any other privilege of a member at a meeting of the company or be entitled to receive any notices from the company but the bearer of share warrant shall be entitled in other respect to the same privileges and advantages as if he were named in the register of members as the holder of the shares included in the warrant, and he shall be a member of the company

40 The directors may from time to time make rules as to the terms on which (if they shall think fit) a new share warrant or coupon may be issued by way of renewal in case of defacement, loss or destruction

Alteration of Capital

41 The directors may, with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution of the Company, increase the share capital by such sum to be divided into shares of such amount, as the resolution shall prescribe

Notes—The exact increase proposed must be given in the notice (1916) 2 Ch 57

42 Subject to any direction to the contrary that may be given by the resolution sanctioning the increase of share capital all new shares shall, before issue, be offered to such persons as at the date of the offer are entitled to receive notices from the company of general meetings in proportion as nearly as the circumstances which they are entitled to receive notices of the shares offered, and limit to be deemed to be deemed, except of an intimation from the person to whom the offer is made that he declines to accept the shares offered, the directors may dispose of the same in such manner as they think most beneficial to the company. The directors may likewise so dispose of any new shares which (by reason of the ratio which the new shares bear to shares held by persons entitled to an offer of new shares) cannot, in the opinion of the directors, be conveniently offered under this article.

Notes—The article is mandatory and not merely directory. 3 Bom H C O C J 9. Under this clause the representatives of a deceased member are entitled to the shares to which the deceased would have been entitled. James v Buena Ventura (1896) 1 Ch 456, Allen v Gold Reefs of West Africa, (1900) 1 Ch 656. the provisions with reference to the payment of calls, lien, transfer, transmission, forfeiture and otherwise as to the shares in the original share capital.

44 The company may, by special resolution —

- (a) consolidate and divide its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares,
- (b) by sub division of its existing shares or any of them, divide the whole or any part of its share capital into shares of smaller amount than is fixed by the memorandum of association, subject, nevertheless, to the provisions of paragraph (d) of sub section (1) of section 50 of the Indian Companies Act 1913
- (c) cancel any shares which, at the date of the passing of the resolution, have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person,
- (d) reduce its share capital in any manner and with and subject to, any incident authorised, and consent required, by law

General Meetings

45 The statutory general meeting of the company shall be held within the period required by section 77 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913

every year at such time (not less than 14 days before the date of the last preceding general meeting of the company in general meeting, or, if the company has not held a general meeting since its incorporation, at such time as the directors shall appoint). In default of a general meeting being so held, a general meeting shall be held in the month next following, and may be called by any two members in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings are to be called by the directors.

Notes—The directors can call such a meeting. (1875) 10 Q B 327 at p 339. A secretary has no power to call such a meeting. (1900) 2 Ch 230, (1901) 2 Ch 431. Only the directors of the company in general meeting can authorise the name of a company being used in any proceedings. La Compagnie de Maynil v Whitey (1896) 1 Ch 788.

called ordinary meetings,

it, call an extraordinary meeting. It may also be called on such conditions as provided by the articles at any time there are not less than a quorum, any director or any two members of the company may call an extraordinary general meeting in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings may be called by the directors.

Proceedings at General Meeting

49 Fourteen days' notice at the least (exclusive of the day on which the notice is served or deemed to be served, but inclusive of the day for which notice is given) specifying the place, the day and the hour of meeting and, in case of special business, the general nature of that business, shall be given in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such other manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, to such persons as are, under the regulations of the company, entitled to receive such notices from the company, but the non receipt of the notice by any member shall not invalidate the proceedings at any general meeting

Notes—Notice cannot be given that a meeting will be held on certain contingencies happening Alexander v Simpson, (1889) 43 Ch D 139, Espuola Land and Cattle Co (1900) 48 W R 684 As to what will amount to a sufficient statement of the general nature of business, vide Betts v Macnaghten, (1910) 1 Ch 430

50 All business shall be deemed special that is transacted at an extraordinary meeting, and all that is transacted at an ordinary meeting with the exception of the consideration of the accounts, balance sheets, directors and auditors, the election of directors of those retiring by rotation, and the fixing of the remuneration of the auditors

51 No business shall be transacted at any general meeting unless a quorum of members is present at the time when the meeting proceeds to business, save as herein otherwise provided, three members personally present shall be a quorum

Notes—In the article it is generally provided that a certain number of members is to constitute a quorum Cf Hemans v Hotchkiss Ordnance Co (1899) 1 Ch 11. If there is no provision the majority can bind the company Rev v Lario 1775) 1 Cowp 248 Rev v Monday (1877) 2 Cowp 530, Grindley v Bayler (1793) 1 Bos & Lull 229 Even where the articles do not make any provision for quorum 10 members must be present to constitute a meeting Sharp v Dimes Q B D 76 Sanitary Carbon Co (1877) W N 223 In computing quorum the proxies are not counted Cf 23 W P 40, Eng 1900 W N 274 (Eng)

52 If within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present the meeting if called upon the requisition of members shall be dissolved in any other case it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week at the same time and place and, if at the adjourned meeting a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting the members present shall be a quorum

Notes—At the adjourned meeting if a quorum is not present within half an hour the members whose number must be two or more shall be a quorum One member can not constitute a quorum, 2 Q B D 26 In counting quorum members not entitled to vote are not counted Henderson v Lenthal & Co (1884) 21 Reuss 674

53 The chairman if any, of the board of directors shall preside as chairman at every general meeting of the company,

Notes—The duties of the Chairman are to preserve order, and to take care that proceedings are conducted in a proper manner and that the sense of the meeting is properly ascertained with regard to any question that is before the meeting Stiebel p 377 citing National Dwelling Society v Sykes (1894) 3 Ch 159

54 If there is no such chairman or if at any meeting, he is not present within fifteen minutes after the time appointed for holding the meeting or is unwilling to act as chairman, the members present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman

Notes—In such a case the elected chairman is not bound to vacate the chair even if the permanent chairman comes afterwards Blackwell p 18

55 The chairman may, with the consent of any meeting at which a quorum is present (and shall if so directed by the meeting), adjourn the meeting from time to time and from place to place, but no business shall be transacted at any adjourned meeting other than the business left

ournment or of the business to be

Notes—The chairman cannot adjourn the meeting at his own pleasure. If he does so the meeting can elect its own chairman. National Dwelling Society v Sykes (1894) 3 Ch 159. The chairman can adjourn where it is impossible to conduct the meeting. Reg v. D Oyley (1840) 12 A & E 139. See v. Chester (1834) 1 A & E 342. But the chairman is not bound to adjourn the meeting even where the majority desires it. Salisbury Gold Mining Co v Hathorn, (1893) A C 268.

56 At any general meeting a resolution put to the vote of the meeting shall be decided on a show of hands, unless a poll is (before or on the declaration of the result of the show of hands) demanded by at least three members, and, unless a poll is so demanded, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has, on a show of hands been carried, or carried unanimously or by a particular majority or lost and an entry to that effect in the book of the proceedings of the company shall be conclusive evidence of the fact without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of or against, that resolution.

Notes—It is the chairman's business to ascertain the sense of the meeting. This

57. If a poll is duly demanded, it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of the poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the meeting at which the poll was demanded.

Notes—See Re Mound (1836) 5 A & E 865, Reg v. Wimbledon Local Board (1882) 8 Q B D 1, 1875) 32 L T 558. A holder of proxy may not demand such a poll. See Re Mound (1836) 5 A & E 865, Reg v. Wimbledon Local Board (1882) 8 Q B D 1, 1875) 32 L T 558. The effect of such demand is to do away with the proceeding of show of hands altogether. Anthony v Segar (1789) 1 Hag C C 13, Reg v. St Matthew, Bethnal Green (1875) 37 L T 558. See Re Mound (1836) 5 A & E 865, Reg v. Wimbledon Local Board (1882) 8 Q B D 1, 1875) 32 L T 558. Such a demand is not binding on the seconded.

See Re Mound (1836) 5 A & E 865, Reg v. Wimbledon Local Board (1882) 8 Q B D 1, 1875) 32 L T 558.

58 In the case of an equality of votes whether on a show of hands or on a poll the chairman of the meeting at which the show of hands takes place, or at which the poll is demanded, shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

Notes—Where there is no provision in the Articles of Association on the chairman is not entitled to a casting vote. See Re Mound (1836) 5 A & E 865, Reg v. Wimbledon Local Board (1882) 8 Q B D 1, 1875) 32 L T 558. In the case of Association any proposal or resolution of Association may be proposed or resolved on by a majority of the members of Association. See Re Mound (1836) 5 A & E 865, Reg v. Wimbledon Local Board (1882) 8 Q B D 1, 1875) 32 L T 558. The chairman is entitled to a casting vote in the case of an equality of votes.

59 A poll demanded on the election of a chairman or on a question of adjournment shall be taken forthwith. A poll demanded on any other question shall be taken at such time as the chairman of the meeting directs.

Notes—The right time to demand a poll would seem to be immediately after of hands. Campbell v Mound (1836) 5 A & E 120. When and where the poll is to be held. Reg v Chester (1834) 1 A & E 342, Chillington.

Votes of Members

60 On a show of hands every member present in person shall have one vote. On a poll every member shall have one vote for each share of which he is the holder.

Notes—Each member present will have one vote. Harbury Bridge Coal Iron, and Waggon Co (1879) 11 Ch D 109. A holder of a proxy who is not a member can only vote if he is entitled to vote as such (1897) 1 Ch 1, (1885) 52 L T 846. On a poll the number of votes each member has and also proxies will be counted. Not infrequently scrutineers are appointed but the result of the poll should be declared by the chairman. Stibel p 395 citing Indian Zoedone Co (1884) 26 Ch D 70.

61 In the case of joint holders the vote of the senior who tenders a vote whether in person or by proxy shall be accepted to the exclusion of the votes of the other joint holders, and for this purpose seniority shall be determined by the order in which the names stand in the register of members.

62 A member of unsound mind or in respect of whom an order has been made by any court having jurisdiction in lunacy, may vote, whether on a show of hands or on a poll by his committee or other legal guardian, and any such committee or guardian may on a poll vote by proxy.

63 No member shall be entitled to vote, at any general meeting unless all calls or other sums presently payable by him in respect of shares in the company have been paid.

64 On a poll votes may be given either personally or by proxy. Provided that no company shall vote by proxy as long as a resolution of its directors in accordance with the provisions of section 80 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, is in force.

Notes—No member is entitled to vote by proxy unless the Articles of Association authorize him to do so. Harbury v Phillips (1883) 23 Ch D 14.

is a corp
or attorney so authorised. No person shall act as a proxy unless either he is entitled on his own behalf to be present and vote at the meeting at which he acts as proxy, or he has been appointed to act at that meeting as proxy for a corporation.

Notes—Prima facie there is no right to vote by proxy, for the common law does not recognize any such mode of voting, but the Articles create a right for it is extremely inconvenient that a member, at a great distance, should be obliged personally to attend. Law p 172. Where the Articles make provision, signed in the presence of a witness in such a case, signature in the presence of a witness is necessary. Harben v Phillips 23 Ch D 32. A proxy can not attest his own appointment. Ex parte Cullen, (1861) 2 Q B 151.

66 The instrument appointing a proxy and the power of attorney or other authority (if any), under which it is signed or a notarially certified copy of that power or authority shall be deposited at the registered office of the company not less than seventy-two hours before the time for holding the meeting at which the person named in the instrument proposes to vote, and in default the instrument of proxy shall not be treated as valid.

Notes—The Articles very commonly require instruments of proxy to be deposited with the company a certain number of hours before the meeting. Palmer's Company Law p 173. The presence of a member in a meeting after appointing a proxy does not cancel the proxy but if he votes at the meeting the proxy will be revoked. Knight v Bulkley, 5 Jur N S 817.

67 An instrument appointing a proxy may be in the following form, or in any other form which the directors shall approve —

Company Limited.

"I of _____ in the district of _____, being a member of the _____ Company, Limited, hereby appoint _____ of _____ as my proxy to vote for me and on my behalf at the (ordinary or extraordinary, as the case may be) general meeting of the company to be held on the _____ day of _____ and at any adjournment thereof
Signed this _____ day of _____

Notes—This article does not require a proxy to be attested. Under the Indian Stamp Act a proxy requires 2 annas stamp, vide Art 53 of the Stamp Act. In England a proxy for a single meeting requires a 10 s stamp. Vide se. See also (1915) 32 T L R 183. A document filled up before it is deposited or used. Ernest v Loma Co (1897) 1 Ch 1. The signatories must put their initials, or signatures and dates on the stamp. 71 L J Ch 755.

Directors

68 The number of the directors and the names of the first directors shall be determined in writing by a majority of the subscribers of the memorandum of association.

Notes—A company can not act in its own person, for it has no person. Per Lord Cairns, in Ferguson v Wilson L R 2 Ch 89. So directors are appointed to carry the business on behalf of the company. A limited company may be a director. Bulaway's, Market Co (1907) 2 Ch 458. "First directors are usually named in the Articles of Association, if there are any, but not uncommonly the Articles, instead of naming them, contain a power for the subscribers, or the majority of them by writing, to appoint them." Palmer's Company Law p 111. The majority of the subscribers may appoint the first directors either by signing the appointment or by _____ of the subscribers are present _____ of the subscribers _____ notice of such a meeting must _____ 69 The remuneration of the directors shall from time to time be determined by the company in general meeting.

Notes—Prima facie _____ Imperial & Co, 3 Bar _____ Royal Aqueduct in S _____ Articles make provision _____ (1921) 1 K B 423 even where there is no provision in the Articles or where it has not been determined _____ But where there is no provision in the Articles or where it has not been determined _____

Notes—The qualification is required in order to give a director a personal interest in the holding. Archers Case, (1832) 1 Ch 377. The effect of such a clause is, that the director is under an obligation to acquire the requisite qualification in some way or other, whether from the company, or by transfer from a friend.

Powers and duties of Directors

71 The business of the company shall be managed by the directors who may pay all expenses incurred in getting up and registering the company, and may exercise all such powers of the company as are not, by the Indian Companies Act 1913 or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force or by these articles required to be exercised by the company in general meeting, subject nevertheless to any regulation of these articles, to the provisions of the said Act, and to such regulations being not inconsistent with the aforesaid regulations or provisions as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, but no regulation made by the company in general meeting shall invalidate any prior act of the directors which would have been valid if that regulation had not been made

Notes—The articles generally give to the directors a number of specific powers scattered up and down the various clauses but in addition to these specific powers there is almost always inserted a general clause on the lines of this article providing that the directors may exercise all the powers of the company not by the articles or by statute required to be exercised by the company in general meeting Palmer's Company Law p 189 Such a general vesting of powers in the directors is valid and effective and all that has to be done in considering whether any particular transaction is within the powers conferred by such a clause on the directors, is to search the articles and the Acts to see whether there is any express provision requiring for that transaction the authority of the company in general meeting and, if there is no such provision the directors must be treated as competent to carry out the transaction. Ibid p 189 see also L R 6 Ch 83, 20 Eq 339, (1891) 1 Ch 173 45 L J Ch 437

72 The directors may from time to time appoint one or more of their body to the office of managing director or manager for such term, and at such remuneration (whether by way of salary or commission or participation in profits or partly in one way and partly in another) as they may think fit, and a director so appointed shall not while holding that office be subject to retirement by rotation or taken into account in determining the rotation, of retirement of directors but his appointment shall be subject to determination ipso facto if he ceases from any cause to be a director or if the company in general meeting resolve that his tenure of the office of managing director or manager be determined

73 The amount for the time being remaining undischarged of moneys borrowed by the company (otherwise than by the issue of shares) shall be a charge on the issued share capital of the company in general meeting

Notes—Under article 71 the directors have got the power of borrowing on a not extraordinary of their

74 The directors shall, duly comply with the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force, and in particular with the provisions in regard to the registration of the particulars of mortgages and charge, affecting the property of the company or created by it, and to keeping a register of the directors, and to sending to the registrar an annual list of members, and a summary of particulars relating thereto and notice of any consolidation or increase of share capital, or conversion of shares into stock, and copies of special resolutions and a copy of the register of directors and notifications of any changes therein

75 The directors shall cause minutes to be made in books provided for the purpose—

- (a) of _____
- (b) of _____ of the directors

(c) of all resolutions and proceedings at all meetings of the company and, of the directors, and of committees of directors, and every director present at any meeting of directors or committee of directors shall sign his name in a book to be kept for that purpose

The Seal

76 The seal of the company shall not be affixed to any instrument except by the authority of a resolution of the board of directors and in the presence of at least two directors and of the secretary or such other person as the directors may appoint for the purpose, and those two directors and secretary or other person as aforesaid shall sign every instrument to which the seal of the company is so affixed in their presence

Notes—The affixing of seals by some unauthorised person does not bind the company Mayor etc, of Merchants of the Staple v Bank of England (1887) 21 Q B D 160, Ruben v Great Fingall (1906) A C 439

Disqualifications of Directors

77 The office of directors shall be vacated if the director—

- (a) ceases to be a director by virtue of section 85 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or
- (b) holds or any partner of his or the firm of which he is a member holds any other office of profit under the company except that of managing director or manager, or
- (c) is adjudged insolvent, or
- (d) is found lunatic or becomes of unsound mind, or
- (e) is concerned or participates in the profits of any contract with the company, or
- (f) is punished with imprisonment for a term exceeding six months

Provided, however, that no director shall vacate his office by reason of his being a member of any company which has entered into contracts with, or done any work for, the company of which he is director, but a director shall not vote in respect of any such contract or work, and if he does so vote, his vote shall not be counted

Notes—On the happening of the event a director vacates his office automatically Bodriga Co, Limited (1904) 1 Ch 276 Even apart from such a provision it is well settled that the acceptance by a director of an incompatible office vacates his directorship Palmer's Campine Lda p 182 citing Milner v Toller 2 T L R 81, Lafles v Cumberland and West Co, 6 H & N 451, Iron Ship Co v Plant L R 3 C P 484

Clause (c)—Becomes insolvent after election (1896) 1 Ch 6, see also 10 H L Cas 404, Sissons v S 54 S J 802

Rotation of Directors

75 At the first ordinary meeting of the company, the whole of the directors shall retire from office, and at the ordinary meeting in every subsequent year, one third of the directors for the time being, or, if their number is not three or a multiple of three, then the number nearest to one third shall retire from office.

79 The directors to retire in every year shall be those who have been longest in office since their last election, but is between persons who become directors on the same day those to retire shall (unless they otherwise agree among themselves) be determined by lot

80 A retiring director shall be eligible for re-election

81 The company at the general meeting at which a director retires in manner aforesaid may fill up the vacated office by electing a person thereto.

82 If at any meeting at the places of the vacating directors shall stand adjourned till the same day place, and, if at the adjourned meeting the places of the vacating directors are not filled up the vacating directors or such of them as have not had their places filled up shall be deemed to have been re-elected at the adjourned meeting

63. The company may from time to time in general meeting increase or reduce the number of directors, and may also determine in what rotation the increased or reduced number is to go out of office

84 Any casual vacancy occurring on the board of directors may be filled up by the directors but the person so chosen shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director

*of the company if the vacancy still continues Yusuf v Camell (1887) 21 Ch D 183 Zennell Bros v Lewis, (1904) 20 T L R 1

85 The directors shall have power at any time and from time to time, to appoint a person as an additional director who shall retire from office at the next following ordinary general meeting, but shall be eligible for election by the company at that meeting as an additional director.

86 The company may by extraordinary resolution remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead the person so appointed shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director

Notes—Even in the absence of such an article from a company's Articles of Association, a director can be removed for misconduct. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch D 339, Cf Kayshe v Alturas Gold Co (1888) 36 W R 495. By this article a director can be removed by an extraordinary resolution. In such a case the delinquent director is not entitled to a hearing in his defence. Dean v Bennett (1876) 6 Ch 489, Hayman v Governors of Rugby School (1874) 18 Eq 28. He is also not entitled to any notice. African Association v Allen, (1910) 1 K B 306.

Proceedings of Directors

87 The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn Questions arising at any case of an equality of A director may, and time summon a meeting

Notes—Notice of the meeting must be given to all directors 42 Ch D 160 But such notice can be dispensed with where they are travelling abroad 59 L J Ch 591.

The directors need not meet where they agree to a particular course Ex parte Kennedy (1890) 44 Ch D 472, Hollows v Fernie (1867) 3 Eq 520

Vote—Every director has got one vote. Vide 11 Ch D 197 Any question raised in a meeting is to be decided by a majority of votes Rex v Vaxlo, (1715) 1 Cowp 248 Rex v Monday, (1877) 3 Cowp 530, Perry v Shipway, (1859) 1 Giff 1 Wilkinson v Malin, (1832) 2 Tyr 544

Meeting—The meeting of the directors should be duly convened, (1900) 2 Ch 230 (1867) 2 Exch 158 Apart from any special powers the directors can only act as a board D Arcy v The Tamar, etc Railway, (1867) L R 2 Ex 158, Howards' Case, (1866) 1 Ch, 561, John Morby Building Co v Carras (1891) 2 Ch 386 There need not be any fixed place of meeting All that is required is that they must meet in some place where all may be present and may have the opportunity of expressing their assent or dissent D Arcy v The Tamar etc, (1867) L R 2 Ex 158

Casting vote—A chairman who is not duly appointed can not give a casting vote (1920) 1 Ir Rep 107

88 The quorum necessary for the transaction of the business of the directors may be fixed by the directors and unless so fixed shall (when the number of directors exceeds three) be three

Notes—In the absence of any provision for quorum in the Articles the majority of the whole number of directors can act York Trustees v Willows (1882) 8 Q B D 685 But it is doubtful whether any smaller number can act Portuguese Consolidated Copper Co, Steele's Case (1889) 42 Ch D 160 In a meeting where the quorum is present all the authorities powers and discretions vested in the directors can be exercised A bare quorum is capable to act and bind the company at a meeting duly convened with proper notice given to the other directors, at which therefore all the other directors may, if they please, be present (1888) 38 Ch D 546 at p 550 Even a quorum of one can be fixed (1916) 2 Ch 142 The directors who are not competent to vote are not counted (1904) 1 Ch 32, (1903) 19 T L R 602

89 The continuing directors may act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body, but, if and so long as their number is reduced below the number fixed by or pursuant to the regulations of the company as the necessary quorum of directors, the continuing directors may act for the purpose of increasing the number of directors to that number, or of summoning a general meeting of the company, but for no other purpose.

Notes—Where the Articles provide that the directors are not to be less than a certain number in such a case, if there are not the minimum number of directors the directors cannot act Kirk v Bell, (1851) 16 Q B 290, Faire v Phillipart, (1888) 58 L T 325, British Empire Match Co 59 L T 291 It is usual for the Articles to provide that the continuing directors may act and the scope of such an Article will not be limited to cases where there are more than the minimum number or to allowing continuing directors to act in ordinary business only 23 Ch D 413, 8 Q B D 685 (1900) 2 Ch 272, (1901) 1 Ch 115 An Article allowing continuing directors to act does not apply where there never has been the minimum number of directors Sly Spring and Co (1911) 2 Ch 40 But the better opinion seems to be that under such an Article continuing directors can act though there are too few of them to form a quorum (1900) 2 Ch 272, (1901) 1 Ch (115), 8 Q B D 685, 23 Ch D 413 Stiebel v 361

90 The directors may elect a chairman of their meetings and determine the period for which he is to hold office, but if no such chairman is elected, or if at any meeting the chairman is not present within five minutes after the time appointed for holding the same, the directors present may choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting

Chairman—The duties of the Chairman are to preserve order, and to take care that proceedings are conducted in a proper manner, and that the sense of the meeting is properly ascertained with regard to any question that is before the meeting

National Dwellings Society v Sykes, (1894) 3 Ch 159

91 The directors may delegate any of their powers to committees consisting of such member or members of their body as they think fit, any committee so "formed"* shall, in the exercise of the powers so delegated, conform to any regulations that may be imposed on them by the directors

Case (1874) 9 Ch 691

92. A committee may elect a chairman of their meetings, if no such chairman is elected or if at any meeting the chairman is not present within five minutes after the time appointed for holding the same, the members present may choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting

93 A committee may meet and adjourn as they think proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present, and in case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote

94 All acts done by any meeting of the directors or of a committee of directors or by any person acting as a director, shall, notwithstanding, that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director

Notes — The defects must be discovered after the act. Murray v Bush, (1873) L R 6 H L 37. British Asbestos Co v Boyd, (1903) 2 Ch 439. The word qualified must not be read in the narrow sense of qualification as regards holding the qualification shares. British Asbestos Co v Boyd (1903) 2 Ch 439 but see 42 Ch D 160. When a dividend is declared and becomes payable it is a debt. Re Severn & ut Co (1895) 1 Ch 559. Until declaration the shareholder can not sue for it (1907) 1 Ch 353

Dividends and Reserve

95 The company in general meeting may declare dividends, but no dividends shall exceed the amount recommended by the directors

Notes — Dividends are generally declared in a general meeting. 25 Ch D 752. Dividends may only be paid in cash (1889) 42 Ch D 635 at p 645 (1867) 3 Ch App 46. Where payment by post is authorized the company is absolved from its liability by sending the dividend warrant by post. Thurwall v Great Northern Railway, (1901) 2 K B 509

96 The directors may from time to time pay to the members such interim dividends as appear to the directors to be justified by the profits of the company

Notes — The article authorises the directors to pay interim dividends only out of profits. Vide (1903) 30 T L R 16 (1914) 1 Ch 558, (1901) 85 L T 27

97 No dividends shall be paid otherwise than out of profits

Notes — Dividends are not to be paid out of profits and not out of capital. 50, In re National Funds Insurance Alexandra Palace Co 21 Ch D 149, not out of capital is ultra vires. Jeffer v Whitworth 11 App Cas 409. If the directors pay dividends out of the capital they are jointly and severally responsible for payment. Fletcher's Case 21 Ch D 519. If the directors pay fictitious dividends may be made criminally liable. Burns v Pennell (1849) 2 H L C 525.

*The word within quotations has been substituted by Act 10 of 1914

Regina v Esdaile (1858) 1 G & F 213. So dividends can only be paid out of profits ascertained by a proper profit and loss account and balance sheet, as commercial men generally ascertain profits, throughout the world Holby's Case 2 Eq 175, 4 Ch 475, (1894) 2 Ch 264, (1892) 2 Ch 198, 4 Ch D 825, 16 Ch D 347, 35 Ch D 582.

98 Subject to the rights of persons (if any) entitled to shares with special rights as to dividends, all dividends shall be declared and paid according to the amounts paid on the shares but if and so long as nothing is paid up on any of the shares in the company, dividends may be declared and paid according to the amounts of the shares. No amount paid on a share in advance of calls shall, while carrying interest, be treated for the purposes of this article as paid on the share.

Notes—One of the most important points which the articles have to determine in reference to dividends is in what proportion the dividends are to be made payable as between the members. In the absence of any provision in the articles 'all the shares are entitled to participate equally in dividend, without regard to the amount paid up upon each' Oakbank Oil Co v. Crum, 8 App Cas 65, see also Bridge-water Co, 14 App Cas 575. But this article gives a rateable dividend on the amounts paid on the shares.

99 The directors may, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the company such sums as they think proper as a reserve or reserves which shall, at the discretion of the directors, be applicable for meeting contingencies or for equalizing dividends, or for any other purpose to which the profits of the company may be properly applied, and pending such applications may at the like discretion either be employed in the business of the company or be invested in such investments (other than shares of the company) as the directors may from time to time think fit.

Notes—Even where there is no provision in the article the directors can set apart a portion of the profit as reserve fund. They may invest such fund in any investments which they consider desirable Berlin v Earle, (1902) A C 13, Fisher v Blak and White Co (1901) 1 Ch 173. It is generally available for distribution of profits in succeeding years Hosre & Co (1904) 2 Ch 708 Bouch v Sproule (1887) 12 A C 385, Pe Alibuy (1890) 45 Ch D 237.

100 If several persons are registered as joint holders of any share, any one of them may give effectual receipts for any dividend payable on the share.

Notes—As between tenant for life and remainder man, the tenant for life is entitled to all profits distributed unless the company has validly capitalized them by resolution or otherwise Stiebel p 300 citing Bouch v Sproule (1887) 12 A C 385 Pe Pierce (1907) 2 Ch 389, Re Northage (1891) 60 L J Ch 488 Hume Nisbet's Settlement (1911) 27 T L R 461, Re Palmer (1912) 56 Sol J 363.

101 Notice of any dividend that may have been declared shall be given in manner hereinafter mentioned to the person entitled to share therein.

Notes—Where a dividend is declared between the date of a contract for sale of shares and the transfer it will be payable to the transferee if the contract be silent on the point Stiebel p 304 citing Black v Hoenersham (1879) 4 Ex D 24.

102 No dividend shall bear interest against the company
Cf Rishon v Grissel (1870) 10 Eq 393.

Accounts

103 The directors shall cause true accounts to be kept—

(a) of the sums of money received and expended by the company and the matter in respect of which such receipt and expenditure takes place, and

(b) of the assets and liabilities of the company

Notes—Directors are agents and in some sense trustees for the company. This being so, they are under the clearest obligation to keep proper accounts of their "and means dealings and transactions in behalf of the company. It is one of Eldon pointed out in White v Lincoln (1803) and to communicate the contents of it to his
p 222

104 The books of account shall be kept at the registered office of the company, or at such other place or places as the directors think fit, and shall always be open to the inspection of the directors

Notes—A director by virtue of his office has the right to inspect the accounts of the company (1890) W N (Eng) 209 This right of inspection ceases on voluntary winding up Yorkshire & Co 9 Eq 650, Kent Coalfields Syndicate (1898) 1 Q B 754

105 The directors shall from time to time determine whether and to what extent and at what times and places and under what conditions or regulations the accounts and books of the company or any of them shall be open to the inspection of members not being directors and no member (not being a director) shall have any right of inspecting any account or book or document of the company except as conferred by law or authorised by the directors or by the company in general meeting.

Notes—The right of inspection of accounts and books of the company is not a statutory right. This article does not prevent a shareholder to inspect the register of members or the register of mortgages, for a member has statutory right to inspect them Palmer's Company Law p 222

106 Once at least in every year the directors shall lay before the company in general meeting a profit and loss account for the period since the preceding account or (in the case of the first account) since the incorporation of the company, made up to a date not more than six months before such meeting

107 The profit and loss account shall show arranged under the most convenient heads the amount of gross income distinguishing the several sources from which it has been derived and the amount of gross expenditure distinguishing the expenses of the establishment salaries and other like matters. Every item of expenditure fairly chargeable against the year's income shall be brought into account so that a just balance of profit and loss may be laid before the meeting and in cases where any item of expenditure which may in fairness be distributed over several years has been incurred in any one year, the whole amount of such item shall be stated which the addition of the reasons why only a portion of such expenditure is charged against the income of the year

108 A balance-sheet shall be made out in every year and laid before the company such meet months before directors as port of the di rect which they recomme int which they they propose to carry to a reserve fund (if any) which

109 A copy of the balance sheet and report, shall, seven days previously to the meeting be sent to the person entitled to receive notices of general meetings in the manner in which notices are to be given hereunder

110 The directors shall in all respects comply with the provisions of sections 130 to 135 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force

Audit

111 Auditors shall be appointed and their duties regulated in accordance with sections 144 and 145 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any statutory modifications thereof for the time being in force.

Notices.

112. (1) A notice may be given by the company to any member either personally or by sending it by post to him to his registered address, or (if he address, if any, within British ing of notices to him of the notice shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing prepaying and posting a letter containing the notice, and, unless the contrary is proved, to have been effected at the time at which the letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post

114. A notice may be given by the company to the joint holders of a share by giving the notice to the joint holders named first in the register in respect of the share.

Notes—In the absence of such a provision in the articles such a notice is not sufficient Cf Patentwood Keg Syndicate v Peirse, (1906) W N 164

115. A notice may be given by the company to the persons entitled to a share in consequence of the death or insolvency of a member by sending it through the post in a prepaid letter addressed to them by name, or by the title of representatives of the deceased, or assignee of the insolvent or by any British India supplied for the purpose or (until such an address has been so ner in which the same might have been occurred

Notes—These persons are not entitled to any notice in the absence of such an article (1909) 1 Ch 636, (1896) 1 Ch 456, (1894) 1 Q B 622

116 Notice of every general meeting shall be given in some manner hereinbefore authorised to (a) every member of the company (including bearers of share-warrants) except those members who (having no registered address within British India) have not supplied to the company an address within British India for the giving of notices to them, and also to (b) every person entitled to a share in consequence of the death or insolvency of a member, who, but for his death or insolvency, would be entitled to receive notice of the meeting No other persons shall be entitled to receive notices of general meetings

THE CONTEMPT OF COURTS ACT

ACT NO XII OF 1926.

RECEIVED THE ASSENT OF THE G. G. ON THE 8TH MARCH 1926

An Act to define and limit the powers of certain Courts in punishing contempts of Courts

WHEREAS doubts have arisen as to the powers of a High Court of Judicature to punish contempts of subordinate courts

And whereas it is expedient to resolve these doubts and to define and limit the powers exercisable by High Courts and Chief Courts in punishing contempts of court, It is hereby enacted as follows —

Notes — The several High Courts of Judicature established by Letters Patent are superior courts of record and as such they have power to attach and commit for without reference to whether the acts alleged powers of the courts are as unrestricted as are the powers of superior courts of record in England. It has not been decided whether the courts of Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces Oudh, and Sindh have these general powers either in regard to contempt of their own proceedings or of the superior courts of record to attach and commit for contempt of court, contempts of courts are also indictable misdemeanours at common law. In India on the other hand, though the Indian Penal Code makes certain acts which would be punishable as contempts of court in England specific offences, it does not provide generally for the punishment of contempts of the authority of Judicial officers not committed in their presence.

2 "The condition of the law in India as summarised above has long been courts against contempts which are not already provided for in the Indian Penal Code to the High Courts themselves. The Bill removes any doubts as to the powers of the High Courts of Judicature in regard to the protection of their subordinate courts for such contempts. It will show clearly that the courts of the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces Oudh and Sindh, will have the same powers of punishing for contempts committed in regard to their own proceedings or of the

1 (1) This Act may be called the Contempt of Courts Act 1926.

(2) It shall extend to the whole of British India

(3) It shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, appoint

2. (1) Subject to the provisions of sub section (3), the High Courts of Judicature established by Letters Patent shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, powers and authority, in accordance with the same procedure and practice, in respect of contempts of courts subordinate to them as they have and exercise in respect of contempts of themselves.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sub section (3), a chief court shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, powers and authority, in accordance with the same procedure and practice, in respect of contempt of itself as a High Court referred to in sub section (1)

(3) No High Court shall take cognizance of a contempt alleged to have been committed in respect of a Court subordinate to it where such contempt is an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code

'Next this jurisdiction inherited from the old King's Bench was of a very special character and, unless I have misread the judgment, it vested on the Courts power to punish every kind of mis demeanour, in that it was in a special manner the guardian and protector of public justice throughout the kingdom the custos morum, a dignity that reverted to it or was revived on the abolition of the Star Chamber by 16 Char I c 10 Ordinarily mis demeanour was punishable by indictment or information, but when it was a contempt of Court it was also punishable brevi munit by attachment When this summary proceeding was first used is in some doubt, but the opinion has been expressed that the earliest instance of its use where the contempt was an attack on a Judge, not in the face of the Court, was in 1720

'The fact that there was one alternative mode of bringing the offender before the Court where the mis demeanour was a contempt of Court was merely a difference of procedure the subject matter was the same, that is to say the prosecution of an offence in the Court of King's Bench

'The helplessness of the inferior Court and its subjection to the superintendence and control of the Kings Bench were not the foundation of the jurisdiction, but merely the occasion and the reason for its exercise

Then it was held by his lordship that neither the Supreme Court nor the Sudder Dewani Adawlat nor the Sudder Nizamat Adawlat had jurisdiction to commit a Mofussil The Calcutta High Court power and authority in any man Dewany Adawlat and the Sudder Nizamat Adawlat, has not derived any such jurisdiction from any of those Courts Ibid, but see Re Venkata Rao, 21 M L J 832 and King Emperor v P G Kulkarni 24 Bom L R 16

Scope—Every superior Court of record has power to commit for contempt of themselves 17 C W N 1279 The High Courts are superior Courts of records and it for contempt of themselves This section unit for contempts of Mofussil Courts over This section gives legislative sanction to and 24 Bom L R 16 So the rule of law nger the law Sub section (2) gives power attempts committed in regard to their own

Magistrate and prior to committal. It was held that the High Court had power to attach, first because these might come to the assizes for trial, and secondly, because, even if the committal had actually been made to the quarter session, still the King's Bench Division as the inheritor of all the jurisdictions and powers of the Court of the King's Bench possessed the summary power of punishment. It was on the second of these two grounds that the Advocate General relied in his opening.

This phase of Rex v. Davis, demands close attention in order to see whether it rests on reasoning which can legitimately be applied here. Certain links in that chain of reasoning are evident; others perhaps are not so clear.

First, then the jurisdiction assumed in Rex v. Davis, was inherited if at all, from the old King's Bench and not from the other Courts of Record which became amalgamated in the English High Court though those Courts too had the power to commit for contempt of themselves that belongs to every superior Court of Record.

"Next this jurisdiction inherited from the old King's Bench was of a very special character and, unless I have misread the judgment, it vested on the Court's power to punish every kind of mis demeanour, in that it was in a special manner the guardian and promoter of public justice throughout the kingdom, the custos morum, a dignity that reverted to it or was terminated on the abolition of the Star Chamber by 16 Char I c. 10. Ordinarily this demeanour was punishable by indictment or by attachment. When this summary proceeding was first used is in some doubt, but the opinion has been expressed that the earliest instance of its use where the contempt was an attack on a Judge, not in the face of the Court, was in 1720.

"The fact that there was one alternative mode of bringing the offender before the Court where the mis demeanour was a contempt of Court was merely a difference of procedure; the subject-matter was the same, that is to say, the prosecution of an offence in the Court of King's Bench.

"The helplessness of the inferior Court and its subjection to the superintendence and control of the King's Bench were not the foundation of the jurisdiction, but merely the occasion and the reason for its exercise.

Powers of High Courts for contempts of inferior Courts before the passing of this Act—In the matter of the Attorney General v. The Queen, 17 C W N. 1253 at p. 1250 Jenkins C J said: "These principles of the old Common Law must, I think be that the Court of King's Bench is the custos morum, had jurisdiction to punish on a summary proceeding, as well as to indictment or information all offences in the Kingdom being a contempt of Court is tantamount to interference with the administration of justice. When the Court so interposed and embarrassed was an inferior Criminal Court unable to protect itself but under the superintendence and control of the Court of King's Bench, the case was one in which it would be right that the common law principle should be applied in a summary proceeding.

"Hence then these powers. Has this High Court common law powers that would enable it to punish in an offence on a summary proceeding, conduct in relation to a proceeding in a Mofussil criminal Court and not in the face of that Court, such conduct not being an offence under the Indian Penal Code, Act XLV of 1860?"

Then it was held by his lordship that neither the Supreme Court nor the Sudler Dewani-Adawlat nor the Sudder Nizamat Adawlat had jurisdiction to commit a person for contempt of a Criminal Court in the Mofussil. The Calcutta High Court which has inherited all the jurisdiction and every power and authority in any manner vested in the Supreme Court, the Sudder Dewani Adawlat and the Sudder Nizamat Adawlat, has not derived any such jurisdiction from any of those Courts, Idid, but see As Pantists Rao, 21 M L J 832 and King Emperor v P G Kulkarni, 24 Bom L R 16.

Scope—Every superior Court of record has power to commit for contempt of themselves. 17 C W N 1279. The High Courts are superior Courts of records and as such they have jurisdiction to commit for contempt of themselves. This section gives jurisdiction to High Court to commit for contempt of Mofussil Courts over which the High Court has jurisdiction. This section gives legislative sanction to the decision reported in 21 M L J 832 and 24 Bom L R 16. So the rule of law laid down in 17 C W N. 1253 is no longer the law. Sub section (2) gives power to the Chief Courts of punishing for contempts committed in regard to their own proceedings or of the proceedings of Courts subordinate to them. By sub section (3) in lieu of the existing unrestricted powers of the High Courts of Judicature the nature of the offence of contempt of Court is defined. The publication of comments on a case which is pending trial in a Court amounts to a contempt of Court if the comments are such as are likely to prejudice the administration of justice in the case. 29 C L J 565. Applications for contempt cannot be subject matter of reference by the Lower Court to the High Court. Such application can be heard by a Bench of the High Court hearing criminal appeals unless they are specially referred to by the Chief Justice. 35 C W N 1265. As regards procedure in cases of contempt of mofussil Court. Vide 35 C W N 1265.

3. Save as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, a contempt of Court may be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, which may extend to two thousand rupees, or with both :

Limit of punishment for Contempt of Court
 Provided that the accused may be discharged or the punishment awarded may be remitted on apology being made to the satisfaction of the Court.

Notes—By this section the unrestricted power of the High Court is limited and the extent of punishment is defined—Vide Statement of Objects and Reasons

CHAPTER I

OF THE COMMUNICATION, ACCEPTANCE, AND REVOCATION OF PROPOSALS

3 The communication of proposals, the acceptance of proposals, and the revocation of proposals, and acceptances, respectively, are deemed to be made by any act or omission of the party proposing, accepting, or revoking, by which he intends to communicate such proposals, acceptance, or revocation, or which has the effect of communicating it

Notes—An offer or its acceptance or both may be made either by words or conduct Anson p 28 A common illustration is afforded by the sending of goods and their use or consumption by the person to whom they are sent The sending is the offer the use or consumption is the acceptance importing a promise to pay the price Ibid citing Hut v Mills, 15 M & W 87, see also Plynter v Williams 1 C & M 810 The communication takes place when it is brought to the knowledge of the person to whom it is made Taylor v Laird (1856) 25 L J Ex 329, Richardson v Rountree, (1894) A C 217 An offer must be made with the intention of creating legal relations 23 B 420 So a mere invitation to a dinner is no offer Ibid 'Where a relation exists between two parties which involves the performance of certain duties by one of them and the payment of reward to him by the other, the law will imply or the jury may infer a promise by each party to do what is to be done by him' Morgan v Ravey, 30 L J Ex 131

Communication, when complete

4 The communication of a proposal is complete when it comes to the knowledge of the person to whom it is made

The communication of an acceptance is complete, as against the proposer, when it is put in a course of transmission to him, so as to be out of the power of the acceptor, as against the acceptor, when it comes to the knowledge of the proposer

The communication of a revocation is complete, as against the person who makes it, when it is put into a course of transmission to the person to whom it is made, so as to be out of the power of the person who makes it, as against the person to whom it is made, when it comes to his knowledge a contract binding on both parties.

According to English law acceptance takes place when a letter is put into the post office Henthorn v Fraser, (1892) 2 Ch 27 (C A) So a telegram revoking the acceptance would be operative, though it reaches the offeror before the letter. But under this section an acceptance can be revoked by a telegram if it reaches the offer or before the letter of acceptance. On this section Mr Anson says "What is to happen if the letter of acceptance is lost? Is the proposer to be for ever bound though the acceptor is free?"

Revocation how made

6 A proposal is revoked—

(8) by the communication of notice of revocation by the proposer to the other party,

(9) by the lapse of the time prescribed in such proposal for its acceptance, or, if no time is so prescribed by the lapse of a reasonable time, without communication of the acceptance,

(3) by the failure of the acceptor to fulfil a condition precedent to acceptance, or

(4) by the death or insanity of the proposer, if the fact of his death or insanity comes to the knowledge of the acceptor before acceptance

Notes—Acceptance is to offer what a lighted match is to a train of gunpowder. It produces something which cannot be reeriled or undone. But the powder may have lain still till it has become damp or the man who laid the train may remove it before the match is applied. So an offer may lapse for want of acceptance or be revoked before acceptance. Anson's Contract p 35

Clause (3)—It is an offer to attract that an offer of a burglar is accepted by the former, until it is accepted by the latter. If was made Any qualification is agreed unless the same be agreed. 4 Wheaton, 225

Clause (4)—An acceptance communicated to the representatives of the offeror can not bind them. Anson's Contract p 37

Acceptance must be absolute 7 In order to convert a proposal into a promise, the acceptance must—

(1) be absolute and unqualified,

(2) be expressed in some usual and reasonable manner, unless the proposal prescribes the manner in which it is to be accepted. If the proposal prescribes a manner in which it is to be accepted, and the acceptance is not made in such manner, the proposer may, within a reasonable time after the acceptance is communicated to him, insist that his proposal shall be accepted in the prescribed manner, and not otherwise: but if he fails to do so, he accepts the acceptance.

Notes—To convert a proposal into a promise the acceptance must be unqualified and without condition. When once a proposal is practically refused it does not hold good and no acceptance after the refusal could convert the proposal into a promise so as to create a contract. Nirod Chandra v Raja Kirtya Nanda (1922) P 24. If there is a variation in the acceptance the acceptance is not an acceptance but a counter proposal and there is no contract until this counter proposal is in its turn, accepted by the original proposer. 2 S L R 7. This section lays down that proposal which must be accepted by the original promisor before the contract is made. A person making a proposal can not impose on the party to whom it is addressed the obligation to refuse it under the penalty of imputed assent or attach to his silence the legal result that he must be deemed to have accepted it. 24 B 510=2 Bom L R 691 see also 54 Ind Cas 437=18 A L J 73, 37 Ind Cas 792=(1917) W N 91 22 Ind Cas 811=92 P R 1913, 6 A L J 213=1 Ind Cas 77, 45 B 8=57 Ind Cas 971, 9 A L J 285, A I R 1931 Lah 265=134 Ind Cas 1110. ## OF CONTRACTS, VOIDABLE CONTRACTS AND VOID AGREEMENTS

~10 All agreements are contracts if they are made by the free consent of parties competent to contract, for a lawful consideration, and with a lawful object, and are not hereby expressly declared to be void

Nothing herein contained shall affect any law in force in British India, and not hereby expressly repealed, by which any contract is required to be made in writing or in the presence of witnesses or any law relating to the registration of documents.

16. * (1) A contract is said to be induced by "undue influence" where the relations subsisting between the parties are such that one of the parties is in a position to dominate the will of the other, and uses that position to obtain an unfair advantage over the other

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing principle, a person is deemed to be in a position to dominate the will of another—

(a) where he holds a real or apparent authority over the other, or where he stands in a fiduciary relation to the other; or

(b) where he makes a contract with a person whose mental capacity is temporarily or permanently affected by reason of age, illness, or mental or bodily distress

(3) Where a person who is in a position to dominate the will of another, enters into a contract with him, and the transaction appears, on the face of it or on the evidence adduced to be unconscionable, the burden of proving that such contract was not induced by undue influence shall lie upon the person in a position to dominate the will of the other,

Nothing in this sub section shall affect the provisions of section 111 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872

(d) A applies to a banker for a loan at a time when there is stringency in the money market. The banker declines to make the loan except at an unusually high rate of interest. 19. When consent to an agreement is caused by coercion*, fraud, or misrepresentation the agreement is a contract voidable at the option of the party whose consent was so caused

Voidability of agreements without free consent

A party to a contract, whose consent was caused by fraud or misrepresentation, may, if he thinks fit, insist that the contract shall be performed, and that he shall be put in the position in which he would have been if the representations made had been true

Exception — If such consent was caused by misrepresentation or by silence fraudulent within the meaning of section 17, the contract, nevertheless, is not voidable, if the party whose consent was so caused had the means of discovering the truth with ordinary diligence.

Explanation — A fraud or misrepresentation which did not cause the consent to a contract of the party on whom such fraud was practised, or to whom such misrepresentation was made, does not render a contract voidable.

19. When consent to an agreement is caused by coercion*, fraud, or misrepresentation the agreement is a contract voidable at the option of the party whose consent was so caused

Voidability of agreements without free consent

A party to a contract, whose consent was caused by fraud or misrepresentation, may, if he thinks fit, insist that the contract shall be performed, and that he shall be put in the position in which he would have been if the representations made had been true

Exception —If such consent was caused by misrepresentation or by silence fraudulent within the meaning of section 17, the contract, nevertheless, is not voidable, if the party whose consent was so caused had the means of discovering the truth with ordinary diligence

Agreement without consideration void, unless—

25. An agreement made without consideration is void unless—

(1) it is expressed in writing, and registered under the law for the time it is in writing and registered, being in force for the registration of documents*, and is made on account of natural love and affection between parties standing in a near relation to each other, or unless

(2) it is a promise to compensate, wholly or in part, a person who has already voluntarily done something for the promisor, or something which the promisor was legally compellable to do, or unless

(3) it is a promise, made in writing and signed by the person to be or is a promise to pay a debt barred by limitation law, charged therewith or by his agent generally, or specially authorized in that behalf, to pay wholly or in part a debt of which the creditor might have enforced payment but for the limitation of time.

In any of these cases such agreement is a contract.
Explanation 1—Nothing in this section shall affect the validity as between the donor and donee of any gift actually made.

Explanation 2—An agreement to which the consent of the promisor is freely given is not void merely because the consideration is inadequate, but the inadequacy of the consideration may be taken into account by the Court in determining the question whether the consent of the promisor was freely given.

OF THE PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACTS

Contracts which must be performed

37 The parties to a contract must either perform, or offer to perform,

Obligation of parties to contracts

their respective promises, unless such performance is dispensed with or excused under the provisions of this Act, or of any other law

Promises bind the representatives of the promisors in case of the death of such promisors before performance, unless a contrary intention appears from the contract

Illustrations

(a) A promises to deliver goods to B on a certain day on payment of Rs. 1000. A dies before that day. A's representatives are bound to deliver the goods to B, and B is bound to pay the Rs. 1000 to A's representatives

(b) A promises to paint a picture for B by a certain day at a certain price. A dies before the day. The contract cannot be enforced either by A's representatives or by B

38 Where a promisor has made an offer of performance to the promisee, and the offer has not been accepted, the promisor is not responsible for non performance, nor does he thereby lose his rights under the contract

Effect of refusal to accept offer of performance

Every such offer must fulfil the following conditions —

(1) it must be unconditional ,

(2) it must be made at a proper time and place, and under such circumstances that the person to whom it is made may have a reasonable opportunity of ascertaining that the person by whom it is made is able and willing there and then to do the whole of what he is bound by his promise to do ,

(3) if the offer is an offer to deliver anything to the promisee, the promisee must have reasonable opportunity of seeing that the thing offered is the thing which the promisor is bound by his promise to deliver

An offer to one of several joint promisees has the same legal consequences as an offer to all of them

Illustration

B holds land in Bengal, on lease granted by A, the zamindar. The revenue payable by A to the Government being in arrear, his land is advertised for sale by the Government. Under the revenue law, the consequence of such sale will be the annulment of B's lease. B, to prevent the sale and the consequent annulment of his own lease, pays to the Government the sum due from A. A is bound to make good to B the amount so paid.

CHAPTER VI

OF THE CONSEQUENCES OF BREACH OF CONTRACT

73 When a contract has been broken, the party who suffers by such

Compensation for loss or damage caused by breach of contract

such breach or which the parties knew when they made the contract, to be likely to result from the breach of it.

Such compensation is not to be given for any remote and indirect loss or damage sustained by reason of the breach.

When an obligation resembling those created by contract has been incurred, and has not been discharged, any person injured by the failure to discharge it is entitled to receive the same compensation from the party in default as if such person had contracted to discharge it and had broken his contract.

Explanation.—In estimating the loss or damage arising from a breach of contract, the means which existed of remedying the inconvenience caused by the non performance of the contract must be taken into account.

Illustrations

(a) A contracts to sell and deliver 50 maunds of saltpetre to B at a certain price to be paid on delivery. A breaks his promise. B is entitled to receive from A, by way of compensation the sum if any by which the contract price falls short of the price for which B might have obtained 50 maunds of saltpetre of like quality at the time when the saltpetre ought to have been delivered.

(b) A hires B's ship to go to Bombay, and there take on board on the first of January, a cargo which A is to provide and to bring it to Calcutta the freight to be paid when earned. B's ship does not go to Bombay, but A has opportunities of procuring suitable conveyance for the cargo upon terms as advantageous as those on which he had chartered the ship A avails himself of those opportunities, but is put to trouble and expense in doing so A is entitled to receive compensation from B in respect of such trouble and expense

(c) A contracts to buy of B at a stated price, 50 maunds of rice, no time being fixed for delivery A afterwards informs B that he will not accept the rice if tendered to him B is entitled to receive from A by way of compensation, the amount if any, by which the contract price exceeds that which B can obtain for the rice at the time when A informs B that he will not accept it

(d) A contracts to buy B's ship for 60,000 rupees but breaks his promise A must pay to B, by way of compensation, the excess if any of the contract-price over the price which B can obtain for the ship at the time of the breach of promise

(e) A, the owner of a boat contracts with B to take a cargo of jute to Mirzapur for sale at that place, starting on a specified day The boat owing to some avoidable cause, does not start at the time appointed, whereby the arrival of the cargo at Mirzapur is delayed beyond the time when it would have arrived if the boat had sailed according to the contract After that date, and before the arrival of the cargo, the price of jute falls The measure of the compensation payable to B by A is the difference between the price which B could have obtained for the cargo at Mirzapur at the time when it would have arrived if forwarded in due course, and its market-price at the time when it actually arrived and receives payment in

B is entitled to recover

(f) A contracts to let his ship to B for a year from the first of January for a certain price Freight rises, and, on the first of January the hire obtainable for the ship is higher than the contract price A breaks his promise He must pay to B, by way of compensation, a sum equal to the difference between the contract price and the price for which B could hire a similar ship for a year on and from the first of January

(g) A contracts to supply B with a certain quantity of iron at a fixed price, being higher price than that for which A could procure and deliver the iron B wrongfully refuses to receive the iron B must pay to A, by way of compensation the difference between the contract price of the iron and the sum for which A could have obtained and delivered it

(h) A delivers to B, a common carrier, a machine, to be conveyed, without delay, to A's mill, informing B that his mill is stopped for want of the machine B unreasonably delays the delivery of the machine, and A, in consequence, loses a profitable contract with the Government A is entitled to receive from B, by way of compensation, the average amount of profit which would have been made by the working of the mill during the time that delivery of it was delayed but not the loss sustained through the loss of the Government contract

(i) A, having contracted with B to supply B with 1,000 tons of iron at 100 rupees a ton to be delivered at a stated time, contracts with C for the purchase of 1,000 tons of iron at 80 rupees a ton, telling C that he does so for the purpose of performing his contract with B C fails to perform his contract with A who cannot procure other iron and B in consequence rescinds the contract C must pay to A 20,000 rupees being the profit which A would have made by the performance of his contract with B

(m) A sells certain goods to B, in reliance upon the quality of the goods, and B, in reliance upon the quality of the goods, prove to be not a sum of money by way of sale to C. A is not liable to pay the sum of money by way of sale to C.

(n) A contracts to pay the money on that day to B. B in consequence of not receiving the money on that day is unable to pay his debts, and is totally ruined. A is not liable to make good to B anything except the principal sum he contracted to pay together with interest up to the day of payment.

(o) A contracts to deliver 50 maunds of saltpetre to B on the first of January, at a certain price. B afterwards before the first of January, contracts to sell the saltpetre to C at a price higher than the market price of the first of January. A breaks his promise. In estimating the compensation payable by A to B, the market price of the first of January and not the profit which would have arisen to B from the sale to C, is to be taken into account.

(p) A contracts to sell and deliver 500 bales of cotton to B on a fixed day. A business A breaks his promise, and A is not responsible to B for the loss.

(q) A contracts to sell and deliver to B on the first of January certain cloth which B intends to manufacture into caps of a particular kind for which there is no demand except at that season. The cloth is not delivered till after the appointed time and too late to be used that year in making caps. B is entitled to receive from A, by way of compensation the difference between the contract price of the cloth and its market price at the time of delivery but not the profits which he expected to obtain by making caps nor the expenses which he has been put to in making preparation for the manufacture.

(r) A a ship owner contracts with B to convey him from Calcutta to Sydney in A's ship, sailing on the first of January and B pays to A by way of deposit, one half of his passage money. The ship does not sail on the 1st of January, and B after being, in consequence detained in Calcutta for sometime and thereby put to some expense proceeds to Sydney in another vessel and in consequence arriving too late in Sydney loses a sum of money. A is liable to repay to B his deposit with interest and the expense to which he is put by his detention in Calcutta and the excess if any of the passage money paid for the second ship over that agreed upon for the first but not the sum of money which B lost by arriving in Sydney too late.

Notes.—This section not only confines the right of relief to the party who suffers but provides how his loss is to be measured what it is to include and what to exclude and what circumstances the Court must take into account in estimating the loss. Hence in cases of breach of contract it is not permissible to the aggrieved party to file a suit to recover the price of goods in dispute. Under the Indian Contract Act the aggrieved party must sell the refused goods and then seek to recover the loss if any occurring on such sale. 11 Bom L R 335, 10 Bom L R 1113, 4 Bom L R 818, 5 M L T 215, 4 Bom L R 814. (a) A contracts with B to pay B Rs 1000 if he fails to pay B Rs 500 on a given day. A fails to pay B, Rs 500 on that day. B is entitled to recover from A such compensation, not exceeding Rs 1000, as the Court considers reasonable.

(b) A contracts with B that if A practises as a surgeon within Calcutta he will pay B, Rs 5,000. A practises as a surgeon in Calcutta. B is entitled to such compensation, not exceeding Rs 5,000, as the Court considers reasonable.

(c) A gives a recognizance binding him in a penalty of Rs 500 to appear in Court on a certain day. He forfeits his recognizance. He is liable to pay the whole penalty.

(d) A gives B a bond for the payment of Rs 1000 with interest at 12 per cent at the end of six months with a stipulation that, in case of default interest shall be payable at the rate of 75 per cent from the date of default. This is a stipulation by way of penalty, and B is only entitled to recover from A such compensation as the Court considers reasonable.

(e) A, who owes money to B, a money lender, undertakes to repay him by delivering to him 10 maunds of grain on a certain date and stipulates that, in the event of his not delivering the stipulated amount by the stipulated date, he shall be liable to deliver 20 maunds. This is a stipulation by way of penalty, and B is only entitled to reasonable compensation in case of breach.

Notes—In cases of breach of contract covered by this section, the question is one of intention, and consideration is to be had as to whether the parties have ascertained the compensation due on a breach of the obligation contained therein, and as to whether the sum to be paid is "the sum named" in the contract as payable in case of breach. 16 P. R. 1887. The question whether the provision as to a higher rate of interest is to be treated as liquidated damages or as a penalty is a question of fact to be decided on a consideration of the whole instrument in each case. 51 P. R. 1879, 25 P. R. 1879. In the case of the breach of a penal contract the plaintiff is entitled under this section to reasonable compensation and not to the full amount fixed or agreed upon. 3 P. R. 1875. The question whether any provision in a document is a penalty or not is one for the Court to determine. 36 M. 229 (F. B.). Although this section was originally framed to deal with the doctrine of penalty and liquidated damages as understood in the law of England, it is in its present form comprehensive enough to include cases where there is a stipulation for payment of interest at a specified rate, if the principal or part thereof is not paid on the due date, because it covers all cases where the contract contains any stipulation by way of penalty. 21 C. Party rightfully rescinding contract entitled to compensation

75. A person who rightfully rescinds a contract is entitled to compensation for any damage which he has sustained through the non fulfilment of the contract.

A a singer contracts with B, the manager of a theatre to sing at his theatre for two nights in every week during the next two months and B engages to pay her 100 rupees for each night's performance. On the sixth night A wilfully absents herself from the theatre, and B in consequence rescinds the contract. B, is entitled to claim compensation for the damage which he has sustained through the non fulfilment of the contract.

Notes—If after a voidable contract has been fulfilled, one of the parties discovers facts which if known earlier would entitle him to rescind the same without legal proceedings he is not bound to sue for a formal rescission of the same before he can claim damages. 60 P. #### OF INDEMNITY AND GUARANTEE

124. A contract by which one party promises to save the other from loss caused to him by the conduct of the promisor himself, or by the conduct of any other person, is called a "contract of indemnity".

Illustration

A contracts to indemnify B against the consequences of any proceedings which C may take against B in respect of a certain sum of 200 rupees. This is a contract of indemnity.

Notes—The Contract Act draws a distinction between contracts of indemnity and contracts of suretyship. So far as the contract of indemnity is concerned the person who indemnifies can, on payment or discharge of the obligation sue, but the suit in the absence of any assignment can only be in the name of the promisee. 126. A "contract of guarantee" is a contract to perform the promise, or discharge the liability, of a third person in "Contract of guarantee," case of his default. ## CHAPTER IV.

OF BAILMENT

148 A "bailment" is the delivery of goods by one person to another for some purpose, upon a contract that they shall, when the purpose is accomplished be returned or otherwise disposed of according to the directions of the persons delivering them. The person delivering the goods is called the "bailor" the person to whom they are delivered is called the "bailee"

Explanation—If a person, already in possession of the goods of another, contracts to hold them as a bailee, he thereby becomes the bailee, and the owner becomes the bailor, of such goods although they may not have been delivered by way of bailment.

Notes—The mere fact that the loading clerk of Railway filled up what is called the serial number in the forwarding note without doing any further would not amount to the delivery of goods to the railway by the consignor 45 A 235—J R 4 A 97=28 A L J 474 Mere acceptance of consignment notes is not equivalent to acceptance of goods by the bailee 117 Ind Cas 311=A J R 1929 Pat 296

150 The bailor is bound to disclose to the bailee faults in the goods bailed, of which the bailor is aware, and which materially interfere with the use of them, or expose the bailee to extraordinary risks, and if he does not make such disclosure, he is responsible for damage arising to the bailee directly from such faults

If the goods are bailed for hire, the bailor is responsible for such damage, whether he was or was not aware of the existence of such faults in the goods bailed.

151. In all cases of bailment the bailee is bound to take care of the goods bailed to him as much care as a man of ordinary prudence would take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality and value as the goods bailed.

156 If the bailee, without the consent of the bailor, mixes the goods of the bailor with his own goods, and the goods can be separated or divided, the property in the goods remains in the parties respectively but the bailee is bound to bear the expense of separation or division, and any damage arising from the mixture

Notes—It is an implied term of every contract of bailment or deposit that the goods bailed or deposited shall be returned on demand and the failure to return them is a breach of contract. If a demand for the return of the goods is not complied with, the possession of the bailee or deposittee becomes unlawful and the owner may sue in detinue but it is also open to them to sue in contract or in tort. 55 Ind Cas 45.

AGENCY

Appointment and authority of agents

182 An 'agent' is a person employed to do any act for another or to represent another in dealings with third persons. The person for whom such act is done, or who is so represented, is called the 'principal'.

Notes—Agency need not be created expressly by any written document and can be inferred from the circumstances and the conduct of the parties. A I R 1931 All 372. There is no relation of principal and agent between two sub-contractors. A I R 1930 Lah 1062. 183 Any person who is of the age majority according to the law to which he is subject and who is of sound mind; may employ an agent.

Notes—A person who appoints a minor as agent can not repudiate the agency on the ground of minority of the agent.

184 As between the principal and third persons any person may become an agent, but no person who is not of the age of majority and of sound mind can become an agent, so as to be responsible to his principal according to the provisions in that behalf herein contained.

Notes—When a minor, who was a member of a firm consisting of himself and his father applied for shares in a Bank and paid an advance with the application whereupon shares were duly allotted to the firm by the Bank. Held that under this section the minor was competent to act on behalf of the firm and that it accordingly became liable on the shares. 17 P L R 1918=38 P W R 1918=45 Ind Cas 17. An infant cannot be made liable for a tort arising out of a contract where the contract is not binding upon him and where the so called tort consists merely in negligence on the part of his guardian. 43 Ind Cas 923.

185 No consideration is necessary to create an agency.

186 The authority of an agent may be expressed or implied.

Notes—By mere direction by C to A to pay money to B B is not necessarily agent of C. A I R 1925 Cal 541. Notes—A revocation of the authority of an agent may take effect in so far as third persons are concerned at a point of time when the agent himself takes effect with regard to agent himself takes effect from the time when it is so made until revocation is so made known it is proper

205 Where there is an express or implied contract that the agency should be continued for any period of time, the principal must make compensation to the agent or the agent to the principal, as the case may be, for any previous revocation or renunciation of the agency without sufficient cause

Compensation for revocation by principal or renunciation by agent

Notes—Under this section, in the absence of any express contract the period of time to be implied depends on the particular circumstances of the cases 8 C. W. N. 831 Where for proper reasons the contract of agency is terminated by the agent who agreed to buy goods in his own name deliverable at a future date, the principal is entitled to credit for the price of the goods on the date when the agency is terminated. The promise of indemnity is an implied term of the contract of agency. Where the principal's conduct amounts to a refusal to indemnify, the agent is justified in rescinding the agency under ss. 39 and 205 of the Contract Act 9 S. L. R. 77

206 Reasonable notice must be given of such revocation or renunciation; otherwise the damage thereby resulting to the principal or the agent, as the case may be, must be made good to one by the other

If the principal discloses himself before the contract is completed, the other contracting party may refuse to fulfil the contract, if he can show that, if he had known who was the principal in the contract, or if he had known that the agent was not a principal he would not have entered into the contract

Notes—This section deals with the rights (a) of the principal and (b) of the third party in cases when the contract is entered into by the agent without disclosing his principal The third party's right to repudiate the contract arises only when the principal himself makes the disclosure, it cannot arise when the disclosure is made by some other person or the information reaches him from some other source 6 Bom L R 731 The principal can sue where the Railway receipt is given in the name of agent 92 Ind Cas 1007 Partnership is not liable for partner's own debt A I R 1925 Cal 29, see also 28 C W N 824

THE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT, 1912†

ACT NO 11 OF 1912

PASSED BY GOVERNOR GENERAL IN COUNCIL

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 1st March, 1912.

An Act to amend the law relating to Co-operative Societies

WHEREAS it is expedient further to facilitate the formation of Co operative Societies for the promotion of thrift and self help among agriculturists, artisans and persons of limited means, and for that purpose to amend the law, relating to Co operative Societies, It is hereby enacted as follows —

Object of the Legislation — Legislation is called for not only in order to lay down the fundamental conditions which must be observed but also with a view to giving Co operative Societies a corporate existence without resort to the elaborate provisions of the Companies Act, 1911. The legislation should be confined to the matters before been drawn so as to deal with the matters to be essential and its terms, a wide rule making

* Short title, "The Policies of Insurance (Marine and Fire) Assignment Act, 1866 — See the Indian Short Titles Act (XIV of 1897)

† This Act has been repealed in its application to Bombay by Bombay Act VII of 1925 in its application to Burma by Burma Act VI of 1927

power being reserved to Local Governments so that what is left to be of the nature of an experiment may be tried in each province or part of province on such lines as seem to afford most promise of success—Statement and Objects of Reasons

Defects of Co-operative Societies Act of 1904—(i) The Act of 1904 applied to societies for "Urban" and "Rural" Co-operative Societies of other distribution has led to it is advisable that Act as now revised

(ii) In the Act of 1904 Societies were classified according as they were "Urban" or "Rural" and the principle was laid down that as a general rule rural societies should be of unlimited liability. This basis for distinction was adopted mainly because it presented a classification which has already been recommended and put in force in the institution of Co-operative Credit Societies in certain parts of India but even at the time it was criticised as unsuitable by experts, and it has in practice been found artificial and inconvenient. The real distinction is between Societies with limited and those with unlimited liability and it is proposed in the new Bill to maintain this distinction only while retaining the principle that Agricultural Credit Society must as a general rule be with unlimited liability.

(iii) The act of 1904 did not contemplate that Societies with unlimited liability should distribute profits. It is still felt that such Societies do not represent the best form of Co-operation for agricultural communities but this form of society has, in practice, been for some time in existence in several provinces, and Societies of the character though not of the orthodox type, are recognized to be capable of useful work. Although therefore it is not intended to give them undue encouragement it is proposed to legalise their existence and to permit unlimited society, with the sanction of the Local Government to distribute profits.

(iv) A cardinal principle which is observed in the organization of Co-operative Societies in Europe is the grouping of such Societies into unions and then financing by means of central Banks. This stage of Co-operation has not been fully realised or provided for in the Act of 1904 but such grouping of Societies has already been found possible in most provinces and it is now considered desirable to legalise the formation of Co-operative Credit Societies of which the members shall be other Co-operative Credit Societies—Statements of Objects and Reasons

Preliminary

Short title and extent

1 (1) The Act may be called the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912, and

(2) It extends to the whole of British India

Object of the Act—The object of the Co-operative Societies Act is to encourage thrift, self help and co-operation among the agriculturists artisans and persons of limited means and it would be impossible to attain these objects if these people for the settlement of their disputes have necessarily to undergo all the troubles and worry of an extensive and protracted litigation. In the case of a dispute between a society and member the substitutional remedy provided under the rules in the shape of a reference to the Registrar must be available and the common law remedy by an action in a Civil Court must by necessary application be deemed to have been taken away. 71 Ind Cas 722

Definitions

2 In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) 'by laws' means the registered by laws for the time being in force, and includes a registered amendment of the by laws

(b) "committee" means the governing body of a registered society to whom the management of its affairs is entrusted

- (c) "member" includes a person joining in the application for the registration of a society and a person admitted to membership after registration in accordance with the by laws and any rules
- (d) "officer" includes a chairman, secretary, treasurer, member of committee, or other person empowered under the rules or the by laws to give directions in regard to the business of the society
- (e) "registered society" means a society registered or deemed to be registered under this Act
- (f) "registrar" means a person appointed to perform the duties of a Registrar of Co-operative Societies under this Act and
- (g) "rules" means rules made under this Act

Notes—The definitions of some of the terms are taken from the Friendly Societies Acts, 1896, and 1903 (56 & 60 Vict c 25)

Registration

3 The Local Government may appoint a person to be Registrar of Co-operative Societies for the Province or of any portion of it, and may appoint persons to assist such Registrar, and may, by general or special order, confer on any such persons all or any of the powers of a Registrar under this Act

Notes—In this section provision has been made for investing in persons, other than Registrars the power of a Registrar—Vide Statement of Objects and Reasons

4 Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, a society which has as its object the promotion of the economic interests of its members in accordance with co-operative principles, or a society established with the object of facilitating the operations of such a society, may be registered under this Act with or without limited liability

Provided that unless the Local Government by general or special order otherwise directs—

- (1) the liability of a society of which a member is a registered society shall be limited,
- (2) the liability of a society of which the object is the creation of funds to be lent to its members, and of which the majority of the members are agriculturists, and of which no member is a registered society, shall be unlimited

Notes—Under the Indian Companies Act a foreign corporation cannot be registered Bulkeley v Schull, L R 3 C P 764 Bulman v Service (1881) A C 386

Restrictions on interest of member of society with limited liability and a share capital

5 Where the liability of the members of a society is limited by shares, no member other than a registered society shall—

- (a) hold more than such portion of the share capital of the society, subject to a maximum of one fifth as may be prescribed by the rules, or
- (b) have or claim any interest in the shares of the society exceeding one thousand rupees

6 (1) No society, other than a society of which a member is a registered society, shall be registered under this Act which does not consist of at least ten persons above the age of eighteen years and, where the object of the society is the creation of funds to be lent to its members, unless such persons—

- (a) reside in the same town or village or in the same group of villages, or,

(b) save where the Registrar otherwise directs, are members of the same tribe, class, caste or occupation

(2) The word 'limited' shall be the last word in the name of every society with limited liability registered under this Act

Notes—In this section provision is made to maintain the existing restrictions as to residence or class obligatory before registration in the case of Credit Societies and to render the existence of ten members obligatory before registration in the case of all kinds of Co-operative Societies other than those, all the members of which are themselves registered Societies. The Registrar is further given the power of decision as to the residence qualifications and to place persons of the same occupation on the same footing as persons of the same tribe or class—Statement of Objects and Reasons

7 When any question arises whether for the purposes of this Act a person is an agriculturist or a non agriculturist, or whether any person is a resident in a town or village or group of villages, or whether two or more villages shall be considered to form a group, or whether any person belongs to any particular tribe, class, caste or occupation, the question shall be decided by the Registrar, whose decision shall be final

Notes—In these matters the decisions of the Registrar is final and on suit lies in a civil court against his decision

Application for Registration 8 (1) For purposes of registration an application to register shall be made to the Registrar

(a) The application shall be signed—

(a) in the case of a society of which no member is a registered society, by at least ten persons qualified in accordance with the requirements of section 6, sub-section (1), and

(b) in the case of a society of which a member is a registered society, by a duly authorised person on behalf of every such registered society, and where all the members of the society are not registered societies by ten other members, or, when there are less than ten other members by all of them

(3) The application shall be accompanied by a copy of the proposed by laws of the society and the persons by whom or on whose behalf such application is made shall furnish such information in regard to the society as the Registrar may require

Notes—This section corresponds to section 9 of the Friendly Societies Act 1896

9 If the Registrar is satisfied that a society has complied with the provisions of this Act and the rules and that its proposed by laws are not contrary to the Act, or to the rules, he may, if he thinks fit, register the society and its by laws

Notes—This section giving conclusive authority to the Registrar's certificate of registration as new—Statement of Objects and Reasons

10 A certificate of registration signed by the Registrar shall be conclusive evidence that the society therein mentioned is duly registered unless it is proved that the registration of the society has been cancelled

Notes—In Oakes v Terquand L R 2 H L 373 Lord Chelmsford said 'I think that the certificate prevents all recurrence to prior matters essential to registration, amongst which is the subscription of a memorandum of association by some persons and that it is conclusive that all previous requisition have been complied with' See also (1897) A C 22, Peel's Case, (1867) 2 Ch 674

11. (1) No amendment of the by laws of a registered society shall be valid

Amendment of the by laws of a registered society until the same has been registered under this Act, for which purpose a copy of the amendment shall be forwarded to the Registrar

(2) If the Registrar is satisfied that any amendment of the by laws is not contrary to this Act or to the rules, he may, if he thinks fit, register the amendment

(3) When the Registrar registers an amendment of the by laws of a registered society, he shall issue to the society, a copy of the amendment certified by him, which shall be conclusive evidence that the same is duly registered

Notes.—By this section it is provided that no amendment of a rule shall be valid until it has been registered. In connection with a similar provision in the English Friendly Societies Act, in Batley v Townrow (1814) 4 Camp 5, Lord Ellenborough, observed: "The section which permits an alteration of rules, provides that such alteration should be subject to the review of the justices and shall have no force or effect until confirmed by them." So where the altered rules were never enrolled, the rules as altered cannot legally be acted upon. R v Godolphin, 8 A & E 388, see also R v Cotton 15 Q B 569, Meredith v Wittingham 1 C B N S 216, Dewhurst v Clarkson, 3 El & Bl 194, Smith v Galloway, (1898) 1 Q B 71

- (b) the transfer or charge is made to the society or to a member of the society.

Notes—In Bennett v Slater, (1899) 1 Q B C A in connection with the Friendly Societies Act 1875 Vaughan Williams L J said “In this case the question really raised is whether or not a policy issued by a Friendly Society governed by

Act of 1875 is or is not assignable, and I have come to the conclusion that it is assignable. Where a policy is taken out for a sum of money which is payable to the member who takes out the policy, or his personal representative by virtue of the contract entered into no one will deny for a moment that such a sum of money prima facie, is part of the property of the member or the estate of the deceased member, as the case may be, therefore we must find something in the Act of 1875 or in the rules of the society which prevents this particular property having this ordinary incident of property. Now it is whatsover in either Act of Parliament or moneys payable under this policy, or therefore, the policy is not assignable it is of the statute. So there must be some restriction as regards transfer in the section

Duties of registered societies

15 Every registered society shall have an address registered in accordance with the rules to which all notices and communications may be sent, and shall send to the Registrar notice of every change thereof

Notes—This section corresponds to section 72 of the Indian Companies Act. The registered office need not be and is commonly is not, in the exclusive occupation of the company, and no part of the company's business need be carried on there—Rustomjee's Companies Act p. 89

16 Every registered society shall keep a copy of this Act and of the rules governing such society, and of its by laws open to inspection free of charge at all reasonable times at the registered address of the society

Notes—The right of inspection includes a right to make extracts. Matters v Easters & Co 38 Ch D 9. Nelson v Anglo American Land Agency (1897) 1 Ch 130. In seeking an inspection a share holder need not assign any reason. Holland v Dickson 37 Ch D 669—Vide Palmer's Company Law p. 222

17 (1) The Registrar shall audit or cause to be audited by some person authorized by him by general or special order in writing in this behalf the accounts of every registered society once at least in every year

(2) The audit under sub section (1) shall include an examination of over due debts if any and a valuation of the assets and liabilities of the society

(3) The Registrar, the Collector or any person authorized by general or special order in writing in this behalf by the Registrar shall at all times have and every transactions require

Notes—This claim gives the Registrar no more than the previous provisions that no statement of Objects and Reasons true financial position of the company confined to that. But then comes the question. How is he to ascertain the position? The answer is By examining the books of the company. But he does not discharge his duty by doing this without enquiry and without taking any trouble to see that the books themselves show the company's true position. (1896) 2 Ch 284

Privileges of registered societies

18 The registration of a society shall render it a body corporate by the name under which it is registered, with perpetual succession and a common seal, and with power to hold property, to enter into contracts to institute and defend suits and other legal proceedings and to do all things necessary for the purposes of its constitution

Notes—The Chairman of a Co-operative Credit Society has no right to institute a suit against a member of the society under the Co-operative Credit Societies Act in his own name. The suit should be one by the society under s 6 cl 2 of Act X of 1904. A suit in the name of the chairman must fail. 10 Ind Cas 570. A society can bring a suit for defamation. In Hill v Hurt Davies (1882) 21 Ch D 798, Kay J said "I have no doubt whatever about it. It seems to me that it is perfectly settled that any libel which is calculated to injure another man in his trade or a trading company will be restrained by injunction and although there has been, it is said, no reported case which applies that law and practice to a Friendly Society or Joint Stock Company, I have not least doubt that it is as applicable to the case of a Friendly Society or Joint Stock Company as it is to the least knowledge of what goes on. Court of justice must be perfectly report and to false statements than Company and if a libel against an business can be and ought to be fortiori that a libel likely to injure strained by injunction. The effect of registering a society is to render it a body corporate. The remedy of a creditor in sections 36 and 39 and the exception right of Government under s 44 to have direct recourse against the members demonstrates the general rule to be contrary. 12 Pat L T 619—A 1 R 1931 Part 321 (F B)

19 Subject to any prior claim of the Government in respect of land revenue or any money recoverable as land revenue or of a landlord in respect of rent or any money recoverable as rent a registered society shall be entitled in priority to other creditors to enforce any outstanding demand due to the society from a member or past member—

- (a) in respect of the supply of seed or manure or of the loan of money for the purchase of seed or manure—upon the crops or other agricultural produce of such member or person at any time within eighteen months from the date of such supply or loan,
- (b) in respect of the supply of cattle, fodder for cattle, agricultural or industrial implements or machinery, or raw materials for manufacture, or of the loan of money for the purchase of any of the foregoing things—upon any such things so supplied, or purchased in whole or in part from any such loan, or on any articles manufactured from raw materials so supplied or purchased

Notes—This section extends from one year to 18 months the term of lien on

20 A registered society shall have a charge upon the share or interest in the capital and on the deposits of a member or past member and upon any dividend bonus or profits payable to a member or past member in respect of any debt due from such member or past member to the society, and may set off any sum credited or payable to a member or past member in or towards payment of any such debt

Notes—By an application made under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure a registered Co-operative Society cannot enforce its prior claim within the meaning of section 19 as against a judgment creditor at whose instance property is going to be sold if they have no decree or charge under section 20 of this Act. Other remedies may still be open to such society. 18 C W N 1140. So long as a Co-operative Society is carrying on business it cannot be held to be precluded from exercising the right of set off mentioned in this section. In re Gwaesry Gweithy v Industrial and Provident Society, Dwyer v Morgan, (1901) 2 K B 477.

21 Subject to the provisions of section 20, the share or interest of a member in the capital of a registered society shall not be liable to attachment or sale under any decree or order of a Court of Justice in respect of any debt or liability incurred by such member, and neither the Official Assignee under the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, * 1909, nor a Receiver under the Provincial Insolvency Act, † 1907 shall be entitled to or have any claim on such share or interest.

22 (1) On the death of a member a registered society may transfer the share or interest of the deceased member to the person nominated in accordance with the rules made in this behalf or, if there is no person so nominated, to such person as may appear to the committee to be the heir or legal representative of the deceased member, or pay to such nominee, heir or legal representative, as the case may be, a sum representing the value of such member's share or interest, as ascertained in accordance with the rules or by laws.

Provided that—

(i) in the case of a society with unlimited liability, such nominee, heir or legal representative, as the case may be, may require payment by the society of the value of the share or interest of the deceased member ascertained as aforesaid,

(ii) in the case of a society with limited liability, the society shall transfer the share or interest of the deceased member to such nominee heir or legal representative, as the case may be, being qualified in accordance with the rules and by laws for membership of the society or on his application within one month of the death of the deceased member to any person specified in the application who is so qualified.

(2) A registered society may pay all other moneys due to the deceased member from the society to such nominee, heir or legal representative, as the case may be.

(3) All transfers and payments made by a registered society in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be valid and effectual against any demand made upon the society by any other person.

Notes—According to s 58 of the English Friendly Societies Act, 1896 in default of nomination by a member, a society may distribute any sum not exceeding one hundred pounds on his death intestate, without letters of administration amongst (or in an industrial and provident society) as they may deem

The power of the committee to distribute the property is entirely discretionary, and they cannot be compelled by action to exercise their discretion. Esterly v Tadmore Co-operative Society (1896) 1 Q B 461.

23. The liability of a past member for the debts of a registered society as they existed at the time when he ceased to be a member shall continue for period of two years from the date of his ceasing to be a member.

24 The estate of a deceased member shall be liable for a period of one year from the time of his decease for the debts of a registered society as they existed at the time of his decease

Notes—Section 24 cannot be called to aid except in liquidation proceedings under this section. 84 Ind. Cas. 964. The provisions of this section are only operative if there has been liquidation of the registered society under section 42 of the Act. It is not open to a judgment debtor to call in aid the provisions of s. 24 as an answer to the claim of the decree holder to execute the decree. 40 C. L. J. 254.

25. Any register or list of members or shares kept by any registered society shall be prima facie evidence of any of the following particulars entered therein—

(a) the date at which the name of any person was entered in such register or list as a member,

(b) the date at which any such person ceased to be a member.

Notes—This section is based on provisions in the English Industrial and Provident Societies Act. It makes the register of members prima facie evidence of the date of commencement and cessation of membership. Statement of Objects and Reasons.

26 A copy of any entry in a book of a registered society regularly kept in the course of business, shall, if certified in such manner as may be prescribed by the rules, be received, in any suit or legal proceeding as prima facie evidence of the existence of such entry and shall be admitted of the matters transactions and accounts therein recorded in every case where and to the same extent as the original entry itself is admissible.

Notes—This section is also based on provisions in the English Industrial and Provident Societies Act. It provides for proof of entries in the books of a registered society.

Exemption from compulsory registration of instruments relating to shares and debentures of registered society

27 Nothing in section 17, sub-section (c) clauses (b) and (c) of the Indian Registration Act,* 1908, shall apply to—

(1) any instrument relating to shares in a registered society, notwithstanding that the assets of such society consist in whole or in part of immovable property, or

(2) any debenture issued by any such society and not creating, declaring, assigning, limiting or extinguishing any right, title or interest to or in immovable property except in so far as it entitles the holder to the security afforded by a registered instrument whereby the society has mortgaged, conveyed or otherwise transferred the whole or part of its immovable property or any interest therein to trustees upon trust for the benefit of the holders of such debentures, or

(3) any endorsement upon or transfer of any debenture issued by any such society.

Notes—Various facilities are given in this Act to encourage Co-operative Societies.

Power to exempt from income tax, stamp-duty and registration fees

28 (1) The Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, may, in the case of any registered society or class of registered society remit—

the income tax payable in respect of the profits of the society or of the dividends or other payments received by the members of the society on account of profits,

"(2) The local Government by notification in the local official Gazette, may, in the case of any registered society or class of registered society, remit—

- (f) provide for general meetings of the members and for the procedure at such meetings and the powers to be exercised by such meetings ,
- (g) provide for the appointment, suspension and removal of the members of the committee and other officers, and for the procedure at meetings of the committee and for the powers to be exercised and the duties to be performed by the committee and other officers ,
- (h) prescribe the accounts and books to be kept by a society and provide for the audit of such accounts and the charges, if any, to be made for such audit, and for the periodical publication of a balance sheet showing the assets and liabilities of a society ,
- (i) prescribe the returns to be submitted by a society to the Registrar and provide for the persons by whom and the form in which such returns shall be submitted ,
- (j) provide for the persons by whom and the form in which copies of entries in books of societies may be certified
- (k) provide for the formation and maintenance of a register of members and where the liability of the members is limited by shares, of a register of shares ,
- (l) provide that any dispute touching the business of a society between members or past members of the society or persons claiming through a member or past member or between a member or past member or persons so claiming and the committee or any officer shall be referred to the Registrar for decision or, if he so directs, to arbitration and prescribe the mode of appointing an arbitrator or arbitrators and the procedure to be followed in proceedings before the Registrar or such arbitrator or arbitrators and the enforcement of the decisions of the Registrar or the awards of arbitrators ,
- (m) provide for the withdrawal and expulsion of members and for the payments if any to be made to members who withdraw or are expelled and for the liabilities of past members ,
- (n) provide for the mode in which the value of a deceased member's interest shall be ascertained, and for the nomination of a person to whom such interest may be paid or transferred ,
- (o) prescribe the payments to be made and the conditions to be complied with by members applying for loans the period for which loans may be made, and the amount which may be lent, to an individual member ,
- (p) provide for the formation and maintenance of reserve funds, and the objects to which such funds may be applied, and for the investment of any funds under the control of the society ,
- (q) prescribe the extent to which a society may limit the number of its members ,
- (r) prescribe the conditions under which profits may be distributed to the members of a society with unlimited liability and the maximum rate of dividend which may be paid by societies ,

- (s) subject to the provisions of section 39, determine in what cases an appeal shall lie from the orders of the Registrar and prescribe the procedure to be followed in presenting and disposing of such appeals, and
- (t) prescribe the procedure to be followed by a liquidator appointed under section 42, and the cases in which an appeal shall lie from the order of such liquidator

(3) The Local Government may delegate, subject to such conditions, if any, as it thinks fit, all or any of its powers to make rules under this section to any authority specified in the order of delegation

(4) The power to make rules conferred by this section is subject to the condition of the rules being made after previous publication

(5) All rules made under this section shall be published in the local official Gazette, and on such publication shall have effect as if enacted in this Act

Notes—Sub clause 2 (m) and (t) and 3 are new. PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL

Received the G G's Assent on the 24th February, 1914

An Act to modify and add to the provisions of the Copyright Act, 1911

WHEREAS it is expedient to modify and add to the provisions of the Copyright Act, 1911, in its application to British India, it is hereby enacted as follows—

Notes—The question of the amendment of the Indian Copyright Act (XX of 1847) has been considered on several occasions since 1854 on the ground that the Act was incomplete and did not provide among other matters for the prohibition of copy right in photographs translations newspapers, telegrams etc Legislation however, has been postponed in view of possibility of an amendment of the English Acts on the subject of Copy right In 1908 a conference and convention to which Great Britain was a party was held in Berlin with the object of bringing the domestic laws of all countries concerned into harmony with one another so as to obtain unification of that convention involved questions were examined by a strong deputation of Trade which came to the unanimous conclusion accepted by Great Britain with as few reservations as possible

An imperial copy right conference was subsequently convened in 1910 containing representatives of the self governing dominions and of the India office, Colonial office etc. It endorsed the recommendation of the Board of Trade Committee and recommended that an Act dealing with the essentials of Imperial Copy right law should be passed by the Imperial Parliament and that this Act should be expressed to extend to all British possessions subject to the rights of self governing dominions and possessions to modify or add to its provisions by legislation in certain cases affecting only procedure and remedies

A Draft Bill was approved by the conference and eventually passed into law as the Copyright Act 1911 (1 & 2 Geo V c 46) which came into operation in the right from 42 years to one of life and 50 years subject to certain conditions

registration of copyright

(iii) The extension of the scope of copyright

(iv) The substitution of one Act for several on the subject of copyright

The Government of India considered that the early introduction of the Act into India was desirable both for imperial and international as well as domestic reasons and consulted Local Governments in regard to the modifications and additions referred to in section 27 of the Act that might be necessary to suit the special conditions. On account having regard to the serious on the English authors the Gazette of India on 31st of modification or additions of the news of the Local Governments. These are in substantial agreement with those of the Government of India who propose by virtue of the powers conferred by section 27 of the Act, 1911 to pass the Draft Bill which embodies the modifications and the addition to the Act which are considered desirable together with certain formal and necessary alterations due to difference between English and Indian administration and procedure

It will be observed that the changes proposed are as few as possible in view of the desirability of securing that uniformity throughout the Empire which was advocated by the Imperial Copyright Conference of 1910.—Statement of Objects and Reasons

European countries and vernacular translations from English and from one vernacular to another are not only common but serve the useful purpose for disseminating knowledge. It is proposed therefore, that translations of works first published in British India should be permitted from the date of first publication provided that no objection has been given to the rule as a safeguard of and a reasonable protection of the public.

Statement of Objects and Reasons

5 In the application of the Copyright Act to musical works the authors whereof were at the time of the making of the musical works made by resident of, or first published in, British India, works resident in British India, or to musical works first published in British India, the term "musical work" shall, save as otherwise expressly provided by the Copyright Act mean "any combination of melody and harmony, or either of them which has been reduced to writing."

Notes.—The provisions of section 19 of the Act of 1911 are new and in view of the peculiar conditions of Indian music, objections have been urged against the application of this section in toto to Indian works. It is pointed out that it is impossible in most cases to identify the original composer or author and the majority of the Indian melodies have not been written in staff notation except through the medium of the phonograph and are subject to infinite variety of notation and time. If under these circumstances, section 19 is adopted with its retrospective principle there may be fictitious claims of ownership in musical works and much confusion in the definition is proposed to be attained in the

English Musical Copyright Act 1902 viz musical work means any combination of melody and harmony or either of them printed or reduced to writing.—Statement of Objects and Reasons

8 (1) Copies made out of British India of any work in which copyright subsists, which if made in British India would infringe copyright, and as to which the owner of the copyright gives notice in writing by himself or his agent to the Chief Customs officer as defined in the Sea Customs Act, 1878 that he is desirous that such copies should not be imported into British India, shall not be so imported, and shall, subject to the provisions of this section, be deemed to be prohibited imports within the meaning of section 18 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

(2) Before detaining any such copies, or taking any further proceedings with a view to the confiscation thereof, such Chief Customs officer, or any other officer appointed by the 'Customs authority' in this behalf, may require the regulations under this section, whether as to information, security, conditions or other matters, to be complied with, and may satisfy himself, in accordance with these regulations, that the copies are such as are prohibited by this section to be imported.

(3) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make regulations, either general or special, respecting the detention, and the confiscation of copies the importation of which is prohibited by this section, and the conditions if any, to be fulfilled before such detention and confiscation, and may, by such regulations, determine the information, notices and security to be given, and the evidence requisite for any of the purposes of this section, and the mode of verification of such evidence.

(6) This section shall have effect as the necessary modification of section 14 of the Copyright Act

Notes.—Section 18 (a) of the Sea Customs Act 1878 prohibits importation in the case of books alone the copyright whereof subsists in India. In view of the extension of the Act of 1911 to works other than books and the difference in procedure it is proposed to repeal this section and enact the appropriate provisions as the necessary modifications referred to in section 14 (7) of the Act of 1911.

MISCELLANEOUS

Courts having civil jurisdiction regarding infringement of copyright

13. Every suit or other civil proceeding regarding infringement of copyright shall be instituted and tried in the High Court or the Court of the District Judge

Notes—On account of the technicalities of the subject of copyright and of the greater finality that such a tribunal will afford it has been considered advisable to give jurisdiction to High Courts only in all suits or civil proceedings regarding infringement of copyright—Statement of Objects and Reasons

14 No suit or other civil proceeding instituted after the 30th of October, 1912, regarding infringement of copyright in any book the author whereof was at the time of making the book resident in British India, or of any book first published in British India, shall be dismissed by reason only that the registration of such book had not been effected in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Copyright Act, 1847

Notes—This clause which is self explanatory has been added in view of a recent decision in Fris v Morris reported in the Law Journal of March 29th 1913—Statement of Objects and Reasons Where the action commenced when Act of 1914 was in force non registration of the copyright does not effect the dismissing of the action A I R 1927 Mad 981=53 M L J 529

COPYRIGHT ACT, 1911.

1 &amp; 2 Geo V. Chapter 46

An Act to amend and consolidate the Law relating to copyright

[16TH DECEMBER 1911]

Be it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows —

PART I

IMPERIAL COPYRIGHT

Rights

1 (1) Subject to the provisions of this act copyright shall subsist throughout the parts of His Majesty's dominion to which this Act extends for the term hereinafter mentioned in every original literary dramatic, musical and artistic work if—

(a) in the case of a published work the work was first published within , and

(b) in ' it the date of the -ent within such parts of his Majesty's dominions as aforesaid ,

but in no other works except so far as the protection conferred by this Act is extended by Orders in Council thereunder relating to self governing dominions to which this Act does not extend and to foreign countries

(2) For the purposes of this Act 'copyright' means the sole right to produce, or reproduce the work or any substantial part thereof in any material form whatsoever, to perform, or in the case of a lecture to deliver, the work or any substantial part thereof in public, if the work is unpublished, to publish the work or any substantial part thereof, and shall include the sole right—

(a) to produce, reproduce, perform, or publish any translation of the work ,

(b) in the case of a dramatic work, to convert it into a novel or other non-dramatic work ,

- (c) in the case of a novel or other non dramatic work, or of an artistic work, to convert it into a dramatic work, by way of performance in public or otherwise ;
- (d) in the case of a literary, dramatic, or musical work, to make any record, perforated roll, cinematograph film, or other contrivance by means of which the work may be mechanically performed or delivered ;

and to authorise any such acts as aforesaid.

(3) For the purposes of this Act, publication, in relation to any work, means the issue of copies of the work to the public, and does not include the performance in public of a dramatic or musical work, the delivery in public of a lecture, the exhibition in public of an artistic work, or the construction of an architectural work of art, but, for the purposes of this provision, the issue of photographs and engravings of works of sculpture and architectural works of art shall not be deemed to be publication of such works

Original—According to this section the work must be original. So far as the copyright in a reported speech is concerned, a reporter has no copyright in the speech of a person but he has such rights in the reports of those speech Walter v. Lane, (100) A C 539 on appeal from (1890) 2 Ch 749. In the same case, Lord Chancellor said that copyright "is given by the statute to the first producer of a book whether that book be wise or foolish accurate or inaccurate, of literary merit or no merit whatever." In University of London Press v. University Tutorial Press (1916) 2 Ch 601, Peterson J said "The word 'original' does not in this connection mean that the work must be an expression of original or inventive thought. Copyright Acts are not concerned with the originality of ideas but with the expression of thought and in the case of literary work with the expression of the thought in print or writing. The originality which is required relates to the expression of the thought. But the Act does not require that the work must not be copied from another work—that it should originate from the author." Originality relates to the expression of thought. The work must not be copied from another work. 48 B 309=28 C W N 613=40 T L R 186 (P C). The word "original" should be understood to mean that the work must be the brain the benefit of that use, divested of its plain and obvious words for word taken.

In Frederick Emerson v. Chas Davis, 3 Story U S Rep 768, the plaintiff had compiled and published a book entitled, "The North American Arithmetic," described as containing elementary lessons by Frederick H. Amson, the purpose and object of the publication being to teach. The complaint was that the defendants on a date consent exposed for sale and sold fifty copies of to have been composed by the defendant Davis. The main defence was that the copies of the same. The main defence was that the sold by the defendants was composed by themse. part of it was copied adopted or taken from the plaintiff's book or any part thereof. At p 778 of the report the learned Judge expressed himself thus: "The book of the plaintiff is, in my judgment new and original in the sense in which the question is not whether the never been used before, or purpose. The true ques tion of materials have been used before for the same purpose or for any other purpose. If they have not, then the plaintiff is entitled to a copyright, although he may have gathered hints for his plan and arrangement or parts of his plan and arrangement from existing and known sources. He may have borrowed much of his materials from others, but if they are combined in a different manner from what was in use before . . . he is entitled to a copyright. It is true that he does not thereby acquire the right to appropriate to himself the materials which were common to all persons before so as to exclude those persons from a future use of such materials but then they have no right to use such materials with its improvements superadded, whether they consist in plan, arrangement or illustrations or combinations, for these are strictly his own. In truth, in literature, in science and in art there are and can be few, if any, things which, in an abstract sense, are strictly new and original throughout.

In the case of Macmillan v Suresh Chandra Deb 17 Cal 951, the question was whether copyright can exist in a selection. In that case Sir Arthur Wilson said at p 961 "In the case of work not original in the proper sense of the term, but composed or compiled or prepared from materials open to all the fact that one man has produced such a work does not take away from any one else the right to produce another work of the same kind, and in doing so to use all the materials open to him. But, as the law is conclusively stated by Hall, V C in Hogg v Scott, L R 18 Eq 444 at p 458, the true principle in all these cases is that the defendant is not at liberty to use or avail himself of the labour which the plaintiff has been at for the purpose of producing his work that is in fact merely to take away the result of another man's labour or in other words his property."

Similarly in Longman v Winchester 16 Ves 269 271 (1809) Lord Eldon said "A work consisting of a selection from various authors, two men might perhaps make the same selection but that must be by resorting to the original authors, not by taking advantage of the selection already made by another." This passage was approved of by Lord Hatherly in Spire v Brown, 6 W R (Eng) 852, see also Maffat and Paige v Gill (1902) 84 L T 456 on appeal 86 L T 465.

In Waller v Lane (1900) A C 539 Lord Davy in his judgment pointed out that copyright is merely the right of multiplying copies of a published writing and has nothing to do with the originality or literary merits of the author or composer "What is the precise amount of the knowledge labour judgment or literary skill or taste which the author must bestow upon its composition in order to acquire copyright in it within the meaning of the Copyright Act of 1911 cannot be defined in precise terms. In every case it must depend largely on the special facts of that case, and must in each case be very much a question of degree." Per Lord Atkinson in 28 C W N 613 at p 613 P C.

In the case of Black v Murry 9 Retue 341 (1870) which dealt with the alleged infringement of the copyright in a volume entitled "Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border" the original edition of which was no longer protected by copyright but a new edition was published to which valuable notes were added Lord Kinloch, in delivering the judgment dealt with the question of the effect of these notes upon the edition in which they were printed, in a very clear and forcible judgment. He said at p 355 of the report—"I think it is clear it will not create a copyright in a new edition of a work of which the copyright has expired merely to make a few amendments of the text or to add a few unimportant notes. To create a copyright by alterations of the text these must be extensive and substantial practically making a new book. With regard to notes in like manner they must exhibit an addition to the work which is not superficial or colourable but imports to the book a true and real value over and above that belonging to the text. This value may perhaps be rightly expressed by saying that the book will procure purchasers in the market on special accounts of

In J Arnold v Houlston the plaintiffs were the publishers of a book written by Dr Brewster called the "Guide to Science." The Vice Chancellor

S W Pagewood having fully ascertained the object with which this book was compiled and published and the sources from which Dr Brewer obtained the information necessary to enable him to write it stated these matters in the following passage and laid down the principle of law applicable to the facts. He said If any one by pains and labour collects and reduces into the form of a systematic course of instruction those questions which he may find ordinary persons asking in reference to the common phenomena of life with answers, to those questions and explanations of those phenomena whether such explanations and answers were furnished by his own recollection of his former general reading or out of works consulted by him for the express purpose, the reduction of the questions so collected with such answers under certain heads and in a scientific form is amply sufficient to constitute an original work of which copyright will be protected. Therefore I have no

Literary—The work must not only be original it must be a 'literary work' Copinger p 50. The examination papers set by two examiners are original literary works within the meaning of this section and is a proper subject of copyright University of London Press Ltd v University Tutorial Press Ltd (1916) 2 Ch 601

Abridgement—In an abridgement the idea must be preserved and expressed in author's own language. A book in which certain passages are copied and others are omitted is not an abridgement. In order to constitute an original literary work some skill must be manifested in arranging the selection. In order to constitute a new work, a new or a special plan, arrangement, or whether in a new amenda by alterations of the text these must be extensive and substantial practically making a new book 48 B 308=28 C W N 613 P C see also Black v Murray 9 Sc Sess Cas 3rd Ser 341 Hedderwick v Griffin 3 Sc Sess Cas 2nd Ser 383 Thomas v Tuner, (1886) 33 Ch D 292, Blacklock v Pearson (1915) 2 Ch 576

his plan and arrangement or parts of his plan and arrangement from existing and known sources. He may have borrowed much of his materials from others, but if they are combined in a different manner from what was in use before, he is entitled to a copyright. It is true that he does not thereby acquire the right to appropriate to himself the materials which he has so used, so as to exclude those persons from a future use of no right to use such materials with its improve consist in plan, arrangement, or illustrations strictly his own. In truth, in literature, in science and in art there are and can be few, if any, things which, in an abstract sense, are strictly new and original throughout.

In the case of Macmillan v Suresh Chandra Deb, 17 Cal 951, the question was whether copyright can exist in a selection. In that case Sir Arthur Wilson said at p 961: "In the case of work not original in the proper sense of the term, but composed or compiled or prepared from materials open to all, the fact that one man has produced such a work does not take away from any one else the right to produce another work of the open to him. But, as the law is, R 18 Eq 444 at p 458, the is not at liberty to use or avail for the purpose of producing his work, that is in fact, merely to take away the result of another man's labour or, in other words, his property."

Similarly in Longman v Winchester, 16 Ves 269 271 (1809) Lord Eldon said: "A work consisting of a selection from the same selection but that must be taking advantage of the selection already approved of by Lord Hatherly in Spices v Brown, 6 W. In the case of Black v. Murry 9, Retic, 341 (1870), which dealt with the alleged infringement of the copyright in a volume entitled "Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border", the original edition of which was no longer protected by copyright but a new edition was published to which valuable notes were added Lord Kintock, in delivering the judgment, dealt with the question of the effect of these notes upon the edition in which they were printed, in a very clear and forcible judgment. He said at p 355 of the report: "I think it is clear it will not create a copyright in a new edition of a work of which the copyright has expired merely to make a few amendments of the text or to add a few unimportant notes. To create a copyright by alterations of the text these must be extensive and substantial, practically making a new

his plan and arrangement or parts of his plan and arrangement from existing and known sources. He may have borrowed much of his materials from others, but if they are combined in a different manner from what was in use before, he is entitled to a copyright. It is true that he does not thereby acquire the right to appropriate to himself the materials which were common to all persons before, so as to exclude those persons from a future use of such materials but then they have no right to use such materials with its improvements superadded, whether they consist in plan, arrangement, or illustrations or combinations, for these are strictly his own. In truth, in literature, in science and in art there are and can be few, if any, things which, in an abstract sense, are strictly new and original throughout.

In the case of Macmillan v Suresh Chandra Deb, 17 Cal 951, the question was whether copyright can exist in a selection. In that case Sir Arthur Wilson said at p 961: "In the case of work not original in the proper sense of the term, but composed or compiled or prepared from materials open to all, the fact that one man has produced such a work does not take away from any one else the right to produce another work of the same kind, and in doing so to use all the materials open to him. But, as the law is concisely stated by Hall, V. C in Hogg v. Scott, L R 18 Eq 444 at p 458, the true principle in all these cases is that the defendant is not at liberty to use or avail himself of the labour which the plaintiff has been at for the purpose of producing his work, that is in fact, merely to take away the result of another man's labour or, in other words, his property."

Similarly in Longman v Winchester, 16 Ves 269 271 (1809) Lord Eldon said "A work consisting of a selection from va the same selection but that must be taking advantage of the selection already approved of by Lord Hatherly in Spire v Brown, 6 W R (Eng) 852; see also Maffat and Paige v Gill, (1902) 84 L T 456 on appeal 86 L T 465

In Walter v Lane, (1900) A C 539 Lord Davey in his judgment pointed out that copyright is merely the right of multiplying copies of a published writing, and has no other value. "What is the value of a literary skill or taste which requires copyright in terms. In every case it must depend largely on the special facts of that case, and must in each case be very much a question of degree." Per Lord Atkinson in 28 C W N 613 at p 623 P C

2 (1) Copyright in a work shall be deemed to be infringed by any person who, without the consent of the owner of the copyright, does anything the sole right to do which is by this Act conferred on the owner of the copyright, Provided that the following act shall not constitute an infringement of copyright—

(i) Any fair dealing with any work for the purposes of private study, research, criticism, review or newspaper summary

- (ii) Where the author of an artistic work is not the owner of the copy right therein, the use by the author of any mould, cast, sketch, plan, model, or study made by him for the purpose of the work, provided that he does not thereby repeat or imitate the main design of that work
- (iii) The making or publishing of paintings, drawings, engravings, or photographs of a work of sculpture or artistic craftsmanship, if permanently situate in a public place or building, or the making or publishing of paintings, drawings, engravings or photographs (which are not in the nature of architectural drawings or plans) of any architectural work of art
- (iv) The publication in a collection, mainly composed of non copyright matter, bona fide intended for the use of schools, and so described in the title and in any advertisements issued by the publisher, of short passages from published literary works not themselves published for the use of schools in which copyright subsists. Provided that not more than two of such passages from works by the same author are published by the same publisher within five years, and that the source from which such passages are taken is acknowledged
- (v) The publication in a newspaper of a report of a lecture delivered in public, unless the report is prohibited by conspicuous written notice by the lecturer that the report shall not be published, or
- (vi) The reading or recitation in public by one person of any reasonable extract from any published work.

(2) Copyright in a work shall also be deemed to be infringed by any person who—

- (a) sells or lets for hire or by way of trade exposes or offers for sale or hire, or
- (b) distributes either for the purposes of trade or to such an extent as to affect prejudicially the owner of the copyright, or
- (c) by way of trade exhibits in public, or
- (d) imports for sale or hire into any part of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends,

any work which to his knowledge infringes copyright or would infringe copyright if it had been made within the part of His Majesty's dominions in or into which the sale or hiring, exposure, offering for sale or hire, distribution, exhibition, or importation took place.

(3) Copyright in a work shall also be deemed to be infringed by any person who for his private profit permits a theatre or other place of entertainment to be used for the performance in public of the work without the consent of the owner of the copyright, unless he was not aware, and had no reasonable ground for suspecting, that the performance would be an infringement of copyright.

Any person—This term includes company Marshall v Gibbons, (1874) L R 9 Ch 518, McLean v Mody, 20 Sess Cas 1154

Consent—No written consent is necessary. Consent may be presumed from circumstances Coper v Stephens, (1895) 1 Ch 567; Damison v Ashdown, (1897) 13 T L R 226, Boitrus v Cooke, (1903) 2 K B 227, 236. A licensee can sue for infringement British Film Actors v Glover, (1915) 1 K B 299.

Artistic Work—This Act includes among artistic works, works of painting drawing, sculpture and architectural works of art and engravings and photographs. Vide section 35 (1), see also Graves Case (1869) L R 4 Q B 715. But an artist has no monopoly in the subject De Berenger v Webley (1819) 2 Stark N P 548. Blackwell v Hasper (1740) 2 Atk 94. In Graves Case (1869) L R 4 Q B 723 Blackburn J observed as follows in regard to photographs. The distinction between an original painting and its copy is well understood but it is difficult to say what is meant by an original photograph. All photographs are copies of some object, such as painting or a statue and it seems to me that a photograph taken from a picture is an original photograph in so far that to copy it is an infringement of this statute. As I have already pointed out by section 2 although it is unlawful to copy a photograph or negative it is permitted to copy the subject matter of the photograph by taking another photograph.

Publication—A work is said to be published when it is made available to the public in any form.

2 (1) Copyright in a work shall be deemed to be infringed by any person who, without the consent of the owner of the copyright, does anything the sole right to do which is by this Act conferred on the owner of the copyright, Provided that the following act shall not constitute an infringement of copyright—

(i) Any fair dealing with any work for the purposes of private study, research, criticism, review, or newspaper summary

- (ii) Where the author of an artistic work is not the owner of the copy right therein the use by the author of any mould cast, sketch plan, model, or study made by him for the purpose of the work provided that he does not thereby repeat or imitate the main design of that work
- (iii) The making or publishing of printings, drawings, engravings, or photographs of a work of sculpture or artistic craftsmanship if permanently situate in a public place or building or the making or publishing of paintings, drawings, engravings or photographs (which are not in the nature of architectural drawings or plans) of any architectural work of art
- (iv) The publication in a collection mainly composed of non copyright matter, bona fide intended for the use of schools, and so described in the title and in any advertisements issued by the publisher, of short passages from published literary works not themselves published for the use of schools in which copyright subsists. Provided that not more than two of such passages from works by the same author are published by the same publisher within five years, and that the source from which such passages are taken is acknowledged
- (v) The publication in a newspaper of a report of a lecture delivered in public, unless the report is prohibited by conspicuous written or printed notice affixed before and maintained until the lecture at or about the main entrance of the building in which the lecture is given and except whilst the building is being used for public worship in a position near the entrance, but nothing in this paragraph shall affect the provisions of newspaper summaries,
- (vi) The reading or recitation in public by one person of an extract from any published work, or the republication or performance of a dramatic work without the consent of the author or of the publisher of the work.

(2) Copyright in a work shall also be held by a person who—

- (a) sells or lets for hire or by way of hire, or
- (b) distributes either for the purpose of sale or hire, or in a manner likely to affect prejudicially the owner of the work, or
- (c) by way of trade exhibits in public, or
- (d) imports for sale or hire into any country in which this Act extends,

any work which to his knowledge infringes the copyright if it had been made within the period into which the sale or hiring, exposure, distribution, exhibition, or importation took place.

(3) Copyright in a work shall also be held by a person who for his private profit permits a theatrical performance to be used for the performance in public of the work, or the owner of the copyright, unless he was not aware of the performance, or for suspecting, that the performance would be made.

Any person—This term includes compiler, &c. 9 Ch 518, McLean v. Mody, 20 Seas. Cas. 11

Fair Dealing—As a privilege of fair use the provision of this Act shall be the first photograph, or portrait, the name of some other person and in pursuance of that order, the contrary, the person named shall be the

some other person under the work was made by that person, the person by whom in the absence of any owner of the copyright, or other contribution to a literary, dramatic, or musical work shall, in the contrary, be deemed to be the publication of the work in a paper, magazine, or to the proprietor of the first publication; but cases where there is some injury, yet equity will not interfere if the use, is where the amount copied is small and if had motive, or where there is a well founded doubt as to the legal title, or where there has been long acquiescence in the infringement or culpable laches and negligence in seeking redress, especially if it appear that the delay has misled the respondent" Lawrence v. Dona, 4 Cliff 1. Quotations reasonable in quantity, number and length is fair if within reasonable limits Sampson v. Seaver Radford, 140 Fed 539, Chatterton v. Cave, 3 A C 483

Infringement of copyright—In an action for an injunction and damages for an infringement of plaintiff's copyright, if it be found that even inaccuracies in both the work are indetical, that references of significance in plaintiff's work are reproduced in defendant's work but by reason of absence of other matter, have no significance therein and there is identity not merely of information but of language, that leaves no doubt that the work of the defendant is a copy of the plaintiff's in a very high degree 67 Ind Cas 983

The moral basis on which the principle of these protective provisions rest is the Eighth commandment, "Thou shalt not steal" 28 C W N 613 P C In Walter v. Lane, (1900) A C 539 at p 547 Lord Halsbury said "I should very much regret if I were compelled to come to a conclusion that the state of the law permitted one man to make a profit and to appropriate to himself what has been produced

3. The term for which copyright shall subsist shall, except as otherwise expressly provided by this Act, be the life of the author and a period of fifty years after his death

Term of copyright

Provided that any time after the expiration of twenty five years, or in the case of a work in which copyright subsists at the passing of this Act thirty years, from the death of the author of a published work, copyright in the work shall not be deemed to be infringed by the reproduction of the work for sale if the person reproducing the work proves that he has given the prescribed notice in writing of his intention to reproduce the work, and that he has paid in the prescribed manner to, or for the benefit of, the owner of the copyright royalties in respect of all copies of the work sold by him calculated at the rate of ten per cent on the price at which he publishes the work, and, for the purposes of this proviso, the Board of Trade may make regulations prescribing the mode in which notices are to be given, and the particulars to be given in such notices, and the mode, time, and frequency of the payment of royalties, including (if they think fit) regulations requiring payment in advance or otherwise securing the payment of royalties

Notes—"The proper period of copyright has long been a matter of controversy. Some have contended that the period ought, in the interests of literature, to be a very short one, others urge in the same interest that it should be long. Those who argue in favour of a long period contend that it is a necessary monopoly, whilst upholders of copyright to prevent others multiplying copies of it sometimes argued that the existence of it in literature, but it is exceedingly doubtful on Copyright p 84. At the conference in 1907 for the purpose of considering what modifications ought to be made in the Berne convention, it was decided that the minimum protection accorded to an author should be during his life and for a period of fifty years after his death

This appears to be a reasonable period and it has now been adopted by the works of the same author

main at one and the same

"The above proviso is to apply to posthumous works as if the author died at the date when his work was first published, performed or delivered in public. There is no similar provision expressly extending the proviso to photographs and mechanical contrivances and it is submitted that these cannot be compulsorily reproduced upon a royalty basis."—Copinger p 88

4. If, at any time after the death of the author of a literary, dramatic, or musical work which has been published or performed in public, a complaint is made to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the owner of the copyright in the work has refused to republish or to allow the republication of the work or has refused to allow the performance in public of the work and that by reason of such refusal the work is withheld from the public, the owner of the copyright may be ordered to grant a licence to reproduce the work or perform the work in public, as the case may be, on such terms and subject to such conditions as the judicial Committee may think fit

Notes—"There must be a refusal to republish or allow republication or performance of such refusal the work is
r the death of the author" Oldfield's

Ownership of copyright, etc Act, the author of a work shall be the first owner of the copyright therein

Provided that—

(a) where, in the case of an engraving, photograph, or portrait, the plate or other original was ordered by some other person and was made for valuable consideration in pursuance of that order, then, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, the person by whom such plate or other original was ordered shall be the first owner of the copyright

(b) where the author was in the employment of some other person under a contract of service or apprenticeship and the work was made in the course of his employment by that person, the person by whom the author was employed shall, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, be the first owner of the copyright, but where the work is an article or other contribution to a newspaper, magazine or similar periodical, there shall, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, be deemed to be reserved to the author a right to restrain the publication of the work, otherwise than as part of a newspaper, magazine, or similar periodical

(2) The owner of the copyright in any work may assign the right, either wholly or partially, and either generally or subject to limitations, to the United Kingdom or any self governing dominion or other part of his Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends, and either for the whole term of the copyright or for any part thereof, and may grant any interest in

Civil Remedies.

6. (1) Where copyright in any work has been infringed, the owner of the copyright shall, except as otherwise provided by this Act, be entitled to all such remedies by way of injunction or interdict, damages, accounts, and otherwise, as are or may be conferred by law for the infringement of a right

(2) The costs of all parties in any proceedings in respect of the infringement of copyright shall be in the absolute discretion of the Court

(3) In any action for the infringement of copyright in any work, the work shall be presumed to be a work in which copyright subsists and the plaintiff shall be presumed to be the owner of the copyright, unless the defendant puts in issue the existence of the copyright, or, as the case may be, the title of the plaintiff, and where any such question is in issue, then—

(a) if a name purporting to be that of the author of the work is printed or otherwise indicated thereon in the usual manner, the person whose name is so printed or indicated shall, unless the contrary is proved, be presumed to be the author of the work;

(b) if no name is so printed or indicated, or if the name so printed or indicated is not the author's true name or the name by which he is commonly known and a name purporting to be that of the publisher or proprietor of the work is printed or otherwise indicated thereon in the usual manner, the person whose name is so printed or indicated shall, unless the contrary is proved, be presumed to be the owner of the copyright in the work for the purposes of proceedings in respect of the infringement of copyright therein

Notes—The 'owner of the copyright' is either the original owner or a person who derives title through him. Where the right of the plaintiffs is equitable only, he cannot sue without joining the legal owner. Performing Right Society Ltd v London Theatre of Varieties (1924) A C 1, see also University of London Press v University Tutorial Press (1916) 2 Ch 601, Bowdens v Herbert, (1904) 2 Ch 86. Special damage need not be proved. Exchange Telegraph v Gregory, (1896) 1 Q B 147. A licensee without joining the owner cannot sue. Nelson v Hornumman, (1909) 25 T L R 685, see also Nicol v Stockdale 3 Swan 687, Petty v Taylor, (1897) 1 Ch 467. The infringing copies must be delivered to the owner. Mansell v Valley Printing Co (1908) 1 Ch 567. An application for injunction must be made without any delay. Mawman v Tegg, 2 Russ 385. Baily v Taylor Russ & My 73, Southey v Sherwood 2 Mer 435. Lewis v Chapman, 3 Beav 132, Pitman v Hime, 1 T L R 39. As to method of accounting vide Colburn v Simms 2 Ha 543 560. Where the defendants in an action for damages for infringement of copyright in respect of work do not put in work there is an irrebuttable presumption which copyright exists and the plaintiff is of cases, the Court should be reluctant to question of infringement of copyright with J 134

7 All infringing copies of any work in which copyright subsists, or of any substantial part thereof and all plates used or intended to be used for the production of such infringing copies shall be deemed to be the property of the owner of the copyright, who accordingly may take proceedings for the recovery of the possessions thereof or in respect of the conversion thereof

Notes—Infringing copies mean copies including colourable imitation made or imported in contravention of the provisions of this Act. It is to be observed that proceedings for recovery under this section can only be taken when the whole work of any substantial part thereof has been copied. This is in substantial accordance with the decision of the Court in Seebohm (1888) 39 Ch D 73—Oldfield p 87. One of the co-owners can sue under his section. Vide Laurie v Kenad, (1892) 3 Ch 402, Cecinski v Routledge (1916) 2 K. B 325.

8 Where proceedings are taken in respect of the infringement of the copyright in any work and the defendant in his defence alleges that he was not aware of the existence of the copyright in the work, the plaintiff shall not be entitled to any remedy interdict in respect of the infringement if the date of the infringement he was not aware and had not reasonable ground for suspecting, that the copyright subsisted in the work.

Notes—By Berlin Convention the necessity of registration has been done away with. So there may be cases, in which for want of registration the defendant may not be aware of the existence of the copyright in the work. This section has been enacted to enable a defendant to claim an exemption under this section. A copyright is a proprietary right and as such acted innocently. Mansell v Valley Print proving that the defendant 'was not aware of the existence of the copyright in the work" is on the defendant 'The only grounds for not suspecting copyright appear to be either, (a) that the period of copyright protection has run out, (b) that he thinks that the work is of such a character that it ought not to be a subject of copyright, (c) that the work is a foreign work' Copinger p 173

9. (1) Where the construction of a building or other structure which infringes or which, if completed would infringe the copyright in some other work has been commenced, the owner of the copyright shall not be entitled to obtain an injunction or interdict to restrain the construction of such building or structure or to order its demolition

(2) Such of the other provisions of this Act as provide that an infringing copy of a work shall be deemed to be the property of the owner of the copyright or as impose summary penalties, shall not apply in any case to which this section applies

Notes—In such a case the only remedy of the plaintiff lies in an action for damage As regards amount of damage, vide Lufort v Lallemand, cited in Oldfield p 95, Birn v Keen (1918) 2 Ch 231, Fenning v Wolterhampton, (1914) 31 L T 1171

10 An action in respect of infringement of copyright shall not be commenced after the expiration of three years next after the infringement

Limitation of actions

Notes—This period of limitation applies in an action to be brought under section 7. (Vide Copinger p 179) Moreover the acts which are deemed to be infringements under section (3) are each new infringement, and the period is to be counted from such an act and not from the original making of the work Ibid

Importation of copies

14* (1) Copies made out of the United Kingdom of any work in which copyright subsists which if made in the United Kingdom would infringe copyright, and as to which the owner of the copyright gives notice in writing by himself or his agent to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, that he is desirous that such copies should not be imported into the United Kingdom, shall not be so imported, and shall, subject to the provisions of the section be deemed to be included in table of prohibitions and restrictions contained in section forty two of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, and that section shall apply accordingly.

Importation of copies

(2) Before detaining any such copies or taking any further proceedings with a view to the forfeiture thereof under the law relating to the Customs, the Commissioners of Customs and Excise may require the regulations under this section, whether as to information, conditions or other matters to be complied with, and may satisfy themselves in accordance with those regulations that the copies are such as are prohibited by this section to be imported

(3) The Commissioners of Customs and Excise may make regulations, either general or special, respecting the detention and forfeiture of copies, the importation of which is prohibited by this section, and the conditions, if any, to be fulfilled before such detention, and forfeiture, and may, by such regulations, determine the information, notices, and security to be given, and the evidence requisite for any of the purposes of this section, and the mode of verification of such evidence

(4) The regulations may apply to copies of all works, the importation of which is prohibited by this section, or different regulations may be made in respect of particular works for the informant reimbursing the Commissions and damages incurred in respect

be the owner of the copyright in the work for the purposes of proceedings in respect of the infringement of copyright therein

Notes—The "owner of the copyright" is either the original owner or a person who derives title through him. Where the right of the plaintiffs is equitable only, he cannot sue without joining the legal owner. Performing Right Society Ltd v. London Theatre of Varieties, (1924) A. C. 1; see also London Press v. University Tutorial Press (1916) 2 Ch 601. Special damage need not be proved. Excham. B 147. A licensee without joining the owner (1909) 25 T. L. R. 685, see also Nicol v. Stoc (1897) 1 Ch 467. The infringed copies must be made without any delay. Marriman v. Tegg, & My 73, Southey v. Sherwood, 2 Mer 435; Lewis v. Chapman, 3 Bea 132, Pitman v. Hume, 1 T. L. R. 39. As to method of accounting, vide Colburn v. Simms 2 Ha 543 560. Where the defendants in an action for damages for infringement of copyright in respect of work do not put in issue the existence of the copyright in the work there is an irrebuttable presumption, that the alleged work is a work in which copyright exists and the plaintiff is the owner of the copyright. In this class of cases, the Court should be reluctant to sit as the trier of facts and to decide the question of infringement of copyright without the aid of expert evidence. 39 C. L. J. 134.

7. All infringing copies of any work in which copyright subsists, or of any substantial part thereof and all plates used or intended to be used for the production of such infringing copies shall be deemed to be the property of the owner of the copyright, who accordingly may take proceedings for the recovery of the possessions thereof or in respect of the conversion thereof

Notes—"Infringing copies" mean copies including colourable imitation made or imported in contravention of the provisions of this Act. It is to be observed that proceedings for recovery under this section can only be taken when the whole work of any substantial part thereof is reproduced—when only a few passages were reprinted proper. This is in substantial accordance with the C. L. R. at p 171, where the Court observed that under the 23rd section the proprietor of all copies of another book which contained printed therein a few pages or passages of his book. In such a case the plaintiff would be entitled to delivery for cancellation. Wane v. Seeboken, (1888) 39 Ch D 73—Oldfield p 87. One of the co-owners can sue under his section. Vide Lauri v. Renad, (1892) 3 Ch 402, Cecinski v. Routledge, (1916) 2 K B 325.

8. Where proceedings are taken in respect of the infringement of the copyright in any work and the defendant in his defence alleges that he was not aware of the existence of the copyright in the work, the plaintiff shall not be entitled to any remedy other than an injunction or interdict in respect of the infringement if the defendant proves that at the date of the infringement he was not aware and had not reasonable ground for suspecting, that the copyright subsisted in the work

Notes—By Berlin Convention the necessity of registration has been done away with. So there may be cases, in which for want of registration the defendant may not be aware of the existence of the copyright in the work. This section has been enacted to meet such contingency. In order to entitle to an exemption under this section, must be specifically pleaded. A copyright is a proprietary right and as such it is no defence that the defendant acted innocently. Mansell v. Valley Printing, (1903) 2 Ch 441. The onus of proving that the defendant "was not aware of the existence of the copyright in the work is on the defendant. The only grounds for not suspecting copyright appear to be either, (a) that the period of copyright protection has run out, (b) that he thinks that the work is of such a character that it ought not to be a subject of copyright (c) that the work is a foreign work. Copin Ger p 173

9. (1) Where the construction of a building or other structure which infringes or which if completed would infringe the copyright in some other work has been commenced, the owner of the copyright shall not be entitled to obtain an injunction or interdict to restrain the construction of such building or structure or to order its demolition.

(2) Such of the other provisions of this Act as provide that an infringing copy of a work shall be deemed to be the property of the owner of the copyright or as impose summary penalties shall not apply in any case to which this section applies.

Notes.—In such a case the only remedy of the plaintiff is in an action for damage. As regards amount of damage, vide Lufort v Lallemand, cited in Oldfield p 90, Birn v Keen (1918) 2 Ch 281, Fenning v Wolterhampton (1914) 31 L T 1171.

10. An action in respect of infringement of copyright shall not be commenced after the expiration of three years next after the infringement.

Notes.—The limitation period is to be brought under section deemed to be infringements and is to be counted from Ibid.

Importation of copies

14* (1) Copies made out of the United Kingdom of any work in which copyright subsists which if made in the United Kingdom would infringe copyright, and as to which the owner of the copyright gives notice in writing by himself or his agent to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise that he is desirous that such copies should not be imported into the United Kingdom, shall not be so imported, and shall, subject to the provisions of the section he deemed to be included in table of prohibitions and restrictions contained in section forty two of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, and that section shall apply accordingly.

(2) Before detaining any such copies or taking any further proceedings with a view to the forfeiture thereof under the law relating to the Customs, the Commissioners of Customs and Excise may require the regulations under this section, whether as to information conditions or other matters to be complied with, and may satisfy themselves in accordance with those regulations that the copies are such as are prohibited by this section to be imported.

(3) The Commissioners of Customs and Excise may make regulations, either general or special, respecting the detention and forfeiture of copies the importation of which is prohibited by this section, and the conditions, if any, to be fulfilled before such detention and forfeiture, and may, by such regulations determine the information, notices, and security to be given, and the evidence requisite for any of the purposes of this section, and the mode of verification of such evidence.

(4) The regulations may apply to copies of all works the importation of which is prohibited by this section or different regulations may be made for different classes of such works.

Special Provisions as to certain Works

16. (r) In the case of a work of joint authorship, copyright shall subsist during the life of the author who first dies and for a term of fifty years after his death or during the life of the author who dies last whichever period is the longer, and references in this Act to the period after the expiration of any specified number of years from the death of the author shall be construed as references to the period after the expiration of the like number of years from the death of the author who dies first or after the death of the author who dies last, whichever period may be the shorter, and in the provisions of this Act with respect to the grant of compulsory licenses a reference to the date of the death of the author who dies last shall be substituted for the reference to the date of death of the author

(2) Where, in the case of a work of joint authorship, some one or more of the joint authors do not satisfy the conditions conferring copyright laid down by this Act, the work shall be treated for the purposes of this Act as if the other author or authors had been the sole author or authors thereof

Provided that the term of the copyright shall be the same as it would have been if all the authors had satisfied such conditions as aforesaid

(3) For the purposes of this Act "a work of joint authorship" means a work produced by the collaboration of two or more authors in which the contribution of one author is not distinct from the contribution of the other author or authors

(4) Where a married woman and her husband are joint authors of a work the interest of such married woman therein shall be her separate property

Notes—By mere suggesting an idea person does not become a joint author Tate v Thomas (1929) 1 Ch 523, Evans v Hullton (1924) WN 130 In Levy v Rutly, (1871) LR CP 525, Byles J at p 528 said "If the piece had been originally written by the plaintiff and W jointly in prosecution of a preconceived joint design the two might have been said to be co authors of the whole play, notwithstanding that different portions were respectively the sole productions of either" In the same case Keating J said "Though it may not be necessary that each should contribute the same amount of labour, there must be a joint labouring in furtherance of a common design" The copyright rests in the joint authors as tenants in common and not as joint tenants Louvi v Renad, (1892) 3 Ch 402, Powell v Head 12 Ch D 686 Trade Auxiliary v Middlesborough, (1889) 40 Ch D 425 One of two joint authors can restrain the other by injunction from publish-

17 (1) In the case of literary, dramatic or musical work or an engraving, in which copyright subsists at the date of the death of the author, or, in the case of a work of joint authorship, at or immediately before the date of the death of the author who dies last, but which has not been published, nor, in the case of a dramatic or

musical work, been performed in public, nor, in the case of a lecture, been delivered in public, before that date, copyright shall subsist till publication, or performance or delivery in public, whichever may first happen, and for a term of fifty years thereafter, and the proviso to section three of this Act shall, in the case of such a work, apply as if the author had died at the date of such publication or performance or delivery in public as aforesaid

(2) The ownership of an author's manuscript after his death, where such ownership has been acquired under a testamentary disposition made by the author and the manuscript is of a work which has not been published nor performed in public, nor delivered in public, shall be prima facie proof of the copyright being with the owner of the manuscript

Notes—Sub section (1) does not apply to artistic work other than engravings—Oldfield p 110

18. Without prejudice to any rights or privileges of the Crown, where any work has, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, been prepared or published by or under the direction or control of His Majesty or any Government department, the copyright in the work shall, subject to any agreement with the author, belong to His Majesty, and in such case shall continue for a period of fifty years from the date of the first publication of the work

Notes—Originally the copyright in the Bible belonged to the Crown. Gradually this right is partially lost by the authorised version of the Bible. Richardson, (1802) 6 Ves 689. Manners v Blair, 3 Bll (1812) 303. Red Letter Testament, In re, (1900) 17 T L R 11 and Prayer Books. Before this Act, Government publications of the Bible or on behalf of the Crown were the property of the Crown. Imbridge v (1884) 12 Q B 513. This section therefore applies to the case of the Bible or on behalf of the Crown when the work was published by or under the direction or control of the Crown.

19 (1) Copyright shall subsist in records perforated rolls, and other contrivances by means of which sounds may be mechanically reproduced, in like manner as if such contrivances were musical works, but the term of copyright shall be fifty years from the making of the original plate from which the contrivance was directly or indirectly derived, and the person who was the owner of such original plate at the time when such plate was made shall be deemed to be the author of the work, and, where such owner is a body corporate, the body corporate shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to reside within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends if it has established a place of business within such parts

(2) It shall not be deemed to be an infringement of copyright in any musical work for any person to make, within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends, records, perforated rolls or other contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed, if such person proves—

(a) that such contrivances have previously been made by, or with the consent or acquiescence of, the owner of the copyright in the work, and

(b) that he has given the prescribed notice of his intention to make the contrivances, and has paid in the prescribed manner to, or for the benefit of the owner of the copyright in the work royalties in respect of all such contrivances sold by him calculated at the rate hereinafter mentioned

Provided that—

- (1) nothing in this provision shall authorize any alterations in or omissions from the work reproduced unless contrivances reproducing the work subject to similar alterations and omissions have been previously made by or with the consent or acquiescence of the owner of the copyright or unless such alterations or omissions are reasonably necessary for the adaptation of the work to the contrivances in question and
- (11) for the purposes of this provision a musical work shall be deemed to include any words so closely associated therewith as to form part of the same work but shall not be deemed to include a contrivance by means of which sounds may be mechanically reproduced
- (3) The rate at which such royalties as aforesaid are to be calculated shall—
  - (a) in the case of contrivances sold within two years after the commencement of this Act by the person making the same be two and one-half per cent and
  - (b) in the case of contrivances sold as aforesaid after the expiration of that period be five per cent

on the ordinary retail selling price of the contrivance calculated in the prescribed manner so however that the royalty payable in respect of a contrivance shall in no case be less than a half penny for each separate musical work in which copyright subsists reproduced thereon and where the royalty calculated as aforesaid includes a fraction of a farthing such fraction shall be reckoned as a farthing

Provided that if at any time after the expiration of seven years from the Board of Trade that such rate as Trade may after holding a public increasing that rate to such extent as under the circumstances may seem just but any order so made shall be provisional only and shall not have any effect unless and until confirmed by Parliament, but where an order revising the rate has been so made and confirmed no further revision shall be made before the expiration of fourteen years from the date of the last revision

(4) If any such contrivance is made reproducing two or more different works in which copyright subsists and the owners of the copyright therein are different persons the sums payable by way of royalties under this section shall be apportioned amongst the several owners of the copyright in such proportions as failing agreement may be determined by arbitration

(5) When any such contrivances by means of which a musical work may be mechanically performed have been made then for the purposes of this section the owner of the copyright in the work shall in relation to any person who makes the prescribed inquiries be deemed to have given his consent to the making of such contrivances if he fails to reply to such inquiries within the prescribed time

(6) For the purposes of this section the Board of Trade may make regulations requiring payment in advance or otherwise securing the payment of royalties

(7) In the case of musical works published before the commencement of this Act, the foregoing provision shall have effect, subject to the following modifications and additions—

- (a) The conditions as to the previous making by, or with the consent or acquiescence of, the owner of the copyright in the work, and the restrictions as to alterations in or omissions from the work shall not apply;
- (b) The rate of two and one half per cent, shall be substituted for the rate of five per cent, as the rate at which royalties are to be calculated, but no royalties shall be payable in respect of contrivances sold before the first day of July, nineteen hundred and thirteen, if contrivances reproducing the same work had been lawfully made, or placed on sale, within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends before the first day of July, nineteen hundred and ten
- (c) Notwithstanding any assignment made before the passing of this Act of the copyright in a musical work, any rights conferred by this Act in respect of the making, or authorising the making, of contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed shall belong to the author or his legal personal representatives and not to the assignees, and the royalties aforesaid shall be payable to, and for the benefit of, the author of the work or his legal personal representatives
- (d) The saying contained in this Act of the rights and interests arising from or in connexion with, action taken before the commencement of this Act shall not be construed as authorising any person who has made contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed to sell any such contrivances, whether made before or after the passing of this Act, except on the terms and subject to the conditions laid down in this section
- (e) Where the work is a work on which copyright is conferred by an Order in Council relating to a foreign country, the copyright so conferred shall not, except to such extent as may be provided by the Order include any rights with respect to the making of records, perforated rolls or other contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed.

(8) Notwithstanding anything in this Act where a record, perforated roll, or other contrivance by means of which sounds may be mechanically reproduced has been made before the commencement of this Act, copyright, subsist therein in like manner as if it had been in force at the date of the making of the contrivance was directly or indirectly derived

Provided that—

- (i) the person who, at the commencement of this Act, is the owner of such original plate shall be the first owner of such copyright, and
- (ii) nothing in this provision shall be construed as conferring copyright in any such contrivance if the making thereof would have infringed copyright in some other such contrivance, if this provision had been in force at the time of the making of the first-mentioned contrivance

Sub section (1)—Section 1, sub section 2 (d) for the first time gives the author, of a literary, dramatic or musical work the sole right to make any record perforated roll, cinematograph film, or other contrivance by means of which the work may

he mechanically performed or delivered Monckton v Pathe Freres (1914) 1 K B 395

Sub section (2)—The rights given by the Copyright Act, 1911 to the author of a musical production to restrain the manufacturer of records upon giving notice to the author and paying royalties to him do not affect any copyright vested in an assignee under an assignment made before the Act Chappell v Columbia Gramophone Co., (1914) 2 Ch 127, 745

Sub section (6)—Under sub section (6) the Board of Trade may make regulations prescribing the mode time and frequency of payment of royalties, and any such regulations may if the Board think fit include regulations requiring payments in advance or otherwise securing the payment of royalties—(1914) 1 K B 395

20 Notwithstanding anything in this Act, it shall not be an infringement of copyright in an address of a political nature delivered at a public meeting to publish a report thereof in a newspaper

Provision as to political speeches

21 The term for which copyright shall subsist in photographs shall be fifty years from the making of the original negative, from which the photograph was directly or indirectly derived and the person who was owner of such negative at the time when such negative was made shall be deemed to be the author of the work and, where such owner is a body corporate the body corporate shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to reside within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends if it has established a place of business within such parts.

Notes—This section applies irrespective of the fact that the photograph is published or unpublished. A negative will be deemed to be made not upon exposure, but upon the plate being developed and fixed. Vide Copingers Copyright p 85

Provisions as to registered designs, are not used or intended to be used as models or patterns to be multiplied by any industrial process

Notes—This section is intended to make the distinction between the law of copyright and the law of design. Under the old law there was no considerable overlapping. Such a division has, however, now become necessary by reason of the inclusion of works of artistic craftsmanship and architectural works of art as matter for copyright protection—Oliffell's Law of Copyright p 124

(7) In the case of musical works published before the commencement of this Act, the foregoing provision shall have effect, subject to the following modifications and additions :

- (a) The conditions as to the previous making by, or with the consent or acquiescence of, the owner of the copyright in the work, and the restrictions as to alterations in or omissions from the work shall not apply ;
- (b) The rate of two and one half per cent, shall be substituted for the rate of five per cent, as the rate at which royalties are to be calculated, but no royalties shall be payable in respect of contrivances sold before the first day of July, nineteen hundred and thirteen, if contrivances reproducing the same work had been lawfully made, or placed on sale, within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends before the first day of July, nineteen hundred and ten
- (c) Notwithstanding any assignment made before the passing of this Act of the copyright in a musical work, any rights conferred by this Act in respect of the making, or authorising the making, of contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed shall belong to the author or his legal personal representatives and not to the assignees, and the royalties aforesaid shall be payable to, and for the benefit of, the author of the work or his legal personal representatives .
- (d) The saving contained in this Act of the rights and interests arising from, or in connexion with, action taken before the commencement of this Act shall not be construed as authorising any person who has made contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed to sell any such contrivances, whether made before or after the passing of this Act, except on the terms and subject to the conditions laid down in this section
- (e) Where the work is a work on which copyright is conferred by an Order in Council relating to a foreign country, the copyright so conferred shall not, except to such extent as may be provided by the Order include any rights with respect to the making of records, perforated rolls, or other contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed.

(8) Notwithstanding anything in this Act where a record, perforated roll, or other contrivance by means of which sounds may be mechanically reproduced has been made before the commencement of this Act, copyright shall, as from the commencement of this Act, subsist therein in like manner and for the like term as if this Act had been in force at the date of the making of the original plate from which the contrivance was directly or indirectly derived

- (i) the person who, at the commencement of this Act, is the owner of such original plate shall be the first owner of such copyright, and
- (ii) nothing in this provision shall be construed as conferring copyright in any such contrivance if the making thereof would have infringed copyright in some other such contrivance, if this provision had been in force at the time of the making of the first-mentioned contrivance.

Sub section (1)—Section 1, sub section 2 (d), for the first time gives the author, of a literary, dramatic, or musical work the sole right to make any record perforated roll, cinematograph film, or other contrivance by means of which the work may be mechanically performed or delivered Monckton v Pathe Freres (1914) 1 K B 395

Sub section (2)—The rights given by the Copyright Act, 1911, to the author of a musical production to restrain the manufacturer of records upon giving notice to the author and paying royalties to him do not affect any copyright vested in an assignee under an assignment made before the Act Chappel v Columbia Gramophone Co., (1914) 2 Ch 127, 745

(6) the Board of Trade may make regulations as to the frequency of payment of royalties, and any regulations so made may include regulations requiring payments in advance or otherwise securing the payment of royalties—(1914) 1 K B 395

20 Notwithstanding anything in this Act, it shall not be an infringement of copyright in an address of a political nature delivered at a public meeting to publish a report thereof in a newspaper

Provision as to political speeches
Notes—Under clause (v) of sub section 1 of section 2 the publication of a report of a public lecture is not an infringement of copyright Under this section if the address be of a political nature and if it be delivered in a public meeting a full report of it may be published Whether an address is an address of a political nature is a question of fact—Vide Oldfield p 123

21. The term for which copyright shall subsist in photographs shall be fifty years from the making of the original negative, from which the photograph was directly or indirectly derived, and the person who was owner of such negative at the time when such negative was made shall be deemed to be the author of the work, and, where such owner is a body corporate, the body corporate shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to reside within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends if it has established a place of business within such parts.

Provisions as to photographs
Notes—This section applies irrespective of the fact that the photograph is published or unpublished A negative will be deemed to be made not upon exposure, but upon the plate being developed and fixed Vide Copingers Copyright p 85 The copyright dates from the making of the original negative and subsists for a period of fifty years from that date Where however, the work is ordered by another person, and is made for valuable consideration, the first ownership in the copyright belongs to the person so ordering the work in the absence of any contrary agreement Vide section 5 (1) (a) But the proprietary right in the negative will remain with the photographer Pollard v Photograph Co 40 Ch D 345, Bolton v London Exhibition 84 T L R 550

22. (1) This Act shall not apply to designs capable of being registered under the Patents and Designs Act, 1907, except designs which, though capable of being so registered, are not used or intended to be used as models or patterns to be multiplied by any industrial process

(2) General rules under section eighty six of the Patents and Designs Act 1907, may be made for determining the conditions under which a design shall be deemed to be used for such purposes as aforesaid

Notes—This section is intended to make the distinction between the law of copyright and the law of design Under the old law there was no considerable overlapping Such a division has, however, now become necessary by reason of the inclusion of works of artistic craftsmanship and architectural works of art as matter for copyright protection—Oldfield's Law of Copyright p 124

23. If it appears to His Majesty that a foreign country does not give, or has not undertaken to give, adequate protection to the works of British authors, it shall be lawful for His Majesty by Order in Council to direct that such of the provisions of this Act as confer copyright on works first published within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends, shall not apply to works published after the date specified in the Order, the authors whereof are subjects or citizens of such foreign country and are not resident in His Majesty's dominions, and thereupon those provisions shall not apply to such works

Notes—"The intention of this Act is that by Order in Council, the benefit of the protection under the Act should be extended to foreign countries when such countries give reciprocal advantages, and it may be assumed that such extension will be made before the Act comes into force in favour of those countries that are members of the copyright union, so that any author who first publishes in a union country will be entitled to have the same treatment if he were a native of the country. This section gives power by Order in Council to withhold the advantages of the Act or to withdraw the advantages after they have been conferred, if such a case should arise as to justify the words of the section, where, it appears "that a foreign country does not give or has not undertaken to give adequate protection to the works of British authors —Oldfield's Law of Copyright p 128

24 (1) Where any person is immediately before the commencement of this Act entitled to any such right in any work as is specified in the first column of the First Schedule to this Act, or to any interest in such a right, he shall, as from that date, be entitled to the substituted right set forth in the second column of that schedule, or to the same interest in such a substituted right, and to no other right or interest, and such substituted right shall subsist for the term for which it would have subsisted if this Act had been in force at the date when the work was made and the work had been one entitled to copyright thereunder.

Provided that—

(a) if the author of any work in which any such right as is specified in the first column of the First Schedule to this Act subsists at the commencement of this Act has before that date, assigned the right or granted any interest therein for the whole term of the right, then at the date when, but for the passing of this Act, the right would have expired the substituted right conferred by this section shall, in the absence of express agreement, pass to the author of the work, and any interest therein created before the commencement of this Act and then subsisting shall determine but the person who immediately before the date at which the right would so have expired was the owner of the right or interest shall be entitled at his option either —

(i) on giving such notice as hereinafter mentioned, to an assignment of the right or the grant of a similar interest therein for the remainder of the term of the right for such consideration as, failing agreement, may be determined by arbitration, or

(ii) without any such assignment or grant, to continue to reproduce or perform the work in like manner as theretofore subject to the payment if demanded by the author within three years after the date at which the right would have expired, as if the author as, failing agreement, where the work is incorporated of the right or interest is to without any such payment ;

The notice above referred to must be given not more than one year nor less than six months before the date at which the right would have so expired and must be sent by registered post to the author, or, if he cannot with reasonable diligence be found advertised in the London Gazette and in two London newspaper,

(b) where any person has, before the twenty-six day of July nineteen hundred and ten taken any action whereby he has incurred any expenditure or liability in connexion with the reproduction or performance of any work in a manner which at the time was lawful or for the purpose of or with a view to the reproduction or performance of a work at a time when such reproduction or performance would, but for the passing of this Act have been lawful, nothing in this section shall diminish or prejudice any rights or interest arising from or in connexion with such action which are subsisting and valuable at the said date, unless the person who by virtue of this section becomes entitled to restrain such reproduction or performance agrees to pay such compensation as, failing agreement, may be determined by arbitration

(2) For the purposes of this section, the expression 'author' includes the legal personal representatives of a deceased author

(3) Subject to the provisions of section nineteen sub-sections (7) and (8) and of section thirty-three of this Act copyright shall not subsist in any work made before the commencement of this Act, otherwise than under, and in accordance with, the provisions of this section

Notes—An entry in the Copyright Registrar Book under section 3 of the previous Copyright Act is prima facie evidence of the proprietorship of the person mentioned therein but the absence of that provision from the new Copyright Act, does not make it none the less evidence when the new Act grants to the owners of existing copyrights right at least as valuable as the rights given under the repealed Act Section 114 of the Evidence Act can therefore the invoked to make such evidence admissible 30 Ind Cas 721=16 Cr L J 673 This section makes this Act retrospective and this Act is to be considered as if in force at the time when this was made for the purpose of computing the term for which copyright subsists—Oldfield's Law of Copyright p 129

Proviso (a)—By this proviso when the author of a work has assigned his right for a period less than the whole original term, he would have a reversionary interest which would automatically confer upon him by virtue of the earlier provisions of this section the substituted right which would become exercisable by him upon the falling in of his revision If however the author had granted a license to one person for a portion of the old term, and then to another for the residue of that term it is conceived that he would have granted an interest, in his copyright "for the whole term" within the meaning of the proviso—Copinger on Copyright p 267

Application to British Possessions

25 (1) This Act except such of the provisions thereof as are expressly restricted to the United Kingdom, shall extend throughout His Majesty's dominions Provided that it shall not extend to a self governing dominion, unless declared by the Legislature
Application of Act to British dominions either without any modifications or and additions relating exclusively to adapt this Act to the circumstances of the dominion, as may be enacted by such Legislature

(2) If the Secretary of State certifies by notice published in the London Gazette that any self-governing dominion has passed legislation under which works, the authors whereof were at the date of the making of the works British subjects resident elsewhere than in the dominion or (not being British subjects) were resident in the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends, enjoy within the dominion rights substantially identical with those conferred by this Act, then, whilst such legislation continues in force, the dominion shall, for the purposes of the rights conferred by this Act, be treated as if it were a dominion to which this Act extends, and it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State to give such a certificate as aforesaid, notwithstanding that the remedies for enforcing the rights, or the restrictions on the importation of copies of works, manufactured in a foreign country, under the law of the dominion, differ from those under this Act.

Notes.—The—

with or without modifications has been the law in such dominions in accordance with the Colonial Acts in 34

26 (1) The Legislature of any self governing dominion may, at any time, repeal all or any of the enactments, relating to copyright passed by Parliament (including this Act) so far as they are operative within that dominion. Provided that no such repeal shall prejudicially affect any legal rights existing at the time of the repeal and that, on this Act or any part thereof being so repealed by the Legislature of a self governing dominion that dominion shall cease to be a dominion to which this Act extends.

(2) In any self governing dominion to which this Act does not extend, the enactments repealed by this Act shall, so far as they are operative in that dominion, continue in force until repealed by the Legislature of that dominion.

(3) Where His Majesty in Council is satisfied that the law of a self governing dominion to which this Act does not extend provides adequate protection within the dominion for the works (whether published or unpublished) of authors who at the time of making of the work were British subjects resident elsewhere than in that dominion, His Majesty in Council may, for the purpose of giving reciprocal protection direct that this Act, except such parts (if any) thereof as may be specified in the Order, and subject to any conditions contained therein shall within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends apply to works the authors whereof were at the time of the making of the work resident within the first mentioned dominion and to works first published in that dominion, but, save as provided by such an Order works the authors whereof were resident in a dominion to which this Act does not extend shall not whether they are British subjects or not be entitled to any protection under this Act except such protection as is by this Act conferred on works first published within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends.

Provided that no such Order shall confer any rights within a self governing dominion, but the Governor in Council, in any such Order, may, in any part of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends, confer any rights as His Majesty in Council may think fit.

dominion to which purposes of this extends

Notes.—It is to be noted that the Act of 1911; all the Act of 1911 which apply

in any part of His Majesty's dominions.

27 The Legislature of any British possession to which this Act extends may modify or add to any of the provisions of this Act in its application to the possession, but except, so far as such modifications and additions relate to procedure and remedies, they shall apply only to works the authors whereof were at the time of the making of the work resident in the possession, and to works first published in the possession

Notes—This sub-section corresponds to resolution 2 (b) of the Imperial Copyright Conference, 1910. It applies to all British possessions except the self governing dominions unless adopted by those dominions. The result is that local Acts will only be operative within the possession.—Oldfield's Law of Copyright p. 136

28 His Majesty may, by Order in Council extend this Act to any territories under his protection and to Cyprus, and, on the making of any such Order, this Act shall, subject to the provisions of the Order, have effect as if the territories to which it applies or Cyprus were part of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends

Notes—The administration of Cyprus is entrusted to England under a treaty of June 4 1887

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT

29 (1) His Majesty may, by Order in Council direct that this Act (except such parts, if any, thereof as may be specified in the Order) shall apply—
Power to extend Act to foreign works

- (a) to works first published in a foreign country to which the Order relates, in like manner as if they were first published within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends,
  - (b) to literary, dramatic, musical, and artistic works or any class thereof the authors whereof were, at the time of the making of the works, subjects or citizens of a foreign country to which the Order relates in like manner as if the authors were British subjects,
  - (c) in respect of residence in a foreign country to which the Order relates, in like manner as if such residence were residence in the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends,
- and thereupon, subject to the provisions of this Part of this Act and of the Order, this Act shall apply accordingly

Provided that—

- (i) before making an Order in Council under this section in respect of any foreign country (other than a country with which His Majesty has entered into the convention relating to copyright), His Majesty shall be satisfied that that foreign country has made, or has undertaken to make such provisions if any, as it appears to His Majesty expedient to require for the protection of works entitled to copyright under the provisions of Part I, of this Act,
- (ii) the Order in Council may provide that the terms of copyright within such parts of His Majesty's dominions as aforesaid shall not exceed that conferred by the law of the country to which the Order relates,
- (iii) the provisions of this Act as to the delivery of copies shall not apply to works first published in any foreign country so far as is provided by the law of that country

- (iv) the Order in Council may provide that the enjoyment of the rights conferred by this Act shall be subject to the accomplishment of such conditions and formalities (if any) as may be prescribed by the Order,
- (v) in applying the provisions of this Act as to ownership of copyright, the Order in Council may make such modifications as appear necessary having regard to the law of the foreign country,
- (vi) in applying the provisions of this Act as to existing works, the Order in Council may make such modifications as appear necessary, and may provide that nothing in those provisions as so applied shall be construed as reviving any right of preventing the production or importation of any translation in any case where the right has ceased by virtue of section five of the International Copyright Act, 1886*

(2) An Order in Council under this section may extend to all the several countries named or described therein

Notes—If an order in council is made giving the full rights allowed by this section with regard to a particular country copyright under the British Act is conferred upon (i) works published in that country, (ii) unpublished works of citizens of that country and (iii) unpublished works of persons resident in that country
Copinger's Copyright, p. 294

30 (1) An order in Council under this Part of this Act shall apply to all His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends except self governing dominions and British possessions and any other possessions specified in the Order with respect to which it appears to His Majesty expedient that the Order should not apply

(2) The Governor in Council of any self governing dominion to which this Act extends may, as respects that dominion, make the like Orders as under this Part of this Act His Majesty in Council is authorised to make with respect to His Majesty's dominions other than self governing dominions and the provisions of this Part of this Act shall, with the necessary modifications apply accordingly

(3) Where it appears to His Majesty expedient to except from the provisions of any Order any part of his dominions, not being a self governing dominion it shall be lawful for His Majesty by the same or any other Order in Council to declare that such Order and this Part of this Act shall not, and the same shall not apply to such part, except so far as is necessary for preventing any prejudice to any rights acquired previously to the date of such Order.

Notes—Under this section the self governing dominions are enabled to make their own orders in Council applying the law in such dominion to foreign works This is new law—Oldfield's Law of Copyright p. 148

PART III

SUPPLEMENTAL PROVISIONS

31. No person shall be entitled to copyright or any similar right in any literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work, whether published or unpublished otherwise than under and in accordance with the provisions of this Act, of or any other statutory enactment for the time being in force, but nothing in this section shall be construed as abrogating any right or jurisdiction to restrain a breach of trust or confidence

Notes—The New Act does not abolish the common law copyright, and confers the same are made. In three things which are a right to the material manuscript by making copies thereof or extracts therefrom, and (c) the right to make use of the ideas or information conveyed by the manuscript, without copying the actual language employed therein. The second right only belongs properly to the law of copyright, the first is protected by the ordinary possessory remedies and the third by that equitable jurisdiction to restrain breaches of trust and confidence which is expressly preserved by section 31 of the Act of 1911—Copinger on the Law of Copyright p 27. This breach of confidence must originate from some contract for secrecy, but such a contract may be either express or implied from the circumstances of the case. Ibid citing Prince Albert v Strange (1849) 1 Mac & G 25 see also Webe v Rose, (1732) cited Burr 2330. Forrester v Walker, (1741) Ibid, Macklin v Richardson, 1758) 2 Eden 329 Lamb v 2 Ch 518, Robb v Green 19 v Menzel (1913) 2 Ch 239, 1887) 19 Q B D 629, Pollard me (1887) 12 A C 326. But in order to give rise to such a breach of trust or confidence, it must be proved that the defendants either published the confidence or was fully aware of all for breach of trust or confidence in a manuscript without notice. Philp

32 (1) His Majesty in Council may make Orders for altering, revoking or varying any Order in council made under this Act, or under any enactments repealed by this Act, but any Order made under this section shall not effect prejudicially any rights or interests acquired or accrued at the date when the order comes into operation, and shall provide for the protection of such rights and interests.

(2) Every order in Council made under this Act shall be published in the London Gazette and shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament as soon as may be after it is made, and shall have effect as if enacted in this Act.

33. Nothing in this Act shall deprive any of the universities and colleges mentioned in the Copyright Act, 1775,* of any copyright they already possess under that Act, but the remedies and penalties for infringement of any such copyright shall be under this Act and not under that Act.

Notes—The result of this section is that no new perpetual copyright can be acquired by any University or College—Oldfield's Law of Copyright p 150.

34. There shall continue to be charged on, and paid out of, the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom such annual compensation as was immediately before the commencement of this Act payable in pursuance of any Act as compensation to a library for the loss of the right to receive gratuitous copies of books.

Provided that this compensation shall not be paid to a library in any year unless the Treasury are satisfied that the compensation for the previous year has been applied in the purchase of books for the use of and to be preserved in the library.

Notes—This section refers to the compensation payable to the libraries of Sion College the four Universities of Scotland, and of the King's Inns in Dublin in respect of the books to which they were formerly entitled under the Copyright Act, 1836, 6 & 7 Will IV C 10—Visle Oldfield's Law of Copyright p 150.

notwithstanding that it has been published simultaneously in some other place, unless the publication in such parts of His Majesty's dominions as aforesaid is colourable only and is not intended to satisfy the reasonable requirements of the public, and a work shall be deemed to be published simultaneously in two places if the time between the publication in one such place and the publication in the other place does not exceed fourteen days, or such longer period as may, for the time being, be fixed by Order in Council

(4) Where, in the case of an unpublished work, the making of a work has extended over a considerable period, the conditions of this Act conferring copyright shall be deemed to have been complied with, if the author was, during any substantial part of that period, a British subject or a resident within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends

(5) For the purposes of the provisions of this Act as to residence, an author of a work shall be deemed to be a resident in the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends if he is domiciled within any such part

36 Subject to the provisions of this Act, the enactments mentioned in the Second Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column of that Schedule

Repeal
 Provided that this repeal shall not take effect in any part of His Majesty's dominions until this Act comes into operation in that part

Notes—The repeal is to take effect in the first instance in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland

Short title and commencement
 37 (1) This Act may be cited as the Copyright Act 1911

| Short title | 11870 | This Act may be called the Court Fees Act, |
|-------------|-----------|--------------------------------------------|

Extent of Act It extends to the whole of British India ,

Commencement of Act

And it shall come into force on the first day of April 1870 power to amend the Court Fees Act by Act (XXXVIII) of 1920. The various Court Fees Act of 1870 have been given in

Legislative papers—For the Statement of Objects and Reasons see Gazette of India 1869 Pt V p 57, for Proceedings in Council see Ibid 1869, Supplement, pp 1179 and 1452, Ibid 1870 Supplement pp 52, 378, 421 and 434

Scope and Object of the Act.—The Court Fees Act, 1878 was as even its name imports an Act primarily passed for the purpose of prescribing the fees which are to be paid in respect of documents to be used in Court. It also provides in the schedules for the stamps to be used in certain offices of Courts of Chief Justice. That Act not only prescribes the fees but provides how fees are to be

| " | The Court Fees  |

Act also specifies the documents which need not be stamped under that Act for the purpose of being used in Courts" Per Edge J in 12 A 129 (F B) at p 139. The object of s 10 and indeed of the whole of the Court Fees Act, is to lay down rules for the collection of one form of taxation, and the rule that statutes which impose pecuniary burdens or encroach upon, or qualify the rights of the subject, must be strictly construed applies with special force to such provisions of the Act as provides a penalty whatever its nature may be Per Mahmood J in 8 A 282. The Court Fees Act is essentially a fiscal enactment. Its primary object is to provide for and protect the revenue and not to coerce the subject" Per Manuk J in 49 Ind Cas 442 at p 44=49 Pat L J 57 (71), see also 39 C L J 209, 9 M 148 (F B), 14 A L J 850=36 Ind Cas 877, 1922 U B R 14, 44 Ind Cas 251 (F B), 37 A 158=27 Ind Cas 731; 34 B 239. "The Court Fees Act was passed not to arm a litigant with a weapon of technicality against his opponent but to secure revenues for the benefit of the state. This is evident from the character of the Act and is brought out by section 12, which makes the decision of the First Court as to value final as between the parties and enables the Court of appeal to correct any error as to this, only where the First Court decided to the detriment of revenue" Per Sir Lawrence Jenkins in 24 C W N 33 at p 40=43 B 507=29 C L J 452=36 M L J 437=21 Bom L R 489=17 A L J 418=50 Ind Cas 280. The Act must be considered as a whole 18 C W N 121.

Extent of the Act—Act VII of 1870 has been declared in force—in Upper Burma generally (except the Shan States), by the Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898) s 4 (1) Sch 1, in British Baluchistan by Regulation (II of 1913) s 3, in the Santhal Parganas by the Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation (III of 1872) as amended by the Santhal Parganas Justice and Laws Regulation (III of 1899)

In Sub-division of Angul by Reg (III of 1899)

It has further been declared by a notification under s 3 (a) of the Scheduled Districts Act (XIV of 1874) in force in the following Scheduled Districts namely—the district of Hazaribagh (see Gazette of India, 1881 Pt 1 p 507),

The District of Lohardaga (now called the Ranchi District) (see Calcutta Gazette 1899 Pt 1 p 44, ib 1881 Pt 1 p 508); the District of Lohardaga then included the present District of Palamau separated in 1894,

The District of Manbhum (see Calcutta Gazette, 1881 (Pt 1 p 509), the Pargana Dhalbhum in the District of Singbhum (see Calcutta Gazette 1881 Pt 1 p 510), the Scheduled District in Ganjam and Vizagapatam (see Gazette of India, 1898 Pt 1, p 869),

North-Western Provinces Tarai (see Gazette of India 1876 Pt. 1 p 505

It has been extended, by notification under ss 5 and 5 A of the same Act, to the following Scheduled Districts, namely—The Garo Hills District, the Khasia and Jaintia Hills District, Naga Hills District, the North Cachar Sub-division of the Cachar District, the Mikir Hill Tract in the Nowgong District and the Dibrugar Frontier Tract in the Lakhimpur District, provided that the Act does not apply to natives of these districts and tracts who are assessed to house tax except in such places and cases as the Deputy Commissioner may withdraw from the operation of the exemption—See Assam Gazette, 1897, Pt 1, p 861, Gazette of India 1884 Pt 1 p 164

It has also been applied to the Baluchistan Agency Territories by the Baluchistan Agency Law, 1890, 4 (J)

The Act came into permanent operation in Aden on 1st April, 1876.—See Bombay Government Gazette, 1876, Pt 1 p 956

Valuation—Where plaintiff sues for a declaratory decree and asks for consequential relief and puts his own valuation upon the consequential relief then for purposes of court fee and also for purposes of jurisdiction it is the value which plaintiff puts upon the claim that determines both—23 C W N 753, 31 Ind Cas 807 2A 689, 32 C 734, 17 B 56, 38 M 922 (F B), 16 C L J 914, 40 C 615, 16 C L J 194, 7 A L J 842 But see 14 C L J 47, 28 P R 1906 4 Pat L J 703, 5 P L J 394, 36 A 500, 62 Ind Cas 685, 44 B 331 But the plaintiff is not entitled to put an arbitrary valuation but the valuation must always be reasonable 40 C 245=16 C L J 194=17 C W N 59, 17 C 680, 14 C L J 47, 19 C L J 15, 40 C L J 150, 22 B 823, 17 C W N 627, 36 A 500, 4 P L T 71, 56 Ind Cas 316, 41 Ind Cas 95, 5 P L J 394, 22 B 315, 255 P L R 1903=28 P R 1903 But this view does not find support in Bombay, Madras and in the Punjab vide 33 B 307, 44 B 331, 23 M 390, 2 B 219, 17 B 56, 38 M 922, 30 M 18, 24 M L J 233, 43 B 376=23 C W N 753 (P C), 1922 Lah 236, 22 Ind Cas 503, 3 Bur L J 128=1924 Rang 378 (2) In the absence of any basis of valuation the plaintiff is at liberty to make an imaginary valuation 79 Ind Cas 582 (Sind)

Clause (a)—This clause applies to a suit to obtain possession of a mortgage deed where the debt had not been paid and the defendant was not entitled to keep the deed 39 P R 1871 See also 10 P R 1871 A suit to recover title deed of immovable property is not a suit under this sub clause 4 C 322=3 C L R 375 But a suit to recover a bond comes under this clause (1894) P J 145, see also 10 P R 1871, 39 P R 1875

Clause (b)—This clause appears to be designed to cover not merely the cases where the plaintiff is in possession but quite possibly cases where the plaintiff's status as a co-parcener is in dispute and is sought to be enforced 21 M L J 21 F B, 8 Ind Cas 512, 104 P R 189, A W N (1885) 48, 6 Ind Cas 628, 1892 P J 13, 6 Pat L J 661=3 Pat L T 293

The court fee should be sufficient to cover the value of the property claimed by the plaintiff 1832 P J 148, 150 P R 1908 In a suit for partition of the share of one property, the proper valuation of the

share in any joint property' That clause refers to a suit to enforce the right to 'share in any property, not the right to "a share" in property. Therefore a suit for separate possession on by partition, falls under section 7 (v) and its market value determines the jurisdictional value 11 Bom L R 1074=4 Ind Cas 243=53 B 658. In such a suit a laforem court fee is payable on the plaintiff's share 18 B 209. According to the Calcutta High Court this sub-clause has no application in such a suit Vide 8 C 757=11 C L R 95, 10 C 97=13 C L R 249, 6 C L J 651=12 C W N 37, 15 C L J 443, 22 C W N 669, 21 C L J 253, 20 C 762, 44 Ind Cas 226. According to the Lahore High Court, such a suit falls under this clause 2 Lah 114=61 Ind Cas 621, 104 P R 189, 61 P L R 1916=34 Ind Cas 837. The Madras High Court held that in a suit for partition of joint family property, where the plaintiff is in joint possession with the other coparceners the court fee is to be fixed under article I of schedule I of the Court Fees Act and not under article 17 (vi) of the schedule II of the Act 8 Ind Cas 512=21 M L J 21 (F B), 20 M 289, 4 M L J 110, 24 M L J 233=18 Ind Cas 363. Clause (c) — The clause determines whether it falls under this clause 5 Ind Cas 97, 122 (F B), 35 Ind Cas 797=21 C W N 375, 713, 80 Ind Cas 544=3 Pat 915, 40 C L J 150, 1630, 16 Ind Cas 773=6 S L R 71. For the purposes of the Court Fees and Suits Valuation Acts the expression consequential relief means a substantial and immediate remedy in accordance with the title which the Court has been asked to declare 24 Ind Cas 316.

Consequential relief — A prayer for injunction is a consequential relief 10 B 60, 18 B 100, 11 C W N 705=6 C L J 427, 32 C 734, 15 M 15, 33 B 307, 15 A 378, 43 Ind Cas 99, 44 Ind Cas 398, 39 C 704=16 C W N 838=15 Ind Cas 477, 46 Ind Cas 884, 40 C L J 150, 34 B 267, 13 Bom L R 158, 111 P R 1913, 1915 A I R 1143, 133 Ind Cas 120, 130 Ind Cas 445. But a suit for a declaration and injunction is not merely a suit for consequential relief 12 C W N 369. Plaintiff must fix reasonable valuations and Court can revise if valuation is arbitrary. If Court's valuation is also arbitrary High Court can interfere to revision 12 Pat L T 658=133 Ind Cas 687.

Clause 2—Either before or after the expiration of the time fixed by a Court for payment of additional fees by the plaintiff who has been ordered to pay the same acting under cl 2 of s 10 of the Court Fees Act, it is competent to the Court to enlarge the time fixed on circumstances rendering it just and proper that such extensions should be given if ultimately the order is not complied with and additional fees not paid the Court should pass an order dismissing the suit and not one rejecting the plaint as under s 54 of the Civil Procedure Code 19 A 240, P R 84 of 1876. Until the appeal is admitted, it is not competent to the appellate Court to pass an order dismissing the original suit under ss 10 and 11 for non payment of court fee 1 M L J 528

A plaintiff is at liberty to withdraw any part of his claim to bring it within the court fees he had paid on his plaint and a Court is not bound to dismiss a claim, if a plaintiff instead of complying with an order for payment of deficient court fee abandons that portion of his claim which the Court had held to have been over valued 27 A 151

CHAPTER III A *

PROBATES, LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION AND CERTIFICATES OF ADMINISTRATION

19A Where any person, on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration, has estimated the property of the deceased to be of greater value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has consequently paid a court fee which has been paid in excess of the value of the property, and the court has allowed relief where too high a court fee has been paid, the court may, if it thinks fit, order that the person who has paid the court fee shall be repaid the amount of the excess of the court fee paid over the value of the property, and the court may, if it thinks fit, order that the person who has paid the court fee shall be repaid the amount of the excess of the court fee paid over the value of the property, and the court may, if it thinks fit, order that the person who has paid the court fee shall be repaid the amount of the excess of the court fee paid over the value of the property.

and if such Authority is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required the said Authority may—

- (a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled,
- (b) substitute another stamp for denoting the court fee which should have been paid thereon, and
- (c) make an allowance for the difference between them as in the case of spoiled stamps, or repay the same in money, at his discretion

Notes—There is no grant of probate until the court fee is paid and the grant is issued to the party 38 M 988=29 M L J 680 The sum charged upon a grant of probate or of letters of administration is not a tax or duty levied upon the property upon which the probate or administration operates and it is not charged thereon as is Estate Duty in England but it is merely a fee levied for the work done in this connection And I do not think that this is any less the case because the fee is levied upon the value of the property Per Greaves J in 27 C W N 812 at p 815

19B Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of such Authority that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as, being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less court fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act

such authority may return the difference, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters

But when, by reason of any legal proceeding the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years the said Authority may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances

Notes—Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority for the local area in which the probate or letters of administration has or have been granted that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased an abatement in court fees should be allowed 8 B L R App 43=16 W R 232, 6 N W P 214, 1 B 118

19C Whenever a grant of probate or letters of administration has been Relief in case of several grants or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate and the full fee chargeable under this Act has been or is paid thereon no fee shall be chargeable under the same Act when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Act shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates

Scope—No further court fee is leviable on a subsequent grant of letters of an undivided estate if the fees have increased since the first grant. This section merely applies to the whole or part of the property comprised in the estate of a deceased person no fees shall be payable on the grant of a fresh probate of a will or letters of administration of the estate of the same person e.g. when probate is revoked or a portion of an estate remains unadministered 5 P L J 36=54 Ind Cas 703

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a court fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the said Authority is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper court fee, the said Authority may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been first paid thereon

Chief Controlling Revenue-Authority "for the local area"† in which the probate or letters has or have been granted, may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped on payment of the full court fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value, and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of grant, of five times, or if it or they is or are produced after one year from such date, of twenty times, such proper court fee, without any deduction of the court fee, originally paid on such probate or letters

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a court fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the said Authority is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper court fee, the said Authority may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been first paid thereon

Scope—This section contemplates an application on the part of the person who has taken out probate and produces the same to be duly stamped. The section further contemplates that the estimated value of the estate is less than what the value afterwards proved to be. 19H* (1) Where an application for probate or letters of administration is made to any Court other than a High Court, the Court shall cause notice of the application to be given to the Collector.

(2) Where such an application as aforesaid is made to a High Court, the High Court shall cause notice of the application to be given to the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority "for the local area in which the High Court is situated"†

(3) The collector within the local limits of whose revenue jurisdiction the property of the deceased or any part thereof is, may, at any time inspect, or cause to be inspected, and take or cause to be taken copies of, the record of any case in which application for probate or letters of administration has been made, and if, on such inspection or otherwise, he is of opinion that the petitioner has under estimated the value of the property of the deceased, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the attendance of the petitioner (either in person or by agent), and take evidence and inquire into the matter in such manner as he may think fit, and, if he is still of opinion that the value of the property has been under estimated, may require the petitioner to amend the valuation

(4) If the petitioner does not amend the valuation to the satisfaction of the Collector, the Collector may move the Court before which the application for probate or letters of administration was made to hold an inquiry into the true value of the property

Provided that no such motion shall be made after the expiration of six months from the date of the exhibition of the inventory required by the section 277 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865 or, as the case may be, by section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881

(5) The Court, when so moved as aforesaid, shall hold, or cause to be held, an inquiry accordingly, and shall record a finding as to the true value, as near as may be, at which the property of the deceased should have been estimated. The Collector shall be deemed to be a party to the inquiry

(6) For the purposes of any such inquiry, the Court or person authorised by the Court to hold the inquiry, may examine the petitioner for probate or letters of administration on oath (whether in person or by commission) and may take such further evidence as may be produced to prove the true value of the property. The person authorized as aforesaid to hold the enquiry shall return to the Court the evidence taken by him, and report the result of the inquiry, and such report and the evidence so taken shall be evidence in the proceeding and the Court may record a finding in accord

Mortgage—In the case of appeals or cross objections in suits for redemption or for foreclosure, in all cases whether a decree for interest has been made in them or not in which the court fee declared by the Court due at the date of the decree can be ascertained by reference to the judgment and the decree, it is that amount at which the appeal or cross objection should be valued and future interest should not be taken into account The effect of this is that in original appeals the court fee should be levied on the sum due at the date of original decree and in all second appeals it should be levied on the sum due at the date of the decree of the lower appellate Court 3 Pat L J 443

also 12 C W N 1028 ; 30 A 547 Where one of the defendants to a mortgage suit appeals on the ground that the properties in his possessions were not liable for the debt, Held that the appellant was bound to pay ad-valorem court fee on the memorandum of appeal 48 Ind Cas 535 See also 29 C 473 In a redemption suit where the lower appellate Court decreed the suit at a lower amount and the appellant in the appeal sought to have the amount increased, the court fee is payable on the amount payable as to condition of redemption is merely incidental to that right (1914) M W N 231 ; 20 M L J 120

Counter claim—In a suit for possession of property the defendant pleaded first that the plaintiff had no title, and secondly that the plaintiff could not get possession without payment to the defendant of Rs 80,000 the amount of dower due to her Plaintiff's suit was decreed and the defendant was ordered to pay court fees on the property 36 A 322 redemption of a mortgage is the right to pay as the condition of redemption should be that right In an appeal from the decree in such a suit, directing redemption on payment of the amount mentioned in the plaint when the defendant contests the right of redemption or claims in the alternative a larger amount than that mentioned in the plaint, the court fee payable by him on the memorandum of appeal is the same as was paid by the plaintiff on his plaint 20 M L J 120 , 29 M 367

ACT V OF 1922.

Passed by the Legislative Council of the Governor of Madras

Received the assent of the Governor on the 30th March 1922, and that of the Governor-General on the 17th April 1922, and published in Part IV of the Madras Gazette, dated the 18th April 1922,

An Act to amend the Court Fees Act, 1870

Whereas it is expedient to amend the Court Fees Act, 1870, in its application to the Presidency of Madras, It is hereby enacted as follows —

Short title and application      1 (a) This Act may be called the Madras Court Fees (Amendment) Act, 1922

(b) It extends to the whole of the Presidency of Madras

Interpretation Clause 1870      2 (1) In this Act 'the Principal Act' shall mean 'the Court Fees Act, 1870'

(2) In this Act and in the principal Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, "Memorandum of appeal" shall include memorandum of cross-objection

3 In the second paragraph of section 5 of the principal Act, the words 'Registrar' and 'Chief Judge' shall be substituted for 'clerk of the Court' and 'first Judge' respectively

4 In section 7 of the principal Act, the words "except suits for relief under section 14 of the Religious Endowments Act, 1863, or under section 91 or section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908," shall be added between the words "mentioned" and "shall"

5 In section 7 (ii) of the principal Act, after the words "shall be deemed to be" the words "in suits for maintenance, the amount claimed to be payable for one year and in other suits" shall be added

6 The following shall be added after the words, "Memorandum of appeal" in section 7, paragraph (iv) of the principal Act —

"Provided that in suits coming under sub clause (c) in cases where the relief sought is with reference to any immovable property such valuation shall not be less than half the value of the immovable property calculated in the manner provided for by paragraph (v) of this section

7 In section 7 of the principal Act between paragraph (iv) and (v) the following paragraph shall be added as (iv) A —

"In a suit for cancellation of a decree for money or other property having a money value, or other document securing money or other property having such value, according to the value of the subject matter of the suit, and such value shall be deemed to be—

If the whole decree or other document is sought to be cancelled, the amount or the value of the property for which the decree was passed or the other document executed, if a part of the decree or other document is sought to be cancelled, such part of the amount or value of the property."

8 In section 7 (v) of the principal Act —

Amendment of section 7 (v) in (a) for the word "ten" the word "twenty" shall be substituted, in (b) for the word "five" the word "ten" shall be substituted, and after clause (d) the following proviso shall be substituted for the existing proviso —

"Provided that if rules are framed under section 3 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, for determining the value of land for the purposes of jurisdiction, the value so determined shall be deemed to be the value of the land for the purposes of this paragraph"

9 For the second paragraph of section 11 of the principal Act the following paragraph shall be substituted —

which have accrued of the suit if the s claimed, no fina actually paid comprised of the profits so ascertained is paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the claim for the excess shall be dismissed, unless the Court, for sufficient cause, extends the time for payment.

'Where a decree directs an enquiry as to mesne profits from the institution of the suit, and a final decree is passed in accordance with the result of such inquiry, the decree shall not be executed until such fee is paid as would have been payable on the amount claimed in execution if a separate suit had been instituted therefor.'

Amendment of section 18
shall be substituted

10 In section 18 of the principal Act for the words "eight annas" the words "one rupee"

Amendment of Schedules I and II

THE CROWN GRANTS ACT, 1895

Act No XV OF 1895

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL

(Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 10th October, 1895)

An Act to explain the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, so far as relates to grants from the Crown, and to remove certain doubts as to the powers of the Crown in relation to such grants

WHEREAS doubts have arisen as to the extent and operation of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and as to the power of the Crown to impose limitations and restrictions upon grants and other transfers of land made by it or under its authority, and it is expedient to remove such doubts, It is hereby enacted

THE DESTRUCTION OF RECORDS ACT, 1917

ACT NO V OF 1917.

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL

Received the assent of the Governor General on the 28th

February, 1917

An Act to consolidate and amend the law providing for the destruction or other disposal of certain documents in the possession or custody of Courts and Revenue and other public officers

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law providing for the destruction or other disposal of certain documents in the possession or custody of Courts and Revenue and other public officers, It is hereby enacted as follows

Object of the Legislation—In present conditions documents are required to be placed in the custody of a Government officer under a large number of enactments. In many of these Acts no provision exists for destruction of documents lodged with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies Act (XXI of 1860) the Provident Insurance Life Assurance Companies Act (VI of 1912) 1913, nor could such papers be dealt with under (III of 1879) as it stands. It is accordingly proposed to repeal and re enact the Act of 1879 so as to make it conform to modern requirements. The principal feature of the draft Bill is that it empowers certain authorities to frame rules for the disposal of documents. It may be considered not of sufficient importance to warrant the delegation to subordinate local Government. The rule-making power is vested in the Chief Controlling Officer and the Chief Controlling Officer may be affected by this Bill—

Statement of Objects and Reasons

Short title.

1 This Act may be called the destruction of Records Act, 1917

Definitions

*2 In this Act—

(1) "The Chief Controlling Revenue authority" means—

(a) in the presidencies of Fort William in Bengal and For St George and in the United Provinces and Bihar and Orissa—, the Board of Revenue,

(b) in the presidency of Bombay outside Sindh and the limits of the town of Bombay,—a Commissioner,

(c) in Sindh,—the Commissioner,

(d) in the Punjab and Burma,—the Financial Commissioner, and

(e) elsewhere,—the Local Government or such officer as the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, appoint in this behalf

(2) "High Court" means the highest Civil Court of appeal in any local area

Notes—The following definition of High Court occurs in the General Clause Act (IX of 1897) —"High Court" used with reference to Civil proceedings, shall mean the highest Civil Court of appeal in the part of British India in which the Act or Regulation containing the expression operates—Vide Section 3 (24) of the General Clauses Act (IX of 1897)

3 (1) The authorities hereinafter specified may from time to time, make rules for the disposal, by destruction or otherwise, of such documents as are, in the opinion of the authority making the rules, not of sufficient public value to justify their preservation

- (a) The authorities shall be—
- (a) in the case of documents in the possession or custody of a High Court or of the Courts of Civil or Criminal jurisdiction subordinate thereto,—the High Court,
- (b) in the case of documents in the possession or custody of Revenue Courts and officers, the Chief Controlling Revenue authority, and
- (c) in the case of documents in the possession or custody of any other public officer,—the Local Government or any officer specially authorised in that behalf by the Local Government

(3) Rules made under this section by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall be subject to the previous approval of the Governor General in Council, and rules made by any other High Court, or by a Chief Controlling Revenue authority or by an officer specially authorized in that behalf by a Local Government, shall be subject to the previous approval of the Local Government

Notes—The principal feature of the Act is that it empowers certain authorities to frame rules for the disposal by destruction of documents which they may consider not of sufficient public value to justify their preservation. The rule making powers conferred on the Local Government by Act III of 1879 is not affected by this Act—Vide Statement of Objects and Reasons

4 All rules and orders directing or authorising the destruction or other disposal of documents in the possession or custody of any public officer, heretofore made by a Local Government, or with the approval of the Local Government by any authority not empowered to make such rules under the Destruction of Records Act, 1879,* shall be deemed to have had the force of law from the date on which they were made, and all such rules and orders now in force shall continue to have the force of law until they are superseded by rules made under this Act

Notes—By the section the previous rules or orders made under Act III of 1879 acquire the force of law. The necessity of making fresh rules dealing with subjects contained in the old rules has been done away with by this section

5 Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to authorize the destruction of any document which, under the provisions of any law for the time being in force, is to be kept and maintained

Notes—The documents which are required to be kept and maintained by any enactment or law cannot be destroyed under this Act such officer as the Governor General of India in Council shall from time to time appoint in this behalf by notification in the Gazette of India and in the absence of such officer, the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction under this Act,

(3) "District Court" means, in the case of any petition under this Act, the Court of the District Judge within the local limits of whose ordinary jurisdiction or of whose jurisdiction under this Act, the husband and wife reside or last resided together,

(4) "Court" means the High Court or the District Court, as the case may be *

have not completed the age of sixteen years, and, in the case of daughters of native fathers, girls who have not completed the age of thirteen years in other cases it means unmarried children who have not completed the age of eighteen years

(6) "Incestuous adultery" means, adultery committed by a husband with a woman with whom, if his wife were dead, he could not lawfully contract marriage by reason of her being within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity (whether natural or legal), or affinity

(7) "Bigamy with adultery" means adultery with the same woman with whom the bigamy was committed *

(8) "Marriage with another woman" means marriage of any person, being married, to any other person, during the life of the former wife, whether the second marriage shall have taken place within the dominions of Her Majesty or elsewhere

(9) "Desertion" implies an abandonment against the wish of the person charging it and

(10) "Property" includes, in the case of a wife, any property to which she is entitled for an estate in remainder or reversion, or as a trustee, executrix or administratrix and the date of the death of the testator or intestate shall be deemed to be the time at which any such wife becomes entitled as executrix or administratrix

Resides or last resided together—As used in the section the word "resides" implies a dwelling either of a permanent nature or for some considerable time (L B R 1900—1922, Vol I, 222) Where the husband and wife had no permanent residence, the petition could be entertained by the Court having jurisdiction at 6 All suits and proceedings in cause, and matters matrimonial which, when this Act comes into operation, are pending in any High Court, shall be dealt with and decided by such Court, so far as may be as if they had been originally instituted therein under this Act

7 Subject to the provisions contained in this Act, the High Courts and District Courts shall, in all suits and proceedings hereunder, act and give relief on principles and rules which, in the opinion of the said Courts, are, as nearly as may be, conformable to the principles and rules on which the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England for the time being acts and gives relief

"Provided that nothing in this section shall deprive the said courts of jurisdiction in a case where the parties to a marriage professed the Christian religion at the time of the occurrence of the facts on which the claim to relief is founded"

Scope—This section is applicable not only to the grant of relief but also to question of procedure 55 Ind Cas 269 52 C 566=1925 Cal 574, but see 30 C 489, 37 C 613 This section is a residuary section intended to provide for any matters which by inadvertence or otherwise are not dealt with in the Act It is not unusual in statutory drafting to insert provisions of the nature ex majori cautela more especially where an attempt is being made to codify in this country an unfamiliar branch of English Law The expression 'rules and principles' points rather to the rules and principles on which the Court deals with these matrimonial cases in requiring a certain degree of evidence and other cognate matters 47 B 843=25 Bom L R 945

Principles and rules—Refer to rules quasi, substantive rather than mere adjective law 23 Ind Cas 242, 27 B 612, but see 5 Lah 147

Matrimonial causes in England—There is the possibility of reading into this section an intention on the part of Legislature to adopt whatever test the Court of Divorce in England might from time to time lay down upon the matter of divorce but that is a forced and unnatural construction. Also it would be necessary to omit the words "subject to the provisions contained in this Act". Had the Legislature intended any such result, it would have been easy to say in express terms that the provisions of the Act must be read as subject to the rules and principles adopted from time to time by Matrimonial Courts in England. They have chosen to say precisely the contrary. Any such construction would introduce an element of uncertainty

During that period any person shall be at liberty, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs, to show cause why the said

decree should not be made absolute by reason of the same having been obtained by collusion or by reason of material facts not being brought before the Court

On cause being so shown, the Court shall deal with the case by making the decree absolute or by reversing the decree nisi or by requiring further inquiry or otherwise as justice may demand

Confirmation of decree for dissolution by District Judge 17 Every decree for a dissolution of marriage made by a District Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court

Cases for confirmation of a decree for dissolution of marriage shall be heard (where the number of the Judges of the High Court is three or upwards)

by a Court composed of three such Judges, and in case of difference the opinion of the majority shall prevail, or (where the number of the Judges of the High Court is two) by a Court composed of such two Judges, and in case of difference the opinion of the Senior Judge shall prevail.

The High Court, if it think further enquiry or additional evidence to be necessary, may direct such enquiry to be made or such evidence to be taken.

The result of such enquiry and the additional evidence shall be certified to the High Court by the District Judge and the High Court shall thereupon make an order confirming the decree for dissolution of marriage, or such other order as to the Court seems fit.

Provided that no decree shall be confirmed under this section till after the expiration of such time, not less than six months from the pronouncing thereof, as the High Court by the general or special order from time to time directs.

During the progress of the suit in the Court of the District Judge, any person, suspecting that any parties to the suit are or have been acting in collusion for the purpose of obtaining a divorce shall be at liberty, in such manner as the High Court by general or special order from time to time directs, to apply to the High Court to remove the suit under section 8, and the High Court shall thereupon, if it think fit remove such suit and try and determine the same as a Court of original jurisdiction and the provisions contained in section 16 shall apply to every suit so removed, or it may direct the District Judge to take such steps in respect of the alleged collusion as may be necessary to enable him to make a decree in accordance with the justice of the case.

Scope—The obvious intention of the legislature as expressed in this section is that the High Court upon a reference for confirmation should review the entire evidence and come to its own conclusion whether facts sufficient to justify a decree are established by that evidence (1922).

It does not make the proviso in s. 17 applicable to a decree for nullity of marriage by a District Judge. 22A 275 (F B) For enabling the High Court to take action under this section, an application for confirmation of a decree for dissolution of marriage is not necessary. 29 M L J 268 (F B) But see 31A 511. But a decree for dissolution of marriage cannot be passed without enquiry into and evidence to prove the facts alleged by the petitioner. There is nothing in this Act which justifies a distinction between the two sections (16 and 17) with reference to the power of the Court to rescind the decree made in the first instance, when the parties have resumed the relations of husband and wife since that decree was passed and before it has been confirmed or made absolute. 8 Ind Cas 684, 10A 559. Notes—Under sub section (4) of section 1 of the Indian and Colonial Divorce Jurisdiction Act, 1926 (16 & 17 Geo 5 ch 4) proceedings before a High Court in India in exercise of the jurisdiction conferred by that Act are to be conducted in accordance with rules made by the Secretary of State in Council of India with concurrence of the Lord Chancellor. These rules are required to provide inter alia for conferring on such officials as may be appointed for the purpose within the jurisdiction of each High Court the like right of showing cause why a decree  nisi should not be made absolute as is exercisable in England by the King's Proctor under sections 181 and 182 and of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925, (15 & 16 Geo 5 ch 49). These provisions apply in cases where the parties concerned are British subjects domiciled in England or Scotland. The Bill proposes to make provision in the Indian Divorce Act for the appointment of an official to perform similar functions in respect of persons domiciled in India.—Statement of Objects and Reasons

IV—Nullity of Marriage

18 Any husband or wife may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that his or her marriage may be declared null and void

19 Such decree may be made on any of the following grounds—

- (1)—That the respondent was impotent at the time of the marriage and at the time of the institution of the suit,
- (2)—That the parties are within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity (whether natural or legal) or affinity,
- (3)—That either party was a lunatic or idiot at the time of the marriage,
- (4)—That the former husband or wife of either party was living at the time of the marriage, and the marriage with such former husband or wife was then in force

Nothing in this section shall affect the jurisdiction of the High Court to make decrees of nullity of marriage on the ground that the consent of either party was obtained by force or fraud

Impotence—means physical unfitness for consummation 29 M L J 183 (F B). A decree is granted when it is incurable 48 C 283=33 C L J 97, Stagg v Edgcombe, 32 L J Mat 153, Brown v Brown Hagg Ecc 523

Fraud—Concealment of a loathsome and incurable form of syphilis is recognised as a fraud 48 C 283=33 C L J 97, 24 C W Y 914

Lunacy—Where a person wants to have a marriage declared null and void on the ground of lunacy, it is not sufficient to show that he is insane or deficient to a certain extent merely, that his whole mental being was not necessarily the nature of the act but its validity 79 Ind Cas 535, see also Hancock v Pesty L R P D 335, Fry v Fry, 15 P D 50

Notes—The Court should make some provision as regards custody of children 44 C 35

V—Judicial Separation

22 No decree shall hereafter be made for a divorce a mensa et toro but the husband or wife may obtain a decree or But to decree for divorce a mensa et toro, but judicial separation obtainable by husband or wife judicial separation, on the ground of adultery or cruelty, or desertion without reasonable excuse for two years or upwards, and such decree shall have effect of a divorce a mensa et toro under the existing law and such other legal effect as hereinafter mentioned

Clean hand—A party claiming for judicial separation must come to Court with a clean hand 8 A L J 318 (C B)=30 A 500 Oloway v Oloway 13 P D 141, Hill v Hill, 47 B 657

24 In every case of a judicial separation under this Act, the wife shall Separated wife deemed spinster with respect to acquired property from the date of the sentence, and whilst the separation continues be considered as unmarried with respect to property of every description which she may acquire, or which may come to or devolve upon her

Such property may be disposed of by her in all respects as an unmarried woman, and on her decease the same shall, in case she dies intestate, go as the same would have gone if her husband had been then dead

Provided that, if any such wife again cohabits with her husband, all such property as she may be entitled to when such cohabitation takes place shall be held to her separate use, subject, however, to any agreement in writing made between herself and her husband whilst separate

Notes—A wife having obtained a decree for judicial separation, may avoid a mortgage made by her of a reversion in personality which falls in during the joint lives Insole, In re, 35 Beav 92 By a decree for judicial separation the wife's choses in action not reduced into possession at the date of the decree become her absolute property as if she were a feme sole Johnson v Landor, 38 L J Ch 229, Wells v Maldon, 31 Beav 48 A wife who has obtained a decree for judicial separation is to be considered as a feme sole with respect to such property only as she may acquire which may come to or devolve upon her after the decree Waite v Morland, 57 L J Ch 655, see also Dawes v Creyke 54 L J Ch 1096 An appointment by a married woman under a general power created after a decree for judicial separation makes the fund assets for his creditors Hughes In re Brander v Hughes 67 L J Ch 279=(1893) 1 Ch 529, see also Hill v Hill, (1893) 2 Q B 85 Davis v Ceryke, 30 Ch D 500

25 In every case of a judicial separation under this Act, the wife shall, whilst so separated, be considered as an unmarried Separated wife deemed spinster for purposes of contract and suing woman for the purposes of contract, and wrongs and injuries, and suing and being sued in any civil proceeding, and her husband shall not be liable in respect of any contract, act or costs entered into done, omitted, or incurred by her during the separation

Provided that, where, upon any such judicial separation, alimony has been decreed or ordered to be paid to the wife, and the same is not duly paid by the husband, he shall be liable for necessities supplied for her use

Provided also that nothing shall prevent the wife from joining at any time during such separation, in the exercise of any joint power given to herself and and her husband

Necessaries—In Peter v Fleming, 6 M & W 42 Baron Parke observed From the earliest time down to the present the word 'necessaries' is not confined in its strict sense to such articles as were necessary to support life but extended to articles fit to maintain the particular person in the estate degree and station in life in which he is and therefore we must not take the word 'necessaries' in its unqualified sense but with the qualification as above pointed out This definition was adopted by the Exchequer Chamber in Ryder v Wornhill, L R 3 Exch 90, 4 Fx 32 So the question as to what are necessities is a mixed question of fact and law 13 C W N 643=36 C 768 A wife is entitled to pledge her husband's credit for all the costs as between solicitor and client reasonably incurred by her in respect of the institution and prosecution of a divorce suit against her husband Ottway v Hinton 47 L J C P 725, see also Wilson v Ford, 37 L J Ex 30=L R 3 Ex 63

Reversal of Decree of Separation

26 Any husband or wife, upon the application of whose wife or husband, Decree of separation obtained during absence of husband or wife may be reversed as the case may be, a decree of judicial separation has been pronounced, may, at any time thereafter, present a petition to the Court by which the decree was pronounced, praying for a reversal of such decree, on the ground that it was obtained in his or her absence, and that there was reasonable excuse of the alleged desertion, where desertion was the ground of such decree

The Court may, on being satisfied of the truth of the allegations of such petition, reverse the decree accordingly, but such reversal shall not prejudice or affect the rights or remedies which any other person would have had, in case it had not been decreed, in respect of any debts, contracts or acts of the wife incurred, entered into or done between the times of the sentence of separation and of the reversal thereof

Notes—This section empowers the Court to rehear an ex parte case in order to do justice to all the parties concerned

VI—Protection orders

27. Any wife to whom the fourth section of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, does not apply may when deserted by her husband, Deserted wife may apply present a petition to the District Court or the 10 Court for protection High Court, at any time after such desertion for an order to protect any property which she may have acquired or may acquire and any property of which she may have become possessed or may become possessed after such desertion against her husband or his creditors, or any person claiming under him

Notes—This section relates to protection order in case of desertion. Such an order may have retrospective effect Elliot, In the goods of 40 L J Mat 76, Ramsden v Brerly, 10 Q B 142. An order protecting the earnings or property of a wife deserted by her husband is confined to money or property acquired by lawful industry, and does not extend to property acquired by keeping a brothel Mason v Mitchell, 31 L J Ex 68. Every such order shall state the time at which the desertion commenced, and shall as regards all persons dealing with the wife in reliance thereon, be conclusive as to such time.

obtaining an order of protection a wife does not deprive herself of her right to alimony pendente lite, in a suit subsequently instituted by her for dissolution of marriage Hakewill v Hakewill, 30 L J Mat 251. A wife having been deserted by her husband, obtained a protection order. On her death, in the life time of her husband, intestate, the Court decreed letters of administration, limited to such personal property as she had acquired, or become possessed of since the desertion, without specifying of what that property consisted, to be granted to one of her next of him Worman In the goods of, 1 Sw & Tr 513.

29. The husband or any creditor of, or person claiming under him, may Discharge or variation of apply to the Court by which such order was orders made for the discharge, or variation thereof, and the Court, if the desertion has ceased, or if for any other reason it thinks fit so to do, may discharge or vary the order accordingly.

Notes—A husband may come to the Divorce Court at any time, and apply for a discharge of the order Hall Ex parte 27 I J Mat 19 An application to discharge a protection order is not limited to the lifetime of the married woman Mudge v Adams, 50 I J P 49=6 P D 54=44 I T 185; Mahoney v McCarthy, (1892) P 21 An order of protection to a married woman granted by a Police Magistrate or Justice, under the 20 & 21 Vict C 85 s 21, could only be discharged by the Magistrate or Justice by whom it was made Sharpe, Ex parte, 5 B & S 322=33 I J M C 142

30 If the husband, or any creditor of, or person claiming under the husband, seizes or continues to hold any property of the wife after notice of any such order, he shall be liable, at the suit of the wife (which she is hereby empowered to bring) to return or deliver to her the specific property, and also to pay her a sum equal to double its value

31 So long as any such order of protection remains in force, the wife shall be and be deemed to have been, during such desertion of her, in the like position in all respects, with regard to property and contracts and suing and being sued, as she would be under this Act if she obtained a decree of judicial separation

Notes—On a petition presented by a wife, who had been deserted by her husband, to draw out of Court certain sums of money to which she became entitled Held, that notice of the petition must be served upon the husband notwithstanding that a protection order had been obtained of the feme covert Sutcliffe, Ex parte 22 for earnings after an order of a Police M notwithstanding that ever since the desertion she had begun the adulterous relations Thorn v Held F & F 88

VII—Restitution of Conjugal Rights

32 When either the husband or the wife has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from the society of the other, either husband or wife, or husband may apply, by petition to the District Court or the High Court, for restitution of conjugal rights and the Court on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition and that there is no legal ground why the application should not be granted by decree restitution of conjugal rights accordingly

Legal cruelty—Every act of personal violence or every combination of such acts voluntarily inflicted and productive of hurt or alarm will not constitute legal cruelty on the part of the husband 101 P R 1882

Notes—The written declaration for restitution of conjugal rights need not be sufficient Marshall v Marshall, 50 L J P 21=14 P D 26, see also Smith v Smith 59 L J P 9=15 P D 47 Marshall v Marshall 5 P D 19 at p 23, Mason v Mason, 61 L T 304, Tucker, Ex parte, 66 L J P 65=(1895) P 83 The Court will not dismiss a petition for the restitution of conjugal rights solely on the ground of delay in presenting the petition Beauderck v Beauderck, 71 L T 376, see also 27 Ind Cas 604=8 L B R 250 An agreement to live separate is no answer or bar to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights Spering v Spering, 3 Sw & Tr 211, but see Hunt v Hunt, 4 Deg C & J 221, Anquez v Anquez 36 L J Mat 93 Kitchin v Kitchin, 19 I T 674, Besant v Wood, 12 Ch D 605 A separation deed, executed by a husband and wife containing covenant that the husband should not sue her for the wife for the

33. Nothing shall be pleaded in answer to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights, which would not be ground for a suit for judicial separation or for a decree of

nullity of marriage

Notes—It can be pleaded that the return is unsafe (Redford v Redford 20 L T 279), or the husband is impotent (C v C 42 L J Mat 31, Rickets v Rickets, 35 L J Mat 97), or the wife made his home uncomfortable and systematically aggravated him in order that he might commit some act of violence (Woodey v Woodey 31 L T 647). But it is no ground for dismissing a wife's suit for restitution of conjugal rights that she has been guilty of impropriety of behaviour not amounting to a matrimonial offence or yet that she has previously refused to permit conjugal intercourse (Reppingal v Reppingal, 24 W R 967). Conjugal rights can be defeated only by acts sufficient to found a decree for a divorce (Manning v Manning 11 R 7 Eq 520). Nothing can be pleaded in bar to suit for restitution but what would entitle the respondent to a judicial separation (Burroughs v Burroughs 2 Sw & Tr 303). In a suit for conjugal right the Court could not reject on demurrer, an ments against his daughters by which he was obliged to remove them from his house, acts of violence towards his servants—all tending to affect the health and social position—constitute a legal defence to a suit by a wife for restitution of conjugal rights (D Arcy v D Arcy 11 L R Fr 369, Woodey v Woodey, 31 L T 647).

The charge of adultery can be pleaded in the usual manner with particulars (Green v Green, 21 L T 401, see also Blackmore v Blackmore 18 L T 450=37 L J Mat 73, Moore v Moore, 3 Moore, P C 83). An answer denying that the respondent withdrew from cohabitation without just cause, should state the cause of such withdrawal. If he does not it is bad on demurrer but the objection is waived by filing a replication (Ward v Ward 72 L J Mat 120). When an answer to a petition for restitution of conjugal rights contains a prayer for judicial separation the respondent has a right to proceed and prove the allegations in the answer on which the prayer is founded notwithstanding the withdrawal of the prayer for restitution by the petitioner (Blackburn v Blackburn (ubi supra)).

The Court will decree a restitution of conjugal rights in favour of a wife in every case where she has not been guilty of such misconduct as would entitle the husband to a decree for a judicial separation (Yeatman v Yeatman, 16 W R 734). Where both the parties are guilty of adultery no suit is maintainable (Hope v Hope, 1 Sw & Tr 94, but see Seaver v Seaver, 2 Sw, & Tr 66).

VIII—Damages and Costs

34 Any husband may, either in a petition for dissolution of marriage or for judicial separation, or in a petition to the District Court or the High Court limited to such object only, claim damages from any person on the ground of his having committed adultery with the wife of such petitioner.

Such petition shall be served on the alleged adulterer and the wife, unless the Court dispenses with such service or directs some other service to be substituted.

The damages to be recovered on any such petition shall be ascertained by the said Court, although the respondents or either of them may not appear.

After the decision has been given, the Court may direct in what manner such damages shall be paid or applied.

Notes—The principle in awarding damages against a co-respondent in divorce proceedings is to ascertain what loss the husband has suffered the object is not to punish. The means of the co-respondent are not a relevant factor 52 C 379=29 C W N 350=86 Ind Cas 1018=A 1 R 1975 Cal 587.

IX—Alimony

36 In any suit under this Act, whether it be instituted by a husband or a wife, and whether or not she has obtained an order of protection, the wife may present a petition for alimony pending the suit

Such petition shall be served on the husband and the Court, on being satisfied of the truth of the statements therein contained, may make such order on the husband for payment to the wife of alimony pending the suit as it may deem just :

the said suit shall in no case exceed one fifth of the net income of the husband for the three years next preceding the date of a decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage until the decree is made absolute or is confirmed, as the case may be

Period for payment of alimony—In India the period during which alimony is payable is regulated by this section which provides that it shall continue in the case of decree for dissolution of marriage until the decree is made absolute 36 C 1081, 49 Ind Cas 209

Amount of alimony—This section provides that such alimony shall not exceed one fifth of the husband's net income. Net income has its ordinary meaning—the amount of income minus deductions on account of income-tax, charges for pension fund and the like. Expenses of maintaining children and liquidation of debts may be taken into consideration in allotting the alimony 14 M 88, see also 6 C W N 444, 35 C 264, 11 Ind Cas 813. While the wife is living with the respondent no alimony should be granted 3 B L R Ap 13

After a decree nisi in a suit has been passed alimony pendente lite cannot be granted 11 C 354, but see 23 C 913

37. The High Court may, if it think fit, on any decree absolute declaring a marriage to be dissolved, or on any decree of judicial separation obtained by the wife,

Power to order permanent alimony and the District Judge may, if he thinks fit, on the confirmation of any decree of his, declaring a marriage to be dissolved, or on any decree of judicial separation obtained by the wife, order that the husband shall, to the satisfaction of the Court, secure to the wife such gross sum of money, or such annual sum of money for any term not exceeding her own life, as, having regard to her fortune (if any), to the ability of the husband, and to the conduct of the parties, it thinks reasonable, and for that purpose may cause a proper instrument to be executed by all necessary parties :

In every such case the Court may make an order on the husband for payment to the wife of such monthly or weekly sums for her maintenance and support as the Court may think reasonable

Power to order monthly or weekly payments Provided that, if the husband afterwards from any cause becomes unable to maintain the wife, the Court to discharge or modify the order same as to the whole or any part of the m to revive the same order wholly or in part

Scope—This section limits the power of Court to make an order for permanent alimony to cases in which a decree has been made declaring a marriage to be dissolved or where a decree for judicial separation has been obtained by the wife. The section omits to give such power to the Court, where the decree declares the marriage null and void 48 C 636

Application when to be made—Application for permanent alimony must be made either at the same time as or at reasonable time after the confirmation of any decree declaring the marriage to be dissolved 44 M 987

Discretionary—The power conferred under this section is discretionary 38 A 638 The Court has power under this section to order payment of a lump sum

District Judge—Cannot order permanent alimony before his decree in the suit is confirmed 13 P R 1891

38 In all cases in which the Court makes any decree or order for alimony it may direct the same to be paid either to the wife herself or to any trustee on her behalf to be approved by the Court, and may impose any terms or restrictions which to the Court seem expedient, and may from time to time appoint a new trustee, if it appears to the Court expedient so to do

Notes—Vide 11 Ind Cas 813, 14 M 89

X—Settlements

39 Whenever the Court pronounces a decree of dissolution of marriage or judicial separation for adultery of the wife, if it is made to appear to the Court that the wife is entitled to any property, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order such settlement as it thinks reasonable to be made of such property or any part thereof, for the benefit of the husband or of the children of the marriage or of both

Any instrument executed pursuant to any order of the Court at the time of or after the pronouncing of a decree of dissolution of marriage or judicial separation shall be deemed valid notwithstanding the existence of the disability of coverture at the time of the execution thereof.

The Court may direct that the whole or any part of the damages recoverable under section 34 shall be settled for the benefit of the children of the marriage, or as a provision for the maintenance of the wife

Notes—It is competent to the Court to make an order for the settlement of damages after the decree nisi has been made absolute Billingay v Billingay 35 L R J P 84=L R 1 P 168, see also Taylor v Taylor 39 L J Mat 23, Meyern v Meyern 46 L R 1 P 5, Forster v Forster 3 Sw & Tr 158, Clark v Clark 2 Sw & Tr 520, Speeding v Speeding 37 L J Mat 31

40 The High Court, after a decree absolute for dissolution of marriage or a decree of nullity of marriage, and the District Court, after its decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage has been confirmed may inquire into the existence of ante nuptial or post nuptial settlements made on the parties whose marriage is the subject of the decree and may make such orders, with reference to the application of the whole or a portion of the property settled, whether for the benefit of the husband or the wife, or of the children (if any) of the marriage or of both children and parents, as to the Court seems fit.

Provided that the Court shall not make any order for the benefit of the parents, or either of them at the expense of the children

OF EASEMENTS GENERALLY

4 An easement is a right which the owner or occupier of certain land possesses as such, for the beneficial enjoyment of that land, to do and continue to do some thing, or to prevent and continue to prevent something being done, in or upon, or in respect of, certain other land not his own

The land for the beneficial enjoyment of which the right exists is called the dominant heritage, and the owner or occupier thereof the dominant owner, the land on which the liability is imposed is called the servient heritage, and the owner or occupier thereof the servient owner

Explanation—In the first and second clauses of this section, the expression "land" includes also things permanently attached to the earth, the expression "beneficial enjoyment" includes advantage, and even a mere amenity, includes removal and appropriation by enjoyment of the dominant heritage, or any part of the soil or the servient heritage, or anything growing or subsisting thereon

(a) A, as the owner of a certain house, has a right of way thither over his neighbour B's land for purposes connected with the beneficial enjoyment of the house This is an easement

(b) A, as the owner of a certain house has the right to go on his neighbour B's land and to take water for the purposes of his house hold out of a spring therein This is an easement

(c) A, as the owner of a certain house has the right to conduct water from B's stream to supply the fountains in the garden attached to the house This is an easement

(d) A, as the owner of a certain house and farm has the right to graze a certain number of his own cattle on B's field or to take for the purpose of being used in the house his own servants water or fish out of the purpose of manuring his land C's farm These are easements

(e) A has the right to dig for minerals on the surface of certain land for the purpose of manuring his land This is not an easement

* Section 3 has been substituted for the original section by Act 10 of 1914

Ibid These rights can well be called 'rights of accommodation as distinguished from those which are directly profitable. 'A right of way or right of passage for water where it does not create an interest in the land is an incorporeal right and stands upon the same footing with other incorporeal rights. Heldlin v Shippeam (1826) 5 B & C 221 Artificial structures such as that masonry roofs of shops are land within the meaning of that expression as used in section 4 of the Act and easements can be acquired over them. 45 Ind Cas 585. A right to open and shut the windows of a person's house is an easement within the meaning of this section as it is a right, which the owner of the house has as such for the beneficial enjoyment of his house to do something, i.e. to swing the shutters upon certain other lands not his own and such a right can be acquired as an easement by as it is not dependent on the ownership of any landed property. 48 A 560=9, Ind. Cas 1030=24 A L J 682=A 1 R (1926) All 538. A right of way can be claimed by a person for a municipal sweeper if he can substantiate that the passage has been used by the municipal sweeper for the statutory period as a matter of right. 28 Bom L R 601=9, Ind Cas 170=A 1 R (1926) Bom 287. A person can claim in a suit certain property as his own or in the alternative that he has got a right of easement over the same. 41 C L J 379=87 Ind Cas 19=A 1 R (1955) Cal 788.

The lessee or a person in lawful possession of a house may maintain an action if the right of privacy of the house of which he is in possession is interfered with. 3 A L J 670=A W N 1905=83=29 A 64. A right to go on to a neighbour's land to gather the fruits that fall therefrom a portion of a tree alleged to belong to the plaintiff is not an easement. 43 N L J 13=68 Ind Cas 968 (1895) A C 1.

Considered with regard to the servient tenement an easement is but a charge or obligation, curtailing the ordinary rights of property with regard to dominant tenement, it is a right accessory to these ordinary rights—constituting in both cases a new quality impressed upon the respective tenements. Gale on Easement p 9. An easement can only be claimed in relation to a property. Ibid

Continuous and discontinuous, apparent and non apparent, easements. 5 Easements are either continuous or discontinuous apparent or non apparent.

A continuous easement is one whose enjoyment is or may be, continual without the act of man.

A discontinuous easement is one that needs the act of man for its enjoyment.

An apparent easement is one the existence of which is shown by some permanent sign which, upon careful inspection by a competent person, would be visible to him.

A non apparent easement is one that has no such sign.

(a) A right annexed to B's house to receive light by the windows without obstruction by his neighbour A. This is a continuous easement.

(b) A right of way annexed to A's house over B's land. This is a discontinuous easement.

(c) Right annexed to A's land to lead water thither across B's land by an aqueduct, and to draw off water thence by a drain. The drain would be discovered upon careful inspection by a person conversant with such matters. These are apparent easements.

(d) A right annexed to A's house to prevent B from building on his own land. This is a non apparent easement.

owner of land abutting on a natural lake or pond into or out of which a natural stream flows, that the water of such lake or pond shall be allowed by other persons to remain within such owner's limits without material alteration in quantity or temperature

(i) The right of every owner of upper land that water naturally rising in, or falling on, such land, and not passing in defined channels shall be allowed by the owner of adjacent lower land to run naturally thereto

(j) The right of every owner of land abutting on a natural stream, lake, or pond to use and consume its water for drinking household purposes and watering his cattle and sheep, and the right of every such owner to use and consume the water for irrigating such land, and for the purposes of any manufactory situate thereon, provided that he does not thereby cause material injury to other like owners

Explanation—A natural stream is a stream whether permanent or intermittent, tidal or tideless on the surface of land or underground, which flows by the operation of nature only and in a natural and known course

Notes—This right conferred by an easement attaches upon the soil of servient tenement, the utmost extent of the obligation imposed upon the owner being not to alter the state of it so as to interfere with the enjoyment of the easement by the dominant tenement. The obligation is in fact negative—to suffer or not to do—being to be the owner of the servient heritage; and upon its transfer, to each successive proprietor

The test of user under this section is whether the owner use more than a reasonable quantity, and the user is not as a rule to be deemed unreasonable unless there is material diminution of water so as to affect the right of other like owners (1914) M W N 481=24 Ind Cas 68. The ownership of free natural elements such as air and water, and of all water. It is a right in the water itself, just as lava thrown up by a volcano. 346=3 P L T 53

Variety of easements—The number or modifications of rights of this kind may be infinite both in their extent, and mode of enjoyment as the convenience of man, in using his property requires. 'To descend now,' says Lord Sturges, 'to the kinds of servitudes, there may be as many as there are ways whereby the liberty of a house or tenement may be restrained in favour of another tenement, for liberty and servitude are contraries, and the abatement of the one is the being or enlarging of other.' Cited in Gale on Easement p 22. But no incidents of a novel kind can be devised and attached to property at the fancy or caprice of any owner. Per Lord Brougham in Keppell v Bailey, 2 M & K at p 535, see also Hill v Tupper 2 H & C 121

Every one may build upon or otherwise utilize his own land regardless of the fact that his doing so involves an interference with the light which would otherwise reach the land and building of another person 72 Ind Cas 576=1923 Cal 256. Every land owner has a natural right to collect and retain upon his own land the surface water not flowing in a defined channel and put it into such use as he may desire 4 Pat L T 81=69 Ind Cas 947. The right of the riparian owner does not depend on the ownership of the soil of the stream. It belongs to the proprietor of the adjoining land as a natural incident to the right of the soil belonging to him and he is entitled to the benefit of it as is to all other natural advantages belonging to the land of which he is the owner 59 Ind Cas 364. 10 Subject to the provisions of section 8, a lessor may impose, on the property leased, any easement that does not derogate from the rights of the lessee as such, and a mortgagor may impose on the property mortgaged any easement that does not render the security insufficient. But a lessor or mortgagor cannot without the consent of the lessee or mortgagee, impose any other easement on such property, unless it be to take effect on the termination of the lease or the redemption of the mortgage.

Explanation — A security is insufficient within the meaning of the section, unless the value of the mortgaged property exceeds by one third, or if consisting of buildings, exceeds by one half, the amount for the time being due on the mortgage.

Notes — A mortgagor or a lessor cannot grant a right of easement in derogation of the rights of the lessee or mortgagee. Subject to the provisions of section 8 and of this section an easement can be created by an instrument under seal North British Railway Co v Park Yard Co Ltd (1898) A C 643, see also Southerland [1893] 3 Ch 169, Re Pearson's Will (1905) 83 L T 676, Pase v Courtnay 1904 2 Ch 503.

11. No lessee or other person having a derivative interest may impose, on the property held by him as such, an easement to take effect after the expiration of his own interest, or in derogation of the right of the lessor or the superior proprietor.

Notes — Vide notes under section 10.

12. An easement may be acquired by the owner of the immovable property for the beneficial enjoyment of which the right is created or, on his behalf, by any person in possession of the same.

One of two or more co owners of immovable property, may, as such with or without the consent of the other or others acquire an easement for the beneficial enjoyment of such property.

No lessee of immovable property can acquire, for the beneficial enjoyment of the immovable property of his own, an easement in or over the property comprised in his lease.

Notes — In Ringley v Milland Rail Co (1868) L. R. 3 Ch 610 Lord Cairns observed: 'There can be no easement, properly so called unless there be both a servient and a dominant tenement. An easement must be connected with a dominant tenement'. The point decided by Ackroyd v Smith, (1850) 10 C. B. 164, is that a right of way can not be so granted as to pass to the successive owners of land, as such in cases where the way is not connected in some manner with the enjoyment of the land, to which it is attempted to make it appurtenant. Although a tenement cannot acquire a prescriptive right of easement in the land belonging to his lessor, he may claim a right of easement based on immemorial user. 35 C. L.

Easements of necessity and quasi easements

13 Where one person transfers or bequeaths immoveable property to another,—

- (a) if an easement in other immoveable property of the transferor or testator is necessary for enjoying the subject of the transfer or bequest, the transferee or legatee shall be entitled to such easement; or,
- (b) if such an easement is apparent and continuous, and necessary for enjoying the said subject as it was enjoyed when the transfer or bequest took effect, the transferee or legatee shall, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, be entitled to such easement, or
- (c) if an easement in the subject of the transfer or bequest is necessary for enjoying other immoveable property of the transferor or testator, the transferor or the legal representative of the testator shall be entitled to such easement; or
- (d) if such an easement is apparent and continuous, and necessary for enjoying the said property as it was enjoyed when the transfer or bequest took effect the transferor, or the legal representative of the testator, shall, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied be entitled to such easement

Where a partition is made of the joint property of several persons,—

- (e) if an easement over the share of one of them is necessary for enjoying the share of another of them, the latter shall be entitled to such easement, or
- (f) if such an easement is apparent and continuous and necessary for enjoying the share of the latter as it was enjoyed when the partitions took effect he shall, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, be entitled to such easement

The easements mentioned in this section, clauses (a), (c) and (e) are called easements of necessity

Where immoveable property passes by operation of law, the persons from and to whom it so passes are for the purpose of this section, to be deemed, respectively the transferor and transferee

(a) A sells B a field then used for agricultural purposes only. It is inaccessible except by passing over A's adjoining land, or by trespassing on the land of a stranger. B is entitled to a right of way, for agricultural purposes only over A's adjoining land to the field sold.

(b) A, the owner of two fields, sells one to B and retains the other. The field retained was at the date of the sale used for agricultural purposes only, and is inaccessible except by passing over the field sold to B. A is entitled to a right of way, for agricultural purposes only over B's field to the field retained.

(c) A sells B a house with windows overlooking A's land which A retains. The light, which passes over A's land to the windows is necessary for enjoying the house as it was enjoyed when the sale took effect. B is entitled to the light, and A cannot afterwards obstruct it by building on his land.

(d) A sells B a house with windows overlooking A's land. The light passing over A's land to the windows is necessary for enjoying the house as it was enjoyed when the sale took effect. Afterwards A sells the land to C. Here C cannot obstruct the light by building on the land for he takes it subject to the burdens to which it was subject in A's hands.

(e) A is the owner of a house and adjoining land. The house has windows which look out on to the land. A sells the house to B and the land to C. A is entitled to the benefit of the house as it was enjoyed when the sale took effect. A impliedly grants B a right to the light, and C takes the land subject to the restriction that he may not build so as to obstruct such light.

(f) A is the owner of a house and adjoining land. The house has windows which look out on to the land. A sells the house to B and the land to C. A is entitled to the benefit of the house as it was enjoyed when the sale took effect. A impliedly grants B a right to the light, and C takes the land subject to the restriction that he may not build so as to obstruct such light.

(g) A, the owner of a house, sells B a factory built on adjoining land. B is entitled as against A, to pollute the air when necessary, with smoke and vapours from the factory.

(h) A, the owner of two adjoining houses Y and Z, sells Y to B and retains Z. B is entitled to the benefits of all the gutters and drains common to the two houses and necessary for enjoying Y as it was enjoyed when the sale took effect. A is entitled to the benefit of all the gutters and drains common to the two houses and necessary for enjoying Z as it was enjoyed when the sale took effect.

(i) A, the owner of two adjoining buildings, sells one to B, retaining the other. B is entitled to a right to lateral support from A's building and A is entitled to a right to lateral support from B's building.

(j) A, the owner of two adjoining buildings, sells one to B and the other to C. C is entitled to lateral support from B's building and B is entitled to lateral support from C's building.

Notes.—The implication of the grant of an easement may arise in two ways: 1st, upon the severance of a heritage by its owner into two or more parts; 2ndly, by prescription. Gale on Easements p. 111. Upon the severance of a heritage a grant will be implied 1st, of all those continuous and apparent easements which have in fact been enjoyed by the owner of the dominant tenement, though they had no legal existence as such at the time of the severance, without which the enjoyment of the servient tenement is impossible. The latter class are usually termed "easements of necessity" and are implied in the case of a severance of a heritage into two or more parts, if the use of the dominant tenement is impossible without the enjoyment of the servient tenement. See also 46 Ind Cas 327, 26 C 510, 11 B 452. Where the owner of an entire tract of land or of two or more adjoining parcels employ a part thereof so that one derives from the other a benefit or advantage of continuous and apparent nature, and sells the one in favour of which such continuous and apparent quasi easement exists the easement being necessary to the reasonable enjoyment of the property granted will pass to the grantee by implication 72 Ind Cas 576=1921 Cal 256, Ewert v Cockrane 4 Mac H L 117, Wheeldon v Burrows 12 Ch D 31, *Gayley v O W. Clause (a) The Court would be justified in holding that on the transfer of one portion of the property, the easement for the discharge of rain water over the other was necessary under this clause 4 S L R 180, see also 4 B 452.

Clause (b) The existence of drains through which adjoining lands were being irrigated is evidence of an apparent continuous and necessary easement which passes to the transferee 45 M I J 724. This clause relates to a continuous easement which a right of way is not 104 Lah 438=6 Lah L J 176. Where a portion of land is sold an easement apparent continuous and necessary for enjoying the portions severed from the transferor's land will pass to the transferee unless a contrary intention is expressed in the instrument of the transfer 47 M L J 307=81 Ind Cas 833. The necessity contemplated in clauses (a) (c) and (d) is an absolute necessity while in clause (b) of the section it is a qualified necessity. The distinction between the two is obvious: a right of way may not be absolutely necessary and yet necessary for the purpose of enjoying the property as it was enjoyed when the transfer of it took place, the existence of this last necessity has to be determined by reference to the prior user 3 Bom L R 601.

Clause (d) Vide 29 Ind Cas 493.

Clauses (e) and (f) There is a distinction between the cases falling under clauses (e) and (f). Under the former the plaintiff has to prove that the easement claimed was necessary for the enjoyment of the property allotted to him by partition and under the latter he has to prove four things (1) that the easement was apparent (2) that it was continuous (3) that it was necessary for enjoying his share of the property. Under the latter the plaintiff has to prove that the easement claimed was necessary for the enjoyment of the property allotted to him by partition and under the latter he has to prove four things (1) that the easement was apparent (2) that it was continuous (3) that it was necessary for enjoying his share of the property. 15 Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith as an easement, without interruption and for twenty years, Acquisition by prescription and where support from one person's land, or things affixed thereto has been peaceably received by another person's land subjected to artificial pressure, or by things affixed thereto, as an easement, without interruption, and for twenty years, and where a right of way or any other easement has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto, as an easement and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, support, or other easement, shall be absolute

Each of the said periods of twenty years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years, next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested

Explanation I — Nothing is an enjoyment within the meaning of this section, when it has been had in pursuance of an agreement with the owner or occupier of the property over which the right is claimed, and it is apparent from the agreement that such right has not been granted as an easement, or, if granted as an easement, that it has been granted for a limited period or subject to a condition on the fulfilment of which it is to cease

Explanation II — Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section, unless where there is an actual cessation of the enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof, and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made

Explanation III — Suspension of enjoyment in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners is not an interruption within the meaning of this section

* In s 14 the italicised article a has been inserted by Act VII of 1891

Explanation IV—In the case of an easement to pollute water, the said period of twenty years begins when the pollution first prejudices perceptibly the servient heritage

When the property over which a right is claimed under this section belongs to Government, this section shall be read as if for the words "twenty years," the words "sixty years" were substituted

(a) A suit is brought in 1883 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right without interruption, from 1st January 1862 to 1st January 1882. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that for a year of that time the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the servient heritage as lessee thereof and enjoyed the right as such lessee. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as an easement" for twenty years.

(c) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff, on one occasion during the twenty years, had admitted that the user was not of right, and asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as of right" for twenty years.

Title to easement by prescription—Prescription may be defined to be—a title acquired by possession had during the time and in the manner fixed by law. After the lapse of the requisite period the law adds the right of property to that which before was possession only.—Gale on Easements p 185; see also 19 Ind Cas 255=38 M 280. The possession here spoken of is legal possession. To constitute a legal possession there must be not only a corporeal detention or that quasi detention which according to the nature of the right, is equivalent to it, but there must be also the intention to act as owner. Gale on Easements p 185. From the definition of this section the enjoyment of the easement must be without interruption both as to the manner and during the time required by the law. In Monmouthshire Canal Company v Hurford (1839) 1 C M & R 631, Baron Parke observed: "An enjoyment of an easement for one week and a cessation to enjoy it during the next week and so on alternately would confer no right." ## CHAPTER III

THE INCIDENTS OF EASEMENTS

20 The rules contained in this chapter are controlled by any contract between the dominant and servient owners relating to the servient heritage, and by the provisions of the instrument or decree (if any) by which the easement referred to was imposed.

Incidents of customary easements.—And when any incident of any customary easement is inconsistent with such rules nothing in this chapter shall affect such incident.

Notes—There can be no question of easement as regards light and air in the case of joint property 28 Bom L R 1000=97 Ind Cas 691=A I R 1926 Bom 545

Bar to use unconnected with enjoyment 21 An easement must not be used for any purpose not connected with the enjoyment of the dominant heritage

(a) A as owner of a farm Y, has a right of way over B's land to Y, lying beyond Y. A has another farm Z, the beneficial enjoyment of which is not necessary for the beneficial enjoyment of Y. He must not use the easement for the purpose of passing to and from Z.

(b) A is owner of a certain house, has a right of way to and from it. For the purpose of passing to and from the house, the right may be used not only by A, lodgers, servants, workmen, visitors, with the enjoyment of the dominant the right of way for the purpose of collecting the rent and seeing that the house is kept in repair.

Notes—In Bailey v Stephens, 12 C B N S 61, Earle C J said: "It is a claim of a right as appurtenant to estate, and yet wholly unconnected with the estate. I can not find an authority for such a claim."

22 The dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner, and when the exercise of an easement can, without detriment to the dominant owner, be confined to a determinate part of the servient heritage, such exercise shall, at the request of the servient owner, be so confined.

Notes—Under this section the dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner. He can not impose any additional burden on the servient owner. If a way could be enjoyed in the mode as being the tract over which as 375

23 Subject to the provisions of section 22 the dominant owner may, from time to time alter the mode and place of enjoying the easement provided that he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage.

Exception—The dominant owner of a right of way cannot vary his line of passage at pleasure, even though he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage.

(c) A, as the owner of a paper mill, acquires a right to pollute a stream by pouring in the refuse liquor produced by making in the mill paper from rags. He may pollute the stream by pouring in similar liquor produced by making in the mill paper by a new process from bamboos provided that he does not substantially increase the amount, or injuriously change the nature of the pollution

(d) A, a riparian owner, acquire as against the lower riparian owners a prescriptive right to pollute a stream by throwing saw dust into it. This does not entitle A to pollute the stream by discharging into it poisonous liquor

Notes—The pipes and reservoirs laid by a Spinning and Weaving Company beneath the railway line belonged to the Company and were all along kept in repairs by them. They therefore had the right, as dominant owners, to enter on the premises of the Railway Company who were the servient owners to effect any repairs that might be necessary. The flow of pipe was stopped and there was the necessity to repair and the exercise of the right of entry for such purpose could not be deemed to be

Where an easement has been granted or bequeathed, so that its extent shall be proportionate to the extent of the dominant heritage, if the dominant heritage is increased by alluvion, the easement is proportionately increased, and, if the dominant heritage is diminished by diluvion, the easement is proportionately diminished

Save as aforesaid, no easement is affected by any change in the extent of the dominant or the servient heritage

THE DISTURBANCE OF EASEMENTS

Right to enjoyment without disturbance

32 The owner or occupier of the dominant heritage is entitled to enjoy the easement without disturbance by any other person

Illustration,

A as owner of a house, has a right of way over B's land. C unlawfully enters on B's land, and obstructs A in his right of way. A may sue C for compensation, not for the entry, but for the obstruction.

Notes—‘As it is the duty of the owner of the dominant tenement not to do any act which imposes an additional burden upon the owner of the servient tenements so the latter must not do an act which interferes with the exercise of the right already acquired, or those secondary easements which are requisite for its full and free enjoyment’—Gale on Easements p 507

33 The owner of any interest in the dominant heritage, or the occupier of such heritage, may institute a suit for compensation for the disturbance of the easement or of any right accessory thereto, provided that the disturbance has actually caused substantial damage to the plaintiff

Explanation I—The doing of any act likely to injure the plaintiff by affecting the evidence of the easement, or by materially diminishing the value of the dominant heritage, is substantial damage within the meaning of this section and section 34

Explanation II—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of light passing to the openings in a house, no damage is substantial within the meaning of this section, unless it falls within the first Explanation, or interferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff, or prevents him from carrying on his accustomed business in the dominant heritage as beneficially as he had done previous to instituting the suit.

Explanation III—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of air to the openings in a house damage is substantial within the meaning of this section if it interferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff, though it is not injurious to his health

THE EXTINCTION, SUSPENSION, AND REVIVAL OF EASEMENTS

37 When from a cause which preceded the imposition of an easement, the person by whom it was imposed ceases to have any right in the servient heritage, the easement is extinguished

Extinction by dissolution of right of servient owner

Exception—Nothing in this section applies to an easement lawfully imposed by a mortgagor in accordance with section 10

(a) A transfers Sultanpur to B on condition that he does not marry C B imposes an easement on Sultanpur Then B marries C B's interest in Sultanpur ends, and with it the easement

(c) A and B, tenants of C, have permanent transferable interests in their respective holdings A imposes on his holding an easement to draw water from a tank for the purpose of irrigating B's land B enjoys the easement for twenty years Then A's rent falls into arrear and his interest is sold B's easement is extinguished

(d) A mortgages Sultanpur to B, and lawfully imposes an easement on the land in favour of C in accordance with the provisions of section 10. The land is sold to D in satisfaction of the mortgage debt. The easement is not thereby extinguished.

Notes—“The implied grant cannot, of course, operate for or against the lessee, but it takes effect immediately on the determination of his interest.” Gale on Easements p 126. As regards the rights of the mortgagor, vide Born v Turner, (1900) 2 Ch 211.

38. An easement is extinguished when the dominant owner releases it, Extinction by release expressly or impliedly, to the servient owner.

Such release can be made only in the circumstances and to the extent in and to which the dominant owner can alienate the dominant heritage.

An easement may be released as to part only of the servient heritage.

Explanation I An easement is impliedly released—

- (a) where the dominant owner expressly authorizes an act of a permanent nature to be done on the servient heritage, the necessary consequence of which is to prevent his future enjoyment of the easement, and such act is done in pursuance of such authority.
- (b) where any permanent alteration is made in the dominant heritage of such a nature as to show that the dominant owner intended to cease to enjoy the easement in future.

Explanation, II Mere non-user of an easement is not an implied release within the meaning of this section.

Illustrations

(a) A, B, and C are co-owners of a house to which an easement is annexed A, without the consent of B and C releases the easement. This release is effectual only as against A and his legal representative.

(b) A grants B an easement over A's land for the beneficial enjoyment of his house. B assigns the house to C. B then purports to release the easement. The release is ineffectual.

(c) A, having the right to discharge his eaves droppings into B's yard, expressly authorizes B to build over this yard to a height which will interfere with the discharge. B builds accordingly, A's easement is extinguished to the extent of the interference.

(d) A, having an easement of light to a window, builds up that window with bricks and mortar so as to manifest an intention to abandon the easement permanently. The easement is impliedly released.

(e) A, having a projecting roof by means of which he enjoys an easement to discharge eaves droppings on B's land permanently alters the roof, so as to direct the rain water into a different channel, and discharge it on C's land. The easement is impliedly released.

Notes—In order to disentitle a dominant owner to an easement on the ground of non user the permanent alteration made in the dominant heritage must be of such a nature as to show that the dominant owner intended to cease to enjoy the easement in future. If mere failure to keep the servient tenement in good repair is insufficient to establish an intention to abandon the easement, vide 25 Ind Cas 383.  Extinction by permanent burden on the servient heritage is materially owner without interfering with the lawful enjoyment of the easement, the easement is extinguished, unless—

- (a) it was intended for the beneficial enjoyment of the dominant heritage, to whatever extent the easement should be used, or
- (b) the injury caused to the servient owner by the change is so slight that no reasonable person would complain of it, or
- (c) the easement is an easement of necessity

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to an easement entitling

Extinction on permanent alteration of servient heritage by superior force

44. An easement is extinguished where the servient heritage is by superior force, so permanently altered that the dominant owner can no longer enjoy such easement.

Provided that, where a way of necessity is destroyed by superior force, the dominant owner has a right to another way over the servient heritage, and the provisions of section 14 apply to such way.

Notes—A tenant may have a customary right or customary easement to irrigate his lands with water from his landlord's tank, but where owing to natural causes the tank becomes unfit for use as an irrigation source such right becomes extinguished under this section. 56 Ind Cas 598.

Extinction by destruction of either heritage

45. An easement is extinguished when either the dominant or the servient heritage is completely destroyed.

Illustrations

A has a right of way over a road running along the foot of a sea cliff. The road is washed away by a permanent encroachment of the sea. A's easement is extinguished.

Notes—By the civil law the mere destruction either of the dominant or servient tenement extinguished a servitude, though it was held to revive if the house was built on the same site and of the same dimensions as before.—Gale on Easements, p 502.

Extinction by unity of ownership

46. An easement is extinguished when the same person becomes entitled to the absolute ownership of the whole of the dominant and servient heritages.

Notes—A man can not acquire a right of easement upon his own land, and possibly this may extend also to joint co-sharership of land. In order to extinguish an easement, it is necessary that some person should be entitled to absolute ownership of the whole of the dominant and servient tenements, so that a mere acquisition of qualified ownership on the one hand or partial ownership on the other would not extinguish an easement A W N 1887, 260

Extinction by non enjoyment 47 A continuous easement is extinguished when it totally ceases to be enjoyed as such for an unbroken period of twenty years

A discontinuous easement is extinguished when, for a like period, it has not been enjoyed as such

Such period shall be reckoned, in the case of a continuous easement, from the day on which its enjoyment was obstructed by the servient owner, or rendered impossible by the dominant owner, and, in the case of a discontinuous easement, from the day on which it was last enjoyed by any person as dominant owner

Provided that, if, in the case of a discontinuous easement, the dominant owner, within such period, registers, under the Indian Registration Act, 1877, a declaration of his intention to retain such easement, it shall not be extinguished until a period of twenty years has elapsed from the date of the registration

Where an easement can be legally enjoyed only at a certain place, or at certain times, or between certain hours, or for a particular purpose, its enjoyment during the said period at another place or at other times, or between other hours, or for another purpose, does not prevent its extinction under this section

The circumstance that, during the said period no one was in possession of the servient heritage or that the easement could not be enjoyed, or that a right accessory, thereto was enjoyed, or that the dominant owner was not aware of its existence, or that he enjoyed it in ignorance of his right to do so, does not prevent its extinction under this section

An easement is not extinguished under this section—

- (a) Where the cessation is in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners,
- (b) where the dominant heritage is held in co ownership, and one of the co owners enjoys the easement within the said period, or
- (c) where the easement is a necessary easement

Where several heritages are respectively subject to rights of way for the benefit of a single heritage, and the ways are continuous such rights shall, for the purposes of this section be deemed to be a single easement

A has an easement to draw water from B's well As accessory thereto, he has a right of way over B's land to and from the well The easement to draw water is extinguished under section 47 The right of way is also extinguished

49. An easement is suspended when the dominant owner becomes entitled to possession of the servient heritage for a limited interest therein, or when the servient owner becomes entitled to possession of the dominant heritage for a limited interest therein

Suspension of easement Notes—According to ss 49 and 51, an easement suspended for more than 20 years would be destroyed. So where the servient owner was in possession both of the dominant and servient heritages for a period of 20 years the right of easement (a right of way) becomes extinguished (1913) M W N 95=16 Ind Cas 375

50 The servient owner has no right to require that an easement be continued, and, notwithstanding the provisions of section 26 he is not entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of the extinguishment or suspension of the easement, if the dominant owner has given to the servient owner such notice as will enable him without unreasonable expense, to protect the servient heritage from such damage

Servient owner not entitled to require continuance Where such notice has not been given, the servient owner is entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of such extinguishment or suspension

A in exercise of an easement diverts into his canal the water of B's stream. The diversion continues for many years and during that time the bed of the stream partly fills up. A then abandons his easement and restores the stream to its ancient course. B's land is consequently flooded. B sues A for compensation for the damage caused by the flooding. It is proved that A gave B 7 months' notice of the intention to abandon the easement and that such notice was sufficient to enable B without unreasonable expense, to have prevented the damage. The suit must be dismissed.

51 An easement extinguished under section 45 revives (a) when the destroyed heritage is before twenty years have expired, restored by the deposit of alluvion; (b) when the destroyed heritage is a servient building, and, before twenty years have expired, such building is rebuilt upon the same site, and (c) when the destroyed heritage is a dominant building, and before twenty years have expired, such building is rebuilt upon the same site, and in such a manner as not to impose a greater burden on the servient heritage

Revival of easements An easement extinguished under section 46 revives when the grant or bequest by which the unity of ownership was produced is set aside by the decree of a competent Court. A necessary easement extinguished under the same section revives when the unity of ownership ceases from any other cause.

A suspended easement revives if the cause of suspension is removed before the right is extinguished under section 47

of qualified ownership on the one hand or partial ownership on the other would not extinguish an easement A W N 1887, 260

Extinction by non enjoyment 47 A continuous easement is extinguished when it totally ceases to be enjoyed as such for an unbroken period of twenty years

A discontinuous easement is extinguished when for a like period, it has not been enjoyed as such

Such period shall be reckoned, in the case of a continuous easement from the day on which its enjoyment was obstructed by the servient owner, or rendered impossible by the dominant owner, and, in the case of a discontinuous easement, from the day on which it was last enjoyed by any person as dominant owner

Provided that, if, in the case of a discontinuous easement, the dominant owner, within such period, registers, under the Indian Registration Act, 1877, a declaration of his intention to retain such easement, it shall not be extinguished until a period of twenty years has elapsed from the date of the registration

Where an easement can be legally enjoyed only at a certain place, or at certain times, or between certain hours, or for a particular purpose, its enjoyment during the said period at another place, or at other times, or between other hours, or for another purpose, does not prevent its extinction under this section

The circumstance that, during the said period, no one was in possession of the servient heritage, or that the easement could not be enjoyed, or that a right accessory, thereto was enjoyed, or that the dominant owner was not aware of its existence, or that he enjoyed it in ignorance of his right to do so, does not prevent its extinction under this section

- (a) Where the cessation is in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners,
- (b) where the dominant heritage is held in co ownership, and one of the co owners enjoys the easement within the said period, or
- (c) where the easement is a necessary easement

Where several heritages are respectively subject to rights of way for the benefit of a single heritage and the ways are continuous such rights shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a single easement

Illustration

A has as annexed to his house rights of way from the high road thither over the heritages X and Z and the intervening heritage Y Before the twenty years expired, A exercises his right of way over X His rights of way over Y and Z are not extinguished

LICENCES

52 Where one person grants to another, or to definite number of other persons, a right to do, or continue to do, in or upon the immovable property of the grantor something which would, in the absence of such right, be unlawful, and such right does not amount to an easement or an interest in the property, the right is called a licence

Notes—A dispensation or licence properly passes no interest nor alters or transfers any property in anything but only makes an action lawful which without it had been unlawful A licence to go beyond the seas to hunt in a man's park, to come into his house are only actions which without licence had been unlawful But a licence to hunt in a man's park and carry away the deer killed to his own use to cut down a tree in a man's ground and to carry it away the next day after to his own use are licences as to the acts of hunting and cutting down the tree but as to the carrying away of the deer killed and tree cut down they are grants Thomas v Sorrel (1679) Vough 351, see also Musket v Hill (1839) 5 Bing N C 694 Both the benefit and the burden of an easement are annexed to land Hastings v North Eastern Railway (1898) 2 Ch 674, (1899) 1 Ch 650, (1900) C 260 But a mere licence when it is not coupled with a grant is personal to both grantor and grantee Gale on Easement p 886, see also 38 A 171=32 Ind Cas 346=14 A L J 137 13 B 397, 16 M 304, 7 Bom L R 352=8 Bom L R 310 An action by a licence for infringement of licence against a stranger is not maintainable Hill v Tupper 2 H & C 121, Stockport v Potter 3 H & C 300 A licence is not generally assignable Musket v Hill 5 Bing N C 694, Metcalf v Westaway 34 L J C P 43, see also 84 Ind Cas 284=(1924) All 825

53 A licence may be granted by any one in the circumstances and to the extent, in and to which he may transfer his interests in the property affected by the licence

Notes—A beneficial licence to be exercised upon land may be granted without deed and without writing Taylor v Walters 7 Taunt 374 Transfers of different rights in two properties may be simultaneous and yet distinct, e.g. transfer of a mill and a licence to use the site on which it is built 12 N L R 75=34 Ind Cas 71

54 The grant of a licence may be express or implied from the conduct of the grantor, and an agreement which purports to create an easement, but is ineffectual for that purpose, may operate to create a licence

Notes—A licence is not implied by law to a purchaser of goods (though sold under an execution of a distress) to enter upon the premises of the former owner and take them away Williams v Morris 8 M & W 1, the express is coupled with a grant of immovable property and for which writing and registration are independently of the licence and when the grant, if unwritten and unregistered its accompaniment, would remain a mere licence

55. All licences necessary for the enjoyment of any interest or the exercise of any right, are implied in the constitution of such interest or right. Such licences are called accessory licences.

Accessory licences annexed by law

Notes—A licensee is not a trespasser until the licence is revoked and he has a reasonable time after the withdrawal of the licence to go off the land and to remove goods which he has been licensed to place there. Cornish v Steoble (1870) L. R. 5 C. P. 334, Mellor v Watkins, (1874) L. R. 9 Q. B. 409, Wilson v Towner (1901) 1 Ch. 578. Held, that such reservation operated as a licence to enter the land for the purpose of cutting and carrying away the tree. Heast v Isham, 7 Ex. 77.

56. Unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied a licence when transferable licence to attend a place of public entertainment may be transferred by the licensee, but save as aforesaid, a licence cannot be transferred by the licensee, or exercised by his servants or agents.

(1) A grants a licence to B to use temporary grain sheds on his land whenever he pleases. The right is not transferable. B's servants may enter on the land for the purpose of erecting sheds, erect the same, deposit grain therein, and remove grain therefrom.

Notes—A licence is not generally assignable by the licensee. Muskett v Hill, (1839) 5 Bing. N. C. 694, Metcalf v Westway, 34 L. J. C. P. 43.

57. The grantor of a licence is bound to disclose to the licensee, any defect in the property affected by the licence, likely to be dangerous to the person or property of the licensee of which the grantor is, and the licensee is not, aware.

58. The grantor of a licence is bound not to do anything likely to render the property affected by the licence dangerous to the person or property of the licensee.

59. When the grantor of the licence transfers the property affected thereby, the transferee is not, as such, bound by the licence.

Notes—A licence is determined by an assignment of the subject matter in respect of which the privilege is to be enjoyed. Coleman v Foster, 1 H. & N. 37, see also Wallis v Harrison, 4 M. & W. 535, Roffey v Henderson 17 Q. A licensee cannot by enjoying the licence for any length of time acquire right adverse to that of the licensor. 44 A. 726.

60. A licence may be revoked by the grantor, unless—

- it is coupled with a transfer of property, and such transfer is in fact
- the licensee acting upon the licence, has executed a work of permanent character, and incurred expenses in the execution

Notes—If a licence was granted by the zemindars to the predecessor of the judgment-debtor and they acting upon that licence, built a house

License when deemed revoked

62 A licence is deemed to be revoked—

- when, from a cause preceding the grant of it, the grantor ceases to have any interest in the property affected by the licence,
- when the licensee releases it, expressly or impliedly to the grantor or his representative,
- where it has been granted for a limited period, or acquired, on condition that it shall become, void on the performance or non performance of a specified act and the period expires, or the condition is fulfilled,
- where the property affected by the licence is destroyed, or by superior force so permanently altered that the licensee can no longer exercise his rights
- where the licensee becomes entitled to the absolute ownership of the property affected by the licence,

- (f) where the licence is granted for a specified purpose and the purpose is attained or abandoned, or becomes impracticable ;
- (g) where the licence is granted to the licensee as holding a particular office, employment, or character, and such office, employment or character ceases to exist ;
- (h) where the licence totally ceases to be used as such for an unbroken period of twenty years, and such cessation is not in pursuance of a contract, between the grantor and the licensee ;
- (i) in the case of an accessory licence, when the interest or right to which it is accessory ceases to exist

Notes.—The effect of a licence

63. Where a licence is revoked, the licensee is entitled to a reasonable time to leave the property affected thereby, and to remove any goods which he has been allowed to place on such property

Notes.—Although a licence to place articles on the property of another may be revocable at any moment the licensee is entitled to notice of the revocation, and to a reasonable time for the removal of the articles. *Mellor v. condition that it might remain there, and be carried away from time to time by the purchaser up to Lady day next. Held that this licence could not be revoked. Wood Manly, 3 P. & D. 5

64. Where a licence has been granted for a consideration, and the licensee, without any fault of his own, is evicted by the grantor before he has fully enjoyed, under the license, the right for which he contracted, he is entitled to recover compensation from the grantor.

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

ACT NO. 1 OF 1872

[16th March, 1872]

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate, define and amend the Law of Evidence, it is hereby

Preamble
enacted as follows —

Scope of the Act—This Act does not contain the whole law of evidence governing this country. Section 2 of the Act saves rules of evidence contained in any Statute Act or Regulation in force. In Re Radolph Stallman, 15 C W N 1053=39 C 164=14 C L J 375

Lex Fori—'The law of evidence is the lex fori which governs the Courts. Whether a witness is competent or not whether a certain matter requires to be proved by writing or not whether certain evidence proves a certain fact or not, that is to be determined by the law of the country where the question arises where the remedy is sought to be enforced, and where the Court sits to enforce it' Per Lord Brougham in Bain v Whitehaven and Furness Junction Railway Company, 3 H L C 1

English decisions—The English decisions relating to evidence can be relied upon in India. The rules of evidence are subject to the general principles of jurisprudence. Annaya v Emperor, 39 M 449=28 M L J 329. This Act has codified the English law of evidence with few exceptions. Gujju Lal, v Fatch Lal, 6 C 171=6 C L R 439, see also 17 B 129, 4 B 576. But the Act is not a servile copy of the English Law 10 B 439

History of the Law of Evidence—'Reasoning the rational method of settling disputed questions, is the modern substitute for certain formal and mechanical tests which flourished among our ancestors for centuries, and in the midst of which the trial by jury emerged. When two men to-day settle which is the best man by a prize fight we get an accurate notion of the old Germanic trial by combat'.

struggle, and the Judges of the common Pleas Act, like the referee at a prize fight, simply to administer the procedure the rules of the game. So of the King's Bench in Criminal Appeals, and so sat Richard II at the trial of the appeal of treason between Bolingbroke and Norfolk, as Shakespeare represents it in the play. So of the various ordeals, the accused party tried his own case by unaided going the given requirement as to hot iron or water, or the crumb. So of the oath, the questioning both law and fact, was tried merely by the oath with or without fellow swearers. The old 'trial by witness' was a testing of the go-between in like manner by their mere oath. So a record was said to try itself. And so when out of the midst of these methods first came the trial by jury, it was the jury's oath or rather their verdict, that tried the case. How this method of trial came to swallow up the others, and then to lose its chief features and become shaped into an instrument of our modern purely rational procedure, is a long story, and is not for this place. But now, when we use the phrases 'trial' and 'trial by jury' we mean a rational ascertainment of facts and a rational ascertaining and application of rules. 'What was formerly tried by the method of force or the mechanical reason'—Thayer Cases on Evidence . . . . .

from the primitive time up to the 12th century, thence to the sixteenth thence to the seveneenth, thence to 1793 A. D. thence to 1830, and thence to the present time. As regards development during the first period no reliable data are available—though certain rules can be traced up to that earliest time. The next three centuries marked the establishment of the trial by jury and the separation of the processes of pleading and procedure from that of proof. Between 1500 A. D. and 1700 A. D., the foundation of the present system was laid. During that period we find the regulation of the competency of witnesses, the rules of privileges and privileged communications, the rules for attorneys, the compulsory attendance of witnesses, the privilege against self incriminations, the parole evidence rule and the enactments of the Statute of Frauds. The fourth period of ninety years saw the final establishment of cross examination by counsel the rule for the impeachment and corroboration of witnesses the "best evidence" doctrine and the publication of the first treatise on the law of evidence, by Chief Justice Barron Gilbert. The next forty years (1790-1830) saw a tremendous increase of the rulings upon evidence, there being more than in the preceding two centuries. The thirty years ending with 1860 will ever be associated with the names of Bentham Brougham and Denham—Burr Jones. In 1872 the Indian Evidence Act was enacted which is based on English law.

Origin of the Law of Evidence—In the submission of the facts which constitute the evidence in a case there have been embarrassments real and imaginary, which have resulted in the development of a set of rules. These rules relate to the use of such facts in Court as evidence and make up the "law of evidence." The embarrassments referred to above may be attributed in the early stages of law mainly to the jury—the one feature of the English judicial system in which it differs from all others. The jury from the time it began to take on the character of an arbiter of facts must have been a disturbing element in the work of the Court. It was an uncertain quantity which in the eyes of the Judge needed to be guarded against.

When the jury existed merely as a body of witness, supposedly familiar with the jury came into contact with the development of the jury into a reasoning inference-drawing body of men possessing the power to determine the ultimate facts in issue and by their verdict to judicially settle the controversy, the situation, to the mind of the Judge was full of embarrassments. To what conclusions might not these men come, men ignorant of the law and its methods unfamiliar with the ways of counsel, open to the influence of testimony and arguments presented solely for the purpose of playing upon their sympathy passion and prejudice. This was a situation to be deplored, and to be relieved of its danger as far as possible.

Accordingly, with the beginning of the use of evidence before juries, we find the beginnings of the law of evidence. Statements to which the Courts might listen with impunity were carefully kept from the jury by excluding rules, established by the judges.

It must not be supposed that these excluding rules came into existence all at once. The development of the jury into its final shape was a gradual one, and the growth of rules governing the use of evidence before the jury was equally gradual. It is immaterial to enquire here as to the kind of evidence which was excluded, that is to be found in any English treatise on the Law of Evidence. It is sufficient to say that, in general everything except what was actually within knowledge of the witness was considered unsafe to put before the jury. Thus hearsay and opinion were both objectionable. In this way this susceptibility of the jury played its part in moulding the law of evidence into its modern form.

The supposed ignorance of the average jury was also an important factor in the evolution of the rules of evidence. Things likely to complicate the case to confuse the mind, or mislead as to the real facts in issue were accordingly excluded.

With the expansion of the work of the Courts and the ever increasing volume of business brought before them, a necessity arose for shortening of trials and the expediting of the work in every possible way. This influence was a powerful one in its effect upon the admission of evidence. Much that was logically relevant, and indeed worthy of consideration if minute enquiry was possible, became inadmissible, upon the theory that it was too remote or of slight importance. collateral matters these were in the main—matters likely to lead to prolonged collateral enquiry with a meager result in the way of inference compelling proof when finished.

Other things operated to make it easy and natural for the Courts to establish rules relating to the use of evidence. The policy of the law in respect to persons charged with wrongs which extends to them the extreme limit of fairness is responsible for the growth of an important class of excluding rules. Such rules shut out from the consideration of the jury any facts bearing upon character or habit and this, although in many instances previous character would be logically a most important piece of evidence from which to infer the truth as to facts in issue.

Relevancy of Facts

PRELIMINARY

Short title 1 This Act may be called the Indian Evidence Act, 1872

It extends to the whole of British India, and applies to all judicial proceedings in or before any Court, including Courts martial, 'other than Courts martial convened under the Army Act" [or the Air Force Act]* but not to affidavits presented to any Court or officer, not to proceedings before an arbitrator, and it shall come into force on the first day of September, 1872.

Commencement of Act

Legislative changes—The words within quotations have been added by Act 18 of 1919

Application—It extends to the whole of British India. For definition of the term of British India vide Act X of 1907 s 7. It has been declared in force in the Santhal Parganas by Reg 3 of 1873 s 3 as amended by Reg 3 of 1899 s 3, in the Angul District, by Reg 3 of 1913 s 3 in the Chittagong Hill tracts by Reg 1 of 1900 s 4, in the Arakan Hill District by Reg 1 of 1916, s 2, in Kachin Hill tracts, as regards Hill tribes by Reg 1 of 1899, s 3 in certain tracts in the Chin Hills by Reg 5 of 1896 s 3 in Upper Burma, except Shan States (with an addition) by Act 13 of 1898 s 4 in British Baluchistan (with a modification) by Reg 2 of 1913 s 3

* Added by Act X of 1907

Judicial proceedings — An enquiry is judicial if the object of it is to determine a legal relation between one person and another or a group of persons, or between him and the community generally, but even a Judge acting without such an object in view is not acting judicially. 12 B 35, see also 15 M 138

Court — For definition of the term vide s 3 in the shape of affidavits cannot be received as 14 C 653. In England discretionary powers are any particular fact or facts to be proved by affidavit, witness to be read at a hearing or trial on such conditions as it may think reasonable with this proviso that when the opposite party bonafide desires to cross examine a witness and the witness can be produced such witness's evidence shall not be allowed to be given by affidavit. Powell, 695

Courts Martial — The rules of evidence as contained in this Act do not apply to Courts martial held either under 38 Vict c 7 or under 44 & 45 Vict c 58. Courts Martial must adopt the same rules of evidence as those followed in the Courts of ordinary criminal jurisdiction in England (Powell, p 28)

Arbitrator — Vide 11 M 85, 1 W R 12 but see 4 C 231

Repeal of enactments 2 On and from that day the following laws shall be repealed —

- (1) all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India,
- (2) all such rules, laws and regulations as have acquired the force of law under the 25th section of the Indian Councils Act, 1861, in so far as they relate to any matter herein provided for and
- (3) the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any provision of any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India and not hereby expressly repealed

Scope — This section repeals all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute or Regulation. Thus the English common law on the subject of evidence is repealed 71 A 70 = 5 C 754. The Hindu and Mahomedan law of evidence is also repealed 76 P R 1891. But this Act does not contain the whole law of evidence 39 C 164. See also 7 A 385, 1 A 53, 1 A 297, 11 A 433, 10 A 289

3 In this Act the following words and expressions are used in the following senses unless a contrary intention appears from the context —

Interpretation clause
Court includes all Judges and Magistrates and all persons, except arbitrators legally authorized to take evidence

Fact "Fact" means and includes —

- (1) any thing state of things or relation of things capable of being perceived by the senses,
- (2) any mental condition of which any person is conscious

"Disproved" the Court either believes that it does not exist, or considers its non existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it does not exist.

"Not proved"

A fact is said not to be proved when it is neither proved nor disproved

Court—The definition of "Court" is framed only for the purposes of the Act itself, and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope 12 B 36 The word "Court" in the above section means and includes, in a trial by jury, both Judge and Jury 4 C 483-3 C L R 270 (F B) A sub-registrar is a Court as defined in this Act 13 B L R App. 10-22 W R Cr 10

Fact—‘Ordinarily, a fact is something done or which has come to pass; an act or deed or event, an effect produced or a result achieved; anything regarded as strictly true or actually existent, whether material or mental; reality, actuality. In legal use it includes the fact that any mental condition, of which any person is conscious, exists. The legal meaning is not limited to what is tangible or visible or in any way the object of sense. Things invisible, mere thoughts, intentions, fancies complete idea to the mind, unless in connection with the object to which it necessarily relates. That object is fact or matter of fact”—Burr Jones, Ev 66 underlying principle of the law of evidence, namely, logical relevancy for the purpose of determining whether or not the fact offered can be evidence. If the fact meet this test it may or may not be admitted. For flanked round the general principle on the law of evidence that what is logically relevant is admissible, are numerous excluding rules which say that this or that fact, though logically relevant, is inadmissible. The jury as a feature of the English judicial system, is responsible for the existence of many of these rules though each has its own peculiar principle upon which it is founded. These rules and their application form a large portion of the bar of evidence—McKelvey's Law of Evidence p 13. The word “relevant” in this Act means admissible. Per Lord Hobhouse in Lala Lakshmi v Chand Haider

Facts in issue—Facts in issue are those which are alleged by one party and denied by the other on the pleading in a civil case, or alleged in the indictment and denied by the plea of not guilty in a criminal case, so far as they are in either case material. There is therefore little difficulty in ascertaining what are the facts in issue. Cockle Cas 56 Facts in issue are those facts which are necessary by law to establish the claim libly, or defence, forming the subject matter of the proceedings and which, either by the pleadings or by implication, are in dispute between the parties. Facts in issue are determinable primarily by the substantive law, and secondly by the pleadings. Phil Ev 53

Evidence—This definition is open to the criticism that it does not include those facts which in judicial proceedings may be addressed directly to the sense of the Court or jury (Burr Jones Ev s 3) Says Professor Greenleaf

"Evidence in legal acceptance includes all the means by which alleged matter, of fact the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved" (1 Green Ev s 1) It includes "all the legal means, exclusive of mere argument which tend to prove or disprove any matter of fact the truth of which is submitted to judicial investigation" (Taylor § 1, Pozell, 1) The term 'evidence' in its ordinary sense signifies that which makes apparent the truth of a matter in question. It is no doubt more frequently applied to prove before a judicial tribunal but it is not necessarily confined to this sense, it applies with equal correctness to information acquired by any person, who undertakes an enquiry on any matter in question. 4 M 393. The demeanour of a witness is evidence. (21 W R C R 13 F B, 21 C 279) The best and simplest definition of the word 'evidence' is that it is any matter of fact from which an inference may be drawn as to another matter of fact. Bentham in his Rationale of Judicial Evidence (vol I p 17) states that evidence includes 'any matter of fact the effect, tendency or design of which, when presented to the mind, is to produce a pursuance either affirmative or disaffirmative of the existence' Prof Thayer substantially follows Bentham's idea but narrows the scope of the word to 'any matter of fact which is furnished to a legal tribunal otherwise than by reasoning or a reference to which is noticed without proof as the basis of inference in ascertaining some other matter of fact' (3 Harv Law Rev 143)

Proved—A fact is said to be proved, when after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes it to exist or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon it as required in the persuasion of the tribunal of the probability of the proposition.

In the former a mere preponderance of probability, due regard being had to the burden of proof is a sufficient basis of decision but in the latter, especially when the offence charged amounts to treason or felony, a much higher degree of assurance is required. The serious consequence of an erroneous condemnation, both to accused and society, the immeasurably greater evils which flow from it than from an erroneous acquittal have induced the laws of every wise and civilised nation to lay down the principle though often lost sight of in practice that the pursuance of guilt ought to amount to a moral certainty, or as an eminent judge expressed it, such a moral certainty, as convinces the minds of the tribunal, as reasonable men, beyond all reasonable doubt." The expression 'moral certainty' is here used in contra distinction to physical certainty, or certainty properly so called, for the physical possibility of the innocence of any accused person can never be excluded. Best § 95. "Evidence in legal acceptance includes all the means by which alleged matter, of fact the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved" (1 Green Ev s 1) It includes "all the legal means, exclusive of mere argument which tend to prove or disprove any matter of fact the truth of which is submitted to judicial investigation" (Taylor § 1, Powell, 1) The term 'evidence' in its ordinary sense signifies that which makes apparent the truth of a matter in question. It is no doubt more frequently applied to prove before a judicial tribunal but it is not necessarily confined to this sense, it applies with equal correctness to information intimated acquired by any person who undertakes an enquiry on any matter in question 4 M 393 The demeanour of a witness is evidence (21 W R C R 13 F B, 21 C 279) The best and simplest definition of the word 'evidence' is that it is any matter of fact from which an inference may be drawn as to another matter of fact. Bentham in his Rationality of Judicial Evidence (vol I p 17) states that evidence includes "any matter of fact the effect, tendency or design of which, when presented to the mind, is to produce a persuasion either affirmative or disaffirmative of the existence" Prof Thayer substantially follows Bentham's idea but narrows the scope of the word to any matter of fact which is furnished to a legal tribunal otherwise than by reasoning or a reference to which is noticed without proof as the basis of inference in ascertaining some other matter of fact" (3 Harv Law Rev 143)

Proved—A fact is said to be proved, when after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes it to exist or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists. A much stricter degree of proof is required in criminal proceedings than in civil ones, and in criminal proceedings the persuasion of guilt must amount to such a moral certainty as convinces the mind of the tribunal as reasonable men, beyond all reasonable doubt. It is the business of the prosecution to bring guilt home to the accused, to the satisfaction of the minds of the jury, but the doubt to the benefit of which the accused is entitled must be such as a rational, thinking, sensible man may fairly and reasonably entertain, not the doubt of a vacillating mind, that has not the moral courage to decide, 'but abelters in a vain and idle scepticism' There must be doubts which a man may honestly and conscientiously entertain 3 L B R 216=4 Cr L J 382 "There is a strong

fact was proved or not" per Mitter J in 9 C 303=12 C L R 490 Therefore in determining what is evidence other than evidence in the phraseology of the Act, the definition of "evidence" must be read with that of "proved" Thus though the result of the enquiry instituted by the Junsif is not evidence according to the definition in the Evidence Act, it is a matter before the Court, which the Court can take into consideration Ibid But a judge without giving evidence can not impart his own knowledge into a case 3 I A 286, 11 M L A 213, 22 W R 9; 24 W R 81, 24 W R Cr 28

Distinction between proof and evidence—The word "evidence" in legal acceptance includes all the means by which any alleged matter of fact the truth of which is submitted to investigation is established or disproved. This term, and the word proof are often used indifferently, as synonymous with each other, but the latter is applied by the most accurate logicians to the effect of evidence, and not to the medium by which truth is established. None but mathematical truth is susceptible of that high degree of evidence called demonstration which excludes all possibility of error, and which, therefore may reasonably be required in support of every mathematical deduction. Matters of fact are proved by moral evidence alone, by which is meant not only that kind of evidence which is employed on subject, connected with moral conduct but all the evidence which is not obtained either from intension or from demonstration. In the ordinary affairs of life we do not require demonstrative evidence, because it is not inconsistent with the nature of the subject and to insist upon it would be unreasonable and absurd. The most that can be affirmed of such things is, that there is no reasonable doubt concerning them. The true question therefore in trials of facts, is not whether it is possible that the testimony may be false but whether there is sufficient possibility of its truth, that is whether the facts are shown by competent and satisfactory evidence. Things established by competent and satisfactory evidence are said to be proved — Greenleaf on the Law of Evidence p. 4

May presume 4 Whenever it is provided by this Act that the Court may presume a fact it may either regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved, or may call for proof of it

Whenever it is directed by this Act that the Court shall presume a fact, it shall regard such fact as proved unless and until it is disproved

When one fact is declared by this Act to be conclusive proof of another, the Court shall, on proof of the one fact, regard the other as proved, and shall not allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving it

prima facie assumptions are to cast upon the party against whom they operate the duty of going forward in argument or evidence on the particular point to which themselves either argument or evidence, in the result of both. Presumption, many names for an act or process. Thayer C. 13 38

Division of presumption — English text writers divide presumptions into three classes — (1) Presumption of fact (2) Rebuttable presumption of law and (3) Irrebuttable presumption of law

May presume — The first class of presumption mentioned by English text writers comes under this definition. It is nothing more than an argument more or less cogent, it is an inference of one fact drawn from other facts. (Vide Powell 386)

Shall presume — A presumption of law must be distinguished from prima facie evidence of fact. The latter no doubt seems to shift the burden of proof. A presumption of law can also be rebutted. But until it is rebutted the presumption stands good and the judge must give effect to it without calling further proof of the same. (Vide Powell, 388) This presumption derives its force from strictly speaking it is an 'assumption' presumptions of fact are obviously of aggregates certain of the stronger evidence is the correct one, unless and in. Such a presumption may be

Conclusive proof—On the other hand an irrebutable presumption of law is no presumption at all, it is simply an indisputable proposition of law. For example, the rule that a child under seven cannot commit a crime is a rigid rule of law—in fact, part of the definition of crime (Powell, 386)

Origin of the Rules—These rules it is likely, all had their beginnings in logical inference, however independent of it they may have become in their final shape. Now the basis of inference is experience. The Judge and the Jury go into Court with the experience of ordinary human beings and in the process of drawing inference, constantly call upon such experience. Coupled with the facts introduced as evidence at the trial it forms the basis of the inferences necessary to arrive at a determination of the facts in issue. It happens that in the almost innumerable cases that are tried, certain facts or groups of fact have been repeatedly presented to Courts as foundations for inferences, and the inferences being reasonable ones, judged by experience of the Court and Jury have been repeatedly drawn until a rule has crystalized. It is not difficult to see why these developed so early and were so readily adopted by the Courts. Judges have always been suspicious of the Jurors and have seized every opportunity to establish rules for their guidance, and to control their conclusions from the evidence introduced. The mind of the Judges was supposedly nothing if not logical, while the untrained minds of the Jury were open to influences of prejudice sympathy, and a thousand other things. Logical inference was therefore made a basis of a vast number of such rules which the Judges established and which they called 'presumptions'—rules relating to the manner of proving cases and in this sense having to do with the law of evidence, fixing, for example, when sufficient evidence was introduced, or when a party must introduce further evidence if he would win his case—McKelvey's Laws of Evidence p. 80

CHAPTER II.

OF THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

5 Evidence may be given in any suit or proceeding of the existence or non existence of every fact in issue and of such other facts as are hereinafter declared to be relevant, and of no others

Explanation—This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure such are really equivalent to a pleading, because they formally waive proof; they are therefore no part of the law of evidence except for the necessity of distinguishing them from other things mis-called admissions. The fourth class alone concerns intrinsically with the law of evidence. Wigmore Cas, 3. Thus the law of evidence relates to the use of evidence before judicial tribunal, and in its proper significance, consists of (a) certain rules as to the exclusion of evidence, and (b) the rules which prescribe the manner of presenting evidence in the Courts—McKelvey's Law of Evidence p 6

What facts may be presented as evidence—Evidence can only be given of facts in issue or relevant facts. What are facts in issue are ascertained by the substantive law and the law of procedure. What facts are relevant or admissible in evidence is answered by the law of evidence. This chapter contains the law of relevancy. There is still a further restriction. Evidence is barred by some provisions of Civil Procedure even if they be relevant. This restriction is in the section.

Legal relevancy—The testimony offered must be logically probative of the matter to be proved, and if it is, it is legally relevant. While this proposition, of course includes direct evidence it does not exclude, as irrelevant evidence of facts not directly in issue but which create a presumption of the fact in issue. The qualification to the general rule is that it does not always follow merely because a fact is logically relevant, that it is always relevant. Certain evidence though not logically incompetent, may be excluded on the ground of its unimportance when compared with an abundance of better evidence easily available, on the ground that it has so slight or remote a bearing on the case either in point of time or value, that it would be unjust and unreasonable to prolong and complicate a trial by its investigation, on the ground of public policy (Bur Jones § 135). In this connection it must be borne in mind that the whole law of evidence has evolved from trial by jury system. 'Legal relevancy which is essential to admissible evidence requires a higher standard of evidentiary force. It includes logical relevancy, and for reasons of practical convenience, demands a close connection between the facts to be proved and the fact offered to prove it. All evidence must be logically relevant, that is absolutely essential. The fact however, that it is logically relevant does not ensure admissibility. It must also be legally relevant. A fact which in connection with other facts renders probable the existence of a fact in issue, may still be rejected if in the opinion of the Judge, and under the circumstances of the case it is considered essentially misleading or too remote'—Best Evidence (Camb § 251). Stephen defines the word 'relevant' as meaning 'that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other, that according to the common course of events one, either renders probable the past present or future existence or non-existence of the other' Stephen's Dig Ev. This is a definition of logical relevancy. Logical relevancy plays a certain important part in the law of evidence, in that no evidence is admissible unless it is relevant. It does not follow that all evidence which is logically relevant is admissible and in fact much that is logically relevant is excluded. Certain rules are laid down founded on various considerations, by which many matters which are logically relevant are declared inadmissible. Legal relevancy is not different in its nature from logical relevancy. The only distinction is in its field of application. Legal relevancy is the attribute of all those logically relevant matters which are not declared inadmissible by one or more of the excluding rules. Stephen proceeds upon the theory that logical relevancy is the main condition of admissibility, and that all logically relevant are, therefore, exceptions to the rule. As Best have distinguished between logical and legal relevancy, and apply to all those facts which are not excluded by any of the excluding rules of evidence. But if what is legally relevant can only be determined by this exclusionary method, it is of little use to retain the term. In general it may be said, that what is logically relevant is admissible, unless it comes within the terms of one or more of the rules of exclusion. McKelvey's Law of Evidence p 166, see also 1914 M W N 931.

Exclusion of evidence—Under the Evidence Act, admissibility is the rule and exclusion is the exception, and circumstances which under other system, might operate to exclude are under the Act, to be taken into consideration only in judging of the value to be allowed to evidence when admitted. 16 B 661

6 Facts which, though not in issue are so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction are relevant whether they occurred at the same time and place or at different times and places

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B or the bystanders at the beating, or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction is a relevant fact.

(b) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed, troops are attacked and goals are broken open. The occurrence of these facts is relevant as forming part of the general transaction, though A may not have been present at all of them.

(c) A sues B for a libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence. Letters between the parties relating to the subject out of which the libel arose, and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained, are relevant facts though they do not contain the libel itself.

(d) The question is whether certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A. The goods were delivered to several intermediate persons successively. Each delivery is a relevant fact.

Soope—All facts which are parts of the same transaction are relevant to each other, so that when one of such facts is in issue the others are admissible. Such facts which are thus parts of the transaction in issue are generally known as res gestae (R v Ellis, 6 B E C 145). The rules as to res gestae is one of the clearest illustrations of relevancy, the connection between the facts being that they are all parts of the same transaction. Once established that they are all parts of the same transaction, then each of such facts is relevant to the others so that if any of them is a relevant fact the others are relevant facts. The real and very simple test is whether the facts are connected with the transaction, and what facts are mere rules of logic. (1914) M W N 931

Basis of the theory—Every act which is done, every event which happens, these circumstances do not consist of declarations and statements they are introduced as a matter of course, proved by either side without question, unless indeed, they got too far away from the main fact, when, under rules having no relation to the subject of hearsay, they are excluded. It is when they comprise statements, exclamations, answers to questions and other verbal utterances by the participants utterances of the mind under circumstances and at times where there has been

It was clearly admissible, both as a part of the transaction and, having been received as evidence also that the step was not let down until after the plaintiff fell. In this case the statement was spontaneous and coincident with the event. Taken altogether it is perhaps safe to say that in the case of no exception to the hearsay rule is there as little danger and as much assistance to the cause of justice as in this, taking in action, if he be actually present at the time (R v Forster Stephen 4) "There is a principle in the law of evidence which is known as res gestæ, that is, the declarations of an individual made at the moment of a particular occurrence when the circumstances are such that we may assume that his mind is controlled by the event, may be received in evidence because they are supposed to be expressions involuntarily forced out of him by the particular event and thus have an element of truthfulness they might otherwise not have. But you are not to give any more weight to a declaration thus made, or any weight at all unless you are satisfied that it was made at a time when it was forced out as the utterance of a truth forced out against his will or without his will, and at a period of time so closely connected with dormant so far as any deliberations in concocting matter for speech or selecting words is concerned. Moreover his speech, besides being in the present time of the transaction, must be in the presence of it in respect to space. He must be on or near the scene of action or of some material part of the action. His declarations must be the utterance of an individual. Only an oral declaration may be sufficient in this or that particular of an individual person.

is for the time being suppressed and silenced, so that he utters the voice of humanity rather than of himself, what he says is regarded by the law as in some degree trustworthy." Per Blackburne J in Traveller's Ind Co v Sheppard, 85 Ga 751, 776. "While it is said that the declaration must be contemporaneous with the main fact, no rule can be formulated by which to determine how near, in point of time they must be. No two cases are exactly alike and the determination of this question is separable from the circumstances of the case at bar. The transaction in question may be such that the res gestæ would extend over a day or a week or a month." Per Shelly J in Jack v Mutual R P Life Association 113 Fe1, 49. See 10 C 302, 11 C W N 265, 9 B H C 358. As regards statement made to police, vide 50 Ind Cas 487, 20 Cr L J 311=17 A L J 760. In a case of rape, the statement of the woman is admissible if made just after the occurrence. 43 Ind Cas 443=19 Cr L J, 155, see also 4 Lah L J 491.

Scope.—This section admits a very large class of connected facts in addition to those admitted by the 1st section. Here it should again be observed that the weight to be attached to such facts when admitted must, of necessity, vary. An effect may be conclusive proof of the primary act having been done, e.g. the birth of a child is conclusive proof of the fact of intercourse. A very short time between the two facts may be the same. A very fact is may of en 1 to "from

Principle—It would be practically impossible in the conduct of an action, to plunge direct in medias res, and Judge and jury alike seek for some introductory evidence, just as one hearing only the main incident of a story desires to know the circumstances leading up to it and the results that flow from it. Those circumstances in relation to an action or suit may not per se be relevant, but in connection with the main issue to be put before the tribunal they are treated as the introduction to main matters or by way of inducement to it. They take the place of the preamble to a statute, which while it has no power in itself, combined with the enacting clauses becomes the statute. The variety of these introductory or preliminary proofs as great in number as the variety of the causes of action, prevents any attempt at classification, but the rule as to their relevancy is abundantly established in view of these facts the preliminary questions leading to the introduction of relevant fact was held entirely proper. It follows that if introductory testimony, not inherently should be relevant which will explain illustrate. SITUATION WHICH

Explanation of facts—If after the commission of a crime a person, whose name is mentioned as a participator in the crime, absconds, his conduct shows that he is indeed concerned in the crime. Therefore anything which tends to explain his conduct and furnishes a motive other than a guilty conscience is relevant under this section. Gangaram v Imperator, 62 Ind Cas 545=22 Bom L R 1274. Oral evidence is admissible to prove that the recital of consideration in a document is innocent. 4 Mys L J 104. 10 When there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.

Illustration

Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen

The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writings advocating the object in view at Agra, and F transmitted from Delhi to G at Calcutta the money which C had collected at Calcutta, and the contents of a letter written by H giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant both to prove the existence of the conspiracy and to prove A's complicity in it although he may have been ignorant of all of them and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it

Principle—A rule is well established that in cases where conspiracy is charged the admission of one of the accused may become, by reason of the other proof in the case, admissible against the other. By themselves, and without other proof, they are not admissible against the fact of the conspiracy, but if the fact of the conspiracy is proved, the fact of the procure a conviction it is necessary that proof shall reach to both facts. Suppose now, that the only proof of the former fact consisted of statements in respect to it made by one of the parties. It is clear that since both are shown to have been interested together, and to have set out to commit the act, the statements made by one as to what was done should be received against the other. It must be borne in mind, however, that the fact of the conspiracy is to be proved by evidence entirely outside the admission. It is probable that in all cases of conspiracy where admissions are received their reception could be explained on the ground that they are a part of the res gestae—MacKelvey's Law of Evidence p 144

Scope—The operation of this section is strictly conditional upon there being a reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired to commit an offence. 37 C 467=4 C W N 1114. This section is intended to make evidence communications between different conspirators while the conspiracy is going on, with reference to the carrying out of the conspiracy. 38 C 169=15 C W N 25, 28 C 797. A conspiracy within the terms of this section contemplates something more than the joint act of two or more persons to commit an offence. 4 C W N 528. This section says that reasonable ground for belief in the existence of a conspiracy should be shown before evidence is given of the acts of persons who but for such conspiracy would be strangers to one another. The existence or fact of a conspiracy must be proved before evidence can be given of the facts of any person not done in the presence of the prisoner. 5 O C 351. See also 11 P W R 1915. What has to be established under this section to make documents found in the possession of one of several persons accused of conspiracy admissible against other accused is that there is reasonable ground to believe in the existence of a conspiracy amongst such persons. It is not necessary for this purpose to establish by independent evidence that they were conspirators. 16 C W N 1105, 30 C 983. See also 25 B 230, 9 B L R App 36, 7 B L R 63, 46 C 700, 25 Bom L R 748, 46 C 215=23 C W N 193=46 Ind Crs 152, 42 C 957=19 C W N 676=21 C L J 331.

But the statement of an accused after arrest is not admissible under the section. 46 C 700. This section is wider than the English law on the subject which requires that acts and declarations of other conspirators must be in furtherance of the common purpose. Nor a conspirator who has severed his connection with the conspiracy is liable for the acts or declarations of the conspirators after such severance. (Phipson 74)

Actionable wrong—The acts and declarations of co-trespassers in civil actions and indeed of all persons combined for a common object whether civil or criminal are governed by the same rule. The acts and declarations of joint tortfeasors are not however reciprocally admissible unless combinations for a common object be proved. [Phipson, 64.] In civil actions the declarations of co-trespassers are subject to the same rule. If they are mere narratives, they are evidence on against the makers, if they form part of the res gestae they are evidence against all. This section applies to an actionable wrong as well as a criminal offence (Norton v 123)

When facts not otherwise relevant become relevant      11 Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant—

- (1) if any are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact,
- (2) if by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable

In suits for damages facts tending to enable Court to determine amount are relevant

12 In suits in which damages are claimed, any fact which will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages, which ought to be awarded, is relevant

Notes—Damages unless expressly admitted are deemed to be fact in issue. Evidence tending to increase or diminish the damage is of course admissible though not expressly involved in the issue. Thus in an action for breach of promise of marriage, plaintiff may give evidence of the defendant's fortune for it obviously tends to prove the loss sustained by the plaintiff but not in an action for adultery, James v Bittington 6 C and P 589 nor for seduction, Hodgson v Taylor L R 9 Q B 79, nor for malicious prosecution, for it is nothing to the purpose that damages are taken from a deep pocket. Short v Story, Winton Sm As 1835 per Alderson B—Roscoe's N S 86. Where the question is as to the amount of compensation for defamation of character it is plausible argument for them the defendant should be allowed to show how little the plaintiff had to lose. Scott v Sampson 8 Q B D 491, Foot v Tra y 1 Jo 46

Damages as subject of opinion evidence—In ordinary cases the Court is to determine the amount of damages. Lincoln v Ruland Co 23 Wand (N Y) 425. But there are questions of damages dependent by some rule of law, upon subsidiary question of value of property and upon these latter questions persons specially qualified are often called upon for opinions so that opinions of experts as to values may furnish the basis upon which the jury arrives at a measure of damages. McKelvey's Evidence p 247. In Miller v Smith 112 Mass 470, Gray J said 'Whenever the value of any particular kind of property, which may not be presumed to be within the actual knowledge of all the jurors, is in issue the testimony of witnesses acquainted with the value of similar property is admissible although they have never seen the very article in question'

Facts relevant when right of custom is in question 13 Where the question is as to the existence of any right or custom, the following facts are relevant —

- any transaction by which the right or custom in question was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence
- particular instances in which the right or custom was claimed, recognised or exercised, or in which its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from

The question is whether A has right to a fishery. A deed conferring the fishery on A's ancestors, a mortgage of the fishery by A's father, a subsequent grant of the fishery by A's father, irreconcilable with the mortgage, particular instances in which A's father exercised the right, or in which the exercise of the right was stopped by A's neighbours, are relevant facts

But the right in question is not a public right only. In the absence of any qualification in section 13 must be understood as used by law, and therefore including a right of ownership. 10 B 439, 31 B 143, 12 M 9, 15 M 12, 16 M 191, 12 A 1. But the majority of Full Bench in Gujju Lal v Fatch Lal, 6 C 187 (F B) held that the word right includes only incorporeal rights. But Witter J dissented from the views taken by the majority and held that such contention is not warranted by any general principle. See also 2 C W N 501

Custom—'Custom' is used in the sense of a rule which in particular district, class or family has from long usage obtained the force of law must be (a) ancient uniform, constant, (c) peaceable and acquiescent, and not optional to the parties, and of customary force, and not derived from a legal necessity and must not be immoral (1800 1094 20 1033)

Transaction—(Where a party sets up particular rights, judgments not inter partes in previous cases in which a similar right was asserted are admissible in evidence. 60 Ind Cas 142, 59 Ind Cas 734, 40 Ind Cas 838, 64 Ind Cas 465, 65 Ind Cas 522, 65 Ind Cas 525, 65 Ind Cas 690, 65 Ind Cas 398, 1 Pat L T 221, 78 Ind Cas 895. It is well established that, although a judgment not inter partes may be used in evidence in certain circumstances as a fact in issue or a relevant fact or possibly as a transaction the recitals in the judgment cannot be used as evidence in a litigation between the parties. 20 C W N 643=23 C L J 583=35 Ind Cas 298, 28 C W N 942, 82 Ind Cas 99, 40 C L J 30=82 Ind Cas 392. The fact of previous publications by A respecting B, showing ill will on the part of A towards B, is relevant as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question

The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that A repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant, as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B

(f) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, where by B, being induced to trust C, who was insolvent, suffered loss

The fact that, at the time when A represented C to be solvent C was supposed to be solvent by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him is relevant as showing that A made the representation in good faith

(g) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B upon a house of which A is owner, by the order of C, a contractor

A's defence is that B's contract was with C

The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant as proving that A did, in good faith, make over to C the management of the work in question, so that C where A was is relevant as showing that A did not in good faith believe that the real owner of the property could not be found

The fact A knew, or had reason to believe, that the notice was given fraudulently by C, who had heard of the loss of the property and wished to set up a false claim to it is relevant, as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith

(l) The question is, whether A's death was caused by poison

Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms are relevant facts

(m) The question is, what was the state of A's health at the time an assurance on his life was effected

Statements made by A as to the state of his health at or near the time in question are relevant facts

(n) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use whereby A was injured

The facts that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage is relevant.

For that purpose a judgment inter partes alone can be admitted in evidence, but for other purposes, where judgments are sought to be used to show the conduct of the parties or to show particular instances of the exercise of a right or admission made by ancestors, or how the property was dealt with previously they may be used under secs 11 and 13 as exceptions recognised under s 43 as relevant evidence'. 14 Facts showing the existence of any state of mind, such a intention, knowledge, good faith negligence, rashness, ill will or good will towards any particular person, or showing the existence of any state of body or bodily feeling are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind or body or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant.

*Explanation 1—A fact relevant as showing the existence of a relevant state of mind must show that the state of mind exists, not generally, but in reference to the particular matter in question.

*Explanation 2—But where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of this section, the previous conviction of such person shall also be a relevant fact.

When the Court considers the admission of such a party fraudulent it should be at once rejected (Norton Et 143)

Cases—A statement made by defendant in another suit may be used as an admission within the meaning of this section. 22 W R 303. (b) A, the captain of a ship, is tried for casting her away.

Evidence is given to shew that the ship was taken out of her proper course.

A produces a book kept by him in the ordinary course of his business showing observations alleged to have been taken by him from day to day, and indicating that the ship was not taken out of her proper course. A may prove these statements.

(c) A is accused of a crime committed by him at Calcutta

He produces letter written by himself and dated at Lahore on that day, and bearing the Lahore post mark of that day

The statement in the date of the letter is admissible, because if A were dead, it would be admissible under section 32, clause (2)

(d) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen

He offers to prove that he refused to sell them below their value

A may prove these statements, though they are admissions, because they are explanatory of conduct influenced by facts in issue

(e) A is accused of fraudulently having in his possession counterfeit coin which he knew to be counterfeit

He offers to prove that he asked a skilful person to examine the coin as he doubted whether it was counterfeit or not, and that the person did examine it and told him it was genuine

A may prove these facts for the reasons stated in the last preceding illustrations

Explanation—Nothing in this section shall be taken to exempt any barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil from giving evidence of any matter of which he may be compelled to give evidence under section 126

Statement without prejudice—Communications admissions or statements written or verbal, made by a party to an action pending the dispute of action and made expressly or impliedly without prejudice with the object of compromise or settlement, cannot be given in evidence against the person making them. A letter written by a person to another, the whole of the correspondence between them, is admissible in evidence if the whole of the correspondence is given in evidence. 7 R R 634 cited in Cockle this section the Court is precluded of compromise which was entered into and subsequently set aside on the ground that the agent of one of the parties was not empowered to enter into it 83 P R 1877

24 A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise having reference to the charge against the accused person proceeding from a person in authority and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable, for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him

Confession made after removal of impression caused by inducement threat or promise, relevant

28 If such a confession as is referred to in section 24, is made after the impression caused by any such inducement threat or promise has, in the opinion of the Court, been fully removed, it is relevant

Note—When the legislature wished to make an exception to the general rule it did so by a separate section, this section accordingly declares under what circumstances a confession rendered irrelevant by s 24 may become relevant 2 L B R 168

Scope—If the impression produced by the promise or threat is clearly shown to have been removed e.g. by lapse of time or by an intervening caution given by person of superior (but not of equal or inferior) authority to the person holding out the inducement—a confession subsequently made will be strictly receivable (Phipson Lr 231), 4, Ind Cas 703.

29 If such a confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because it was made under a promise of secrecy, or in consequence of a deception practised on the accused person for the purpose of obtaining it, or when he was drunk, or because it was made in answer to questions which he need not have answered, whatever may have been the form of those questions, or because he was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession, and that evidence of it might be given against him.

Scope—A confession shall not be inadmissible in evidence merely because it has been obtained by deception. Even when the prisoner has made it only on receiving a preliminary oath of secrecy from the person trusted, such person will be competent and compellable to reveal it (R v Shaw, 6 C & P 372) and a confession made by a prisoner while drunk has been received (R v Spilsbury, 7 C & P 187—Powell 111).

30 When more persons than one are being tried jointly for the same offence, and a confession made by one of such persons affecting himself and some other of such persons is proved, the Court may take into consideration such confession as against such other person as well as against the person who makes such confession.

Explanation—"Offence" as used in this section, includes the abetment of or attempt to commit the offence.

Scope—This section is also an exception to the hearsay evidence. Secondary evidence of any oral statement is called hearsay. The repetition by a witness of that which he was told by some one else who is called as a witness is hearsay, and is therefore as a general rule, inadmissible. The reasons for this rule are obvious. We can generally trust a witness who states something which he himself has either seen or heard, but when he tells us something which he has heard from another person his statement is obviously less reliable and satisfactory. A multitude of probable contingencies diminish its value. The witness may have been or even may be wilfully misrepresenting or may have spoken hastily, inaccurately or on who is really responsible for the statement did not make it on oath, he was not cross examined upon it, and the Court had no opportunity of observing his demeanour when he made it. It is a fundamental principle of our law that evidence has no claim to credibility, and unless the party is a person of good character and of good repute, his statements are based on good character and of good repute.

Cause of death—In England such declarations are admissible only in trials for murder or man slaughter made under a sense of impending death. The grounds of admissions are (1) death (2) necessity and (3) the sense of impending death which creates a sanction equal to obligations of an oath. But this clause states that accused need not be in expectation of death 6 C L R 278. Moreover according to this clause such a statement is admissible irrespective of the nature of the proceedings. The admission of dying declarations is not limited to cases in which the death of the injured party is the sole object of inquiry. It is admissible in all criminal cases 3 N W P 212, 13 P R 1889 Cr, 25 H, 45, 8 C 211, 6 W R Cr 75, 19 W R Cr 44, 9 W R 211. Cases are not uncommon in this country of false deposition being made by a dying man 4 Ind Cas 1127. A Court should receive a dying declaration with caution 117 P R 1866, see also 4 P W R 1909=1 Ind Cas 100, 2 Weir 753. Such declarations, need not be made in the presence of the accused 2 Weir 750. Oral evidence of such declarations is admissible 2 Weir 755, 2 Weir 753, 6 C W N. 621.

Course of business.—The grounds for reception of such evidence is the presumption that a man is generally disinterested in the nature of his business, and is not generally liable, if false to be so. The phrase 'course of business' is of an exceptional kind, such as the employment in which a person is engaged. The business referred to may be of a temporary character 13 C W N, 71=1 Ind Cas 376. The law under this clause does not require corroboration as under s 34 16 C L J 24.

Clause (8).—The reception of this evidence is upon the presumption that what a man states against his interest is probably true. But the interest involved must be pecuniary or proprietary. Any statement by a person tending to show that he owes money, or has received money, owing to him is considered to be against his interest (Highman v Ridgway, 12 East, 109, Cockle Cas 196). In Sussex Peerage Case 11 C and F 108 it was laid down that where the statement was made under circumstances, which showed that the person making it would be liable to criminal prosecution it was not sufficient to come under this clause. But the Indian Legislature departed from that view of the law and distinctly laid down that such statement are relevant. If any part of a statement by a deceased person is against his interest, the whole statement is admissible Taylor v Witham, L R 3 Ch D 605. The declarations must also have been against such interest at the time they were made, it is not sufficient that they might possibly turn out to be so afterwards (Smith v Blakey, L R 2 Q B 326 Massy v Allen, 13 Ch D 558 Edwards v Tollemache, 14 Q B D 415)—Phibson 241. A statement by a deceased landlord that there was a tenant on the land is a statement against the landlord's proprietary right 31 C 965. Clause (4).—The grounds of admission are—(1) death (2) necessity ancient facts being generally incapable of direct proof, and (3) the guarantee of truth afforded by the public nature of the rights, which tends to preclude individual bias and to render misstatements difficult by exposing them to constant contradiction (Phibson Ev 257). Public rights are rights of highway, ferry, fishery in a tidal river, etc. General rights are those affecting any considerable section of the community—e.g. questions of boundaries of a parish or manor (Ibid). In proof of public or general rights or customs or matters of public or general interest, statements made by a deceased person of competent knowledge as to the existence of such rights, etc., and as to the general reputation thereof in the neighbourhood, if made 'ante litem motam' are admissible (Weeks v Parks, 1 M & S 679, Cockle Cas 212). Such evidence is not admissible as to private right 25 B 433. Public or general right must be common to all individuals, and not within individual manner of evidence of the right only to be received as showing a general reputation and not as evidence of particular facts R Biss, 7 L J Q B 4, Mercer v Dunne (1904, 2 Ch 534. Clause (5) —According to English law, the statements verbal or written, and conduct of in question, family success and deaths controversy cient to ex servants or intimate acquaintances, whatever their position or knowledge may be, are not admissible (Johnson v Lenson) 9 Moore, 183 Cockle Cas 709. But there in the Indian Legislators departed also from the English law and laid down that statement of persons having special means of knowledge would be relevant. So a statement as to the age of member of a family made by another member is no doubt admissible after the latter's death under this clause 2, M 18. But special means of knowledge should be shown 10 Ind Cas 199. The statement in a pedigree made by a deceased member of one branch of a family regarding the descendants of another branch thereof, before any dispute arose as to the latter, is relevant and admissible in evidence 32 C 6. But this clause does not cover statements of facts made by interested parties in denial in the course of litigation, of pedigrees set up by the opposite parties 9 A 467. The effect of the section is to make a statement made by a deceased person relating to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption, admissible to prove the facts contained in the statements on any issue 24 C 265 = 1 C W N 270. A family priest's statement is also admissible 4 C L R 473. But a Muktear's statement is not admissible 12 C 219 = 12 I A 183 (P C). Provided—that the proceeding was between the same parties or their representatives in interest ; that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross examine ;

that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding

Explanation—A criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused within the meaning of this section

Scope—It has long been settled as one of the exceptions to the general rule excluding hearsay that the testimony of a witness given in a former action or at a former stage of the same action is competent in a subsequent action or in a subsequent proceeding in the same action where it is shown that the witness is dead or that a valid legal reason exists for his non production, that the parties and questions in issue are substantially the same, and that such former testimony can be substantially reproduced upon the second hearing (Burr Jones § 336)

Parties—The rule is that such evidence is proper, not only when the point in issue is the same in a subsequent suit between the same parties, but also for or against persons standing in the relation of privies in blood, privies in state or privies in law. The testimony will not necessarily be rejected, although there were other parties to the record in the former proceedings, when the issues are substantially the same and the parties affected by the second suit had the opportunity to cross examine the witnesses. But the parties must be substantially the same, and it is for the party offering the testimony to establish this (Burr Jones § 338). In two suits the parties must be the same or their representatives in interest. 12 C 627, See 7 C 42, 8 A 672, A W N 1896, 182

Form of proceedings—If the parties and the issues are the same in each case it is not necessary to the admission of the testimony that the form of the second proceeding should be the same as that of the first. Nor that the former trial should be a trial immediately preceding that in which the testimony is offered. The rule covers any former trial, where evidence was given by a party since deceased which it is subsequently desired to use. A testimony given in a preliminary examination on a criminal charge may be admitted at the trial (Burr Jones § 339). Evidence in a civil case is admissible in a subsequent suit. 23 C 44. Cross Examination—The ground upon which the exception stands is that, in an authorized action or proceeding testimony being given under the solemnity of an oath where the witness was or might have been cross examined, the probabilities of the truth having been told are so great as to justify the resort to that testimony when the witness has died or become insane since the former trial. It is immaterial to the admission of the evidence whether the party actually cross examined or did not cross examine if he were here. that he had an opportunity to cross examine the witness. here a plaintiff was examined in cross examination. is not cross examined in 25 B 168=2. Principle—If a part of the conversation or transaction has been given in direct testimony, the remainder so far as it is relevant, may be called out by the cross examination, as the inquiry and answer in such case may tend to impeach, rebut, explain or qualify the testimony already given. A party will not be permitted to "clean out certain facts from his witness which without explanation would give a false colouring to the matter about which he testifies, and then save his witness the sifting process of cross examination by which the real transaction could be shown" (Burr Jones Ev § 822)

JUDGMENT OF COURTS OF JUSTICE WHEN RELEVANT.

40 The existence of any judgment, order or decree which by law prevents any Court from taking cognizance of a suit or holding a trial, is a relevant fact when the question is whether such Court ought to take cognizance of such suit or to hold such trial

Judgment—Judgments are of two kinds—in Rem and in Personam. The former term seems never to have been clearly defined but it is commonly understood to apply to all judgments affecting the legal status of some subject matter, person or thing, e.g. Admiralty judgments in cases of forfeiture or prize, Divorce Court decrees, grant of Probate and Administration, and adjudications in Bankruptcy Such judgments are conclusive against all persons, whether parties or strangers. Judgments in personam are all ordinary judgments between persons not so affecting status. Such judgments bind only parties and privies as to the fact in issue. But all judgments are conclusive against all persons of their legal effect as distinguished from the facts upon which they are based (Cockle Cas 43). All judgments whatever are conclusive proof as against all persons of the existence of that state of things which they actually effect when the existence of the state of things so effected is a fact in issue or is deemed to be relevant to the issue (Stephen's Digest § 40).

* Substituted by Act 10 of 1914

† The last paragraph added by s 2 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1899 (5 of 1899) was repealed by the Schedule No II of Act 10 of 1914

Scope—This section lays down that judgment, order or decree in a previous suit is a relevant fact, i. e., admissible in evidence if it operates as res judicata or prevents any Court from taking cognizance of a suit or holding a trial. According to the phraseology of English lawyers such judgments are admissible when they operate as estoppel by record. A person who was a party to legal proceedings in which judgment was given or who claims under a person who was a party thereto is estopped from denying the facts upon which such judgment was based, if such judgment be pleaded as estoppel. But a judgment "in personam" does not estop persons who were neither parties nor privies thereto. Nor are parties or their privies estopped from denying matters which merely came collaterally into question in such legal proceedings, or which were incidentally cognizable, or which might be inferred by argument from the judgment. The Duchess of Kingston's Case, (29 How St Trial, 355, Cockle Cas 40). A former judgment between the same parties on the same subject matter will operate as an estoppel and be conclusive only when it is so pleaded or there is no opportunity of so pleading it. Otherwise it is only a relevant fact from which the Court may draw a conclusion in favour of the person who tenders it in evidence (Voight v Finch 2 B & Ald 662 Cockle Cas 44). This section was intended to include all judgments which by law operate to prevent a Court whether civil or criminal from taking cognizance of a suit or trying any particular issue and admits as evidence all judgment inter partes which would operate as res judicata in a second suit. 6 C 171.

Cases—A finding in a former suit where the question was tried between all the parties to the subsequent suit, is admissible as evidence. 27 W R 457. 'It is not competent for the Court, in the case of the same question arising between the same parties, to review a previous decision'. Per Lord Macnaghten in Badr Bee v Habin Meritan Noordin (1909) A C at p 623.

"The plea of res judicata applies except in special cases, not only to points upon which the Court was actually required by the parties to form an opinion and pronounce a judgment but to every point which properly belonged to the subject of litigation, and which the parties exercising reasonable diligence might have brought forward at the time. Henderson v Henderson, 3 Hare, 115.

41 A final judgment, or decree of a competent Court, in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon or takes away from any person any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing is relevant.

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof—that any legal character, which it confers accrued at the time when judgment, order or decree came into operation;

that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment (order or decree) declares it to have accrued to that person, that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, (order or decree) declared that it had ceased or should cease, and that anything to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, (order or decree) declares that <sup>A</sup> or should be his property.

Legislative changee.—The words within brackets have been inserted by Act 18 of 1872

Scope—These are judgments in rem. They are conclusive on every body, and as such admissible against every body. Such adjudication, being the solemn declaration of the properly accredited Court, which has the best right so to adjudicate concludes not merely the parties to the action and their privies, but all persons, from asserting the contrary (Powell Ex 66). Such judgements are conclusive "not merely as to the point actually decided, but as to a matter which it was necessary to decide, and which was actually decided as the groundwork of the decision itself, though not then directly the point at issue." Per Coleridge, J in R v Horlinton 4 L. and B at p 794. But it must clearly appear that a decision on such matter was actually necessary to the judgment. Concha v Concha, 11 App Cas 541. Ballintyne v Mackinn (1896) 2 Q B 455. Judgments in rem affecting the status of a person or thing e.g., a decision of a Prize Court, Probate, Divorce or Admiralty Court, or Ecclesiastical Court, bind all the world. A judgment in bankruptcy proceeding has the effect of a judgment in rem (Ex parte Leary 10 Ch D 2). Such judgments are binding not only on the parties to the proceedings but upon all the world and not only on the tribunals of the country where pronounced, but on the tribunals of other countries, but such a judgment must not have been obtained by fraud, must not carry a manifest error on its face and must not be contrary to natural justice (Powell Ex 451). A final judgement or order of a competent Court, in the exercise of probate jurisdiction as conferring the status of executor on the grantee of a probate is conclusive proof of the existence of such status and the fact that the will is genuine. It operates as a judgment in rem and its effect cannot be nullified except by a proceeding for revocation of probate. 31 C 357=8 C W N 197, see also 14 C 861, 16 M 380, 14 P R 1912, 22 A 270 (F B). The expression "legal character" when it has reference to a judgment of a Court of Probate, means the status of an Administrator or Executor and that only though, when it has reference to a Matrimonial Court it includes widowhood and widowhood and a judgment of a Court of Probate is conclusive proof that the person to whom letters or probate have been granted has been clothed with the powers and the responsibilities of the deceased and with nothing else and a question of status decided by a Court of Probate cannot be raised again. (U B R 1910, 4th Qr 61)

42 Judgements orders or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41
 Relevancy and effect of judgments order or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41 are relevant if they relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the inquiry, but such judgments, orders or decrees are not conclusive proof of that which they state

The existence of a decree in favour of the defendant in a suit by A against C a trespass on the same land, in which C alleged the existence of the same right of way, is relevant, but it is not conclusive proof that the right of way exists.

Scope—"Having now disposed of judgments which render the matter res judicata between the parties, judgments which from their special character are conclusive all the world, and judgments which as relating to matters of a public nature, are relevant though not conclusive, between strangers to the suit, we come to the general rule of exclusion viz, that all other judgments are irrelevant. To this rule however, there is a highly important limitation. A judgment though inadmissible for proving the truth of what it asserts, may be valuable as evidence for some other purpose. Its very existence may be a fact in issue, and then, of course, evidence of it may be given, or it may be a fact relevant within some one of the classes of relevant facts given in the Act, and then again, evidence of it can be given." (Cunningham Ev 190) "The cases contemplated by s 43 are those where a judgment is used not as res judicata or as evidence more or less binding upon an opponent by reason of the adjudication which it contains. (a) The question is whether the death of A was caused by poison

The opinions of experts as to the symptoms produced by the poison by which A is supposed to have died are relevant

(b) The question is whether A at the time of doing a certain act was by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law

The opinions of experts upon the questions whether the symptoms exhibited by A commonly show unsoundness of mind, and whether such unsoundness of mind, usually renders persons incapable of knowing the nature of the acts which they do or of knowing that what they do is either wrong or contrary to law, are relevant

(c) The question is whether a certain document was written by A. Another document is produced which is proved or admitted to have been written by A

The opinions of experts on the question whether the two documents were written by the same person or by different persons, are relevant

Scope—An expert witness is one who has devoted time and study to a special branch of learning, and thus is specially skilled on those points on which he is asked to state his opinion. His evidence on such points is admissible to enable the tribunal to come to a satisfactory conclusion. An expert may be called to answer questions on any matters of science, art, medicine, architecture, handwriting, valuations or foreign law—indeed any matter on which special skill or learning is necessary in order that a reliable opinion may be formed. He need not be a paid professional expert who makes a living by giving such evidence, but he must have devoted sufficient time and study to the subject to render his evidence trustworthy. The Judge decides on the competency of an expert witness, the jury decides on the weight of his evidence (Powell, Ev 41). The evidence can be given in the form of inter alia, causes of genuineness of works of art, value of articles, navigation of vessels, meaning of trade terms, of such opinion evidence the witness may prove facts upon which he bases his opinion although they were made or done in the absence of the party. (See R v Hestline 12 Cox 404; Cockle Cas Ev 119. An expert can cite books of admitted authority Nelson v Bridport, 8 Beav 527, Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Cl and F at p 114. The opinions of experts are not binding on the jury, for it is with the jury, and not with the experts, that the determination of the case rests; the weight due to their testimony is a matter to be determined by the jury and it will be proportionate to the soundness of the reason adduced in its support. 1 C W N 465, 32 C 759.

Case—To base a conviction on the evidence of an expert in hand writing, is a general rule, is very unsafe. There may be cases in which the hand writing is of such a peculiar character that the conclusion as to the identity of the writer is irresistible. 1 A L J 184=9 Cr L J 498. 15 Ind Cas 979. Comparison of hand writing is permissible in criminal no less than in civil cases. 2 Weir 759. It is not right to assume that a Sub Registrar is an expert in the matter of thumb marks. 2 Weir 760. The evidence of an expert in hand writing is inadmissible if there is no comparison with proved or admitted hand writing in open Court in the presence of the party affected. 16 C W N 812=14 Ind Cas 753=39 C 606. The value of ordinary or non expert oral evidence mainly rests on the credibility of the witness—his inclination and capacity for telling the truth, the value of expert evidence rests on the skill of the witness—the extent of his competency for forming a reliable opinion. 3 N L R 1=5 Cr L J 220. A medical man, who had not seen the dead body, asked to give his opinion as to the cause of death, together with the post mortem evidence, is relevant. 9 C 455, 13 O C 1, 4 L B R 125. But if he has not been cross examined the weight of his evidence is not diminished. 55 Ind Cas 273.

Facts bearing upon opinion of experts

46 Facts not otherwise relevant, are relevant if they support or are inconsistent with the opinions of experts, when such opinions are relevant.

(a) The question is whether A was poisoned by a certain poison. The fact that other persons who were poisoned by that poison, exhibited certain symptoms which experts affirm or deny to be the symptoms of that poison, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether an obstruction to a harbour is caused by a certain sea-wall.

The fact that other harbours similarly situated in other respects, but where there were no such sea walls, began to be obstructed at about the same time, is relevant.

Scope—Facts not otherwise relevant, have in some cases been permitted to be proved as supporting or being inconsistent with the opinion of experts (Step Dig art 50) Facts although otherwise irrelevant may be given in evidence in corroboration illustration, or rebuttal of opinion So on cross examination he may be asked inter alia, whether he has not expressed opinions inconsistent with his present testimony and if he deny the fact it may be independently proved (Phipson, Ev 347)

47 When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is a relevant fact

Explanation—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written by himself or under his authority and addressed to that person, or when in the ordinary course of business documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him

The question is, whether a given letter is in the hand-writing of A, a merchant in London

B is a merchant in letters purporting to be and file B's correspondence letters purporting to be

The opinions of B, C and D on the question whether the letter is in the hand-writing of A are relevant, though neither B C nor D ever saw A write

Scope—Hand writing may be proved not only by the person who saw the particular document signed, but also by any person acquainted in any manner with the hand writing of the person said to have signed the document in question e.g. (a) having received documents purporting to be in the ordinary course of business observed his hand writing Doe v Suckermore only evidence of hand writing which is evidence of a witness who proves that he himself wrote or signed the document in question or that of a witness who proves that he saw the document signed or written All other evidence of hand writing must rest in greater or less degree upon inferences drawn from the appearance of the writing in question or other circumstances (Wills Cir Ev 184)

Cases—A witness need not state in the first instance how he knew the hand writing, since it is the duty of the opposite party to explore on cross examination the sources of his knowledge if he be dissatisfied with the testimony as it stands It is permissible and may often be expedient that the matters referred to in the explanation should be elicited on the examination in chief Yet it is within the power of the presiding Judge and often may be expedient to permit the opposite advocate to intervene and cross examine so that the Court may be in a position to come to a definite conclusion on adequate materials as to the proof of the hand writing 5 Bom L R 663=28 B 58 The ordinary methods of proving hand writing are (i) by calling as a witness a person who wrote the document or saw it written or who is qualified to express an opinion as to the hand writing by virtue of his admission of hand writing (ii) by a comparison of the handwriting with very great care studied the art of calligraphy is not as a rule of every great utility 64 Ind Cas 234

48 When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right, the opinions, as to the existence of such custom or right, of persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed are relevant

Explanation—The expression 'general custom or right' includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons

Illustration

The right of the villagers of a particular village to use the water of a particular well is a general right within the meaning of this section

Scope—By s 98, evidence may be given with reference to a document, to show the meaning of technical, local and provincial expressions, abbreviations and words used in a peculiar sense. For this purpose the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge on the subject would be the best evidence (Cun Ev 202). Section 32 clause (4) makes the statement of dead persons, as regards the existence of public right or custom or matters of public or general interest, relevant. These are all exceptions to the rule of rejection of opinion evidence. So the statements made by persons who are in a position to know of the existence of a custom or usage in their locality are admissible under this section. 26 C 18; A general custom or general right may be proved by evidence, under this section—by the opinions of person who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed, such opinions are relevant but such opinions must be given by witnesses who gave evidence. 1 L B R 80. It is admissible evidence for a witness to give his opinion on the existence of a family custom. 13 A 37 (P C). See 10 C W N 730 P C 5 C 744 P C 23 C 427 12 C W N 74 P C

Opinions as to usages tenets etc, when relevant 49. When the Court has to form an opinion as to—the usages and tenets of any body of men or family, the constitution and government of any religious or charitable foundation or the meaning of words or terms used in particular districts or by particular classes of people, the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge thereon are relevant facts

Cases—Where witness, members of a family have special means of knowledge as to the usages of the family, their evidence will be relevant under this section, so far as the existence of such usage is concerned. It is admissible evidence for a witness to give his opinion on the existence of a family custom, and to state as the grounds of that opinion information derived from deceased persons. But it must be the expression of independent opinion based on hearsay and not mere repetition of hearsay. 10 M L J 267 P C = 23 A 37. As regards proof of paternity of illegitimate child vide 27 M 32

50 When the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, the opinion expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship, of any person who as a member of the family or otherwise has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact

Provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act, or in prosecutions under section 494, 495, 497 or 498 of the Indian Penal Code

Illustrations

(a) The question is whether A and B were married. The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife, is relevant

(b) The question is, whether A was the legitimate son of B. The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family is relevant.

Scope—The scope of this section, leaving the exception out of consideration seems to be that the person himself is not to be called to state his own opinion but that, when he is dead or cannot be called, his conduct may be proved by others. The section appears to afford an exceptional way of proving a relationship but by no means to prevent any person from stating a fact of which he or she has special means of knowledge. A husband or wife is not therefore precluded from proving his or her marriage. 9 M 9=1 Wer 572. Under the proviso to this section in proceedings of the kind therein specified, opinion relevant under this section is not by itself sufficient to prove marriage which must, in consequence, be proved in some other way. 5 P R 1891 Cr, see also 5 A 233=A W N 1883 1. Where marriage is an ingredient in any offence, e.g. adultery, bigamy and the like there must be according to this section strict proof, in the regular way of the fact of the marriage. 5 C 565 (F B). A person claiming as an illegitimate son must establish his alleged paternity like any other disputed question of relationship, and can, of course, rely upon statements of deceased persons under s 32, cl (5), upon opinion expressed by conduct under s 50 27 M 32.

Grounds of opinion when relevant

51 Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant

Illustration

An expert may give an account of experiments performed by him for the purpose of forming his opinion.

Object—An important test of the value of the expert's evidence is thus provided. The Court is not left to the bare statement of an opinion but can inquire into the grounds on which it is based, and thus ascertain whether there are any grounds or whether they are reasonably adequate. This section is to a great extent a repetition of sect on 46 (Cun Ev 204). See also 10 Bom L R 97, 25 B 1 (P C).

CHARACTER, WHEN RELEVANT

52 In civil cases the fact that the character of any person concerned is such as to render probable or improbable any conduct imputed to him is irrelevant, except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant.

In civil cases, character to prove conduct imputed irrelevant

Principle—The general character is not in issue. The business of the Court is to try the case, and not the man, and a very bad man may have a very righteous cause" (Thompson v Church 1 Rost 312, Wig Cas 29).

Criticism—The accepted general rule is that evidence of the general character of parties to civil actions where character is not a part of the issue, convenience for the purpose however, it would seem as much as the general rule one of convenience, it ought to require that the contrary requires that the contrary words that such causing from a confusion of the issues should be disregarded and he be permitted to give evidence of his own character.

serious consequences than the payment, perhaps, of a fine of five dollars, is accorded

the absolute right to give such evidence—Per Sturt C J in Hein v Holdridge (1900) 81 N W 522 See also 6 W R Cr 67, 7 W R Cr 7, 59 Ind Cas 560, 1 C W N 145, 26 Ind Cas 545, 13 Ind Cas 102, 16 C W N 69

Scope—The character of the parties to civil action is generally irrelevant and inadmissible Attorney General v Bowman, 2 B and P 537

In criminal cases previous good character relevant

53 In criminal proceedings the fact that the person accused is of a good character is relevant

Principle—The accused in a criminal case can always give evidence of his good character R v Rowton 34 L J M C 57 A man's character is often of the utmost importance in explaining his conduct and judging of his innocence or criminality. Many acts, which standing alone would be suspicious, are freed from all suspicion when we come to know the circumstances and character of the person by whom they are done (Cunningham Et 205). No importance can be attached to evidence of good character when the case against the accused is clear.

Evidence of character—Evidence of character is admissible for the prisoner if it is such that he is not likely to give false evidence. He can only support that part of his evidence not by evidence of character but by evidence of the form of the question is "From your knowledge of the prisoner does he bear a good character for honesty, humanity etc. as the case may be" (Roscoe Et 25)

54 In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant unless evidence has been given that he has a good character in which case it becomes relevant

Explanation 1—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue

Explanation 2—A previous conviction is relevant as evidence of bad character.

Legislative changes—This section has been substituted by Act 3 of 1891

Scope—It is generally stated that evidence of a prisoner's good character is admissible in answer to the question whether he is a person of good character. It seems to be admitted that his bad character is not admissible in evidence, but is applicable to the particular nature of the charge, to prove that instead of a party who has borne a good character for humanity and kindness can have no bearing in the mode of inquiry as to the general character of the accused. Evidence of bad character is not admissible in evidence. See 11 C W N 789 Upon the conviction of an accused, the Court has to determine what punishment to award and to do this should take into consideration not only the nature and gravity of the offence committed but also the character of the accused the bad character of the accused then becomes a fact in issue. Evidence of bad character being admissible as affecting the sentence, evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition is shown. Evidence as to previous convictions

Explanation 1—In all actions or proceedings in which a plaintiff's character is actually in issue as in actions for defamation evidence of the plaintiff's character may be given Scott v Sampson, L R 8 Q B D 91. In prosecution for rape, or assault to commit rape, or indecent assault evidence of the bad character of the prosecutrix may be given in defence, her character, under the circumstances, being considered to some extent in issue (R v Clarke 2 Sturkle 241, Cockle's Cas 112). In a bad livelihood case, the character of the accused is a fact in issue and as such evidence of his bad character is admissible in evidence. See 11 C W N 789 Upon the conviction of an accused, the Court has to determine what punishment to award and to do this should take into consideration not only the nature and gravity of the offence committed but also the character of the accused the bad character of the accused then becomes a fact in issue. Evidence of bad character being admissible as affecting the sentence, evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition is shown. Evidence as to previous convictions is an exception to this rule. Evidence of departmental punishment is inadmissible for the purpose. L B R (1893 1900), 352

Explanation 2—It has been held that if prisoner's counsel elicited on cross examination from the witnesses for the prosecution that the prisoner has borne a good character, a previous conviction might be put in evidence against him, in like manner as if witness to his character had been called. Per Parke B., in R v Gadbury, 8 C & P 676. See also R v Srimton 2 Den C C R 319=21 L J

unless within the charge for the purpose of being sought to be permitted dishonest character question of his good evidence of general

character, it is then competent to rebut such evidence by giving evidence upon the question of general evil reputation. 14 A 25. This section has no bearing whatever upon the question whether the accused has been convicted of the offence for the purpose of enhancing the penalty solely to the relevancy of a previous conviction as evidence to prove that the accused is guilty, and should be convicted of the particular offence with which he is charged. L B R (1872 1892) 449

The Evidence Act gives the Court a discretion to admit previous conviction as evidence of character, at any stage of the trial, in all cases in which there is such evidence that the prisoner was found guilty on the previous trial upon the probability of the prisoner's guilt in those cases where the previous conviction is of connection with the facts to be proved stated in ss 6 to 10. See also 14 C 721. But in other cases the proof of previous convictions as evidence giving rise to an inference regarding the character of the prisoner is not admissible. 5 C 768=6 C L R 219, L B R (1893 1900), 93, 2 Pat L J 706

as not contemplated by s 75 Penal Code, may be admitted, provided the previous conviction is of the same nature. 34=26 Ind Cas 996

Cases—The fact that the accused had a bad character is not irrelevant under this section when the evidence relating to it is not given for the purpose of showing that the accused was a bad character and was therefore likely to commit offences of the kind of which he has been convicted. 2 Lah L J 653

Character as affecting damages—In civil cases the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant. 55

Explanation—In sections 52, 53, 54, and 55 the word "character" includes both reputations and disposition, but [except as provided in section 54] evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown

Legislative changes—The words within brackets have been substituted by Act 3 of 1891

Scope—In all actions or proceedings in which a plaintiff's character is actually in issue as in actions for defamation evidence of the plaintiff's character may be given (Scott v Sampson, L R 8 Q B D 491). In a few cases where the amount of damages depends upon character, as in seduction and breach of promise of marriage evidence may be given of the character of the plaintiff, but upon the question of the character of the defendant and P 308. with him, for, by bringing the action the husband put her general behaviour in issue. So, in seduction, the defendant may show the previous bad character of the person seduced. But even in such cases it has been held that the plaintiff cannot give evidence of the good character of the wife or daughter, until evidence has been offered on the other side to impeach it. Bamfield v Massey 1 Camp 460, and if such evidence be not general but go only to a specific instance it has been ruled that the plaintiff cannot, in reply, give evidence of the same. Camp 519. So, in an action for slander imputing adultery, the plaintiff cannot adduce evidence, in the first instance, of the wife's good character. 2 Stark 93; Cornuill v Richardson, Ry and M 305, Col Rossed Ev 87.

 Cr 25 Therein he observed matter to be inquired into dismissible only as evidence of disposition. The judgment of the particular witness is superior in quality and value to mere rumour. Numerous cases may be put in which a man may have no general character—in the sense of any reputation or rumour about him at all, and yet may have a good disposition. For instance, he may be of a shy, retiring disposition, and known, only to a few, or again, he may be a person of the vilest character and disposition, and only his intimates may be able to testify that this is the case. One man may deserve that character [reputation] without having acquired it, while another man may have acquired [without] deserving it. In such cases the value of the judgment of a man's intimates upon his character becomes manifest. In ordinary life when we want to know the character of a servant, we apply to his master. A servant may be known to none but members of his master's family, so the character of a child is only known to its parents and teachers, and the character of a man of business to those with whom he deals. According to the experience of mankind one would ordinarily rely rather on the

that only general reputation and general disposition are admissible

is an exception to this rule. Evidence of departmental punishment is inadmissible for the purpose. L B R (1893 1900), 352

Explanation 2—It has been held that if prisoner's counsel elicited on cross examination from the witnesses for the prosecution that the prisoner has borne a good character, a previous conviction might be put in evidence against him, in like manner as if witness to his character had been called. Per Parke B, in R v Gadbury, 8 C & P 676. See also R v Srimton 2 Den C C R 319=21 L J M C 37. Where a man is being tried upon four corners of the law, proof of a previous conviction proving guilty knowledge, or whatever it might be, and no evidence allowed to show that he is a man of good character. But if the accused at his trial choose to put in issue the question of his general character, it is then competent to rebut such evidence by giving evidence of general evil reputation. 14 A 25. This section has no bearing whatever upon the question of the relevancy of a previous conviction after an accused has been convicted of the offence with which he has been charged, and for the purpose of enhancing the sentence to be passed upon him. It refers solely to the relevancy of a previous conviction as evidence to prove that the accused is guilty, and should be convicted of the particular offence with which he is charged. L B R (1872 1892) 449

The Evidence Act gives the Court a discretion to admit previous conviction in all cases in which there is such utility upon the previous conviction of the prisoner. The facts to be proved stated in ss 6 to 16. 2 Weir 760. See also 14 C 721. But in other cases the proof of previous convictions as evidence giving rise to an inference regarding the character of the prisoner is not admissible. 5 C 768=6 C L R 219, L B R (1893 1900), 93, 2 Pat L J 706 contemplated by s 75 Penal Code, may admit, provided the previous conviction is 34=26 Ind Cas 996

Cases—The fact that the accused had a bad character is not irrelevant under this section when the evidence relating to it is not given for the purpose of showing that the accused was a bad character and was therefore likely to commit offences of the kind of which he has been convicted. 2 Lah L J 653

Character as affecting damages 55 In civil cases the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant

Explanation—In sections 52, 53, 54, and 55, the word "character" includes both reputations and disposition, but (except as provided in section 54) evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown

Scope—In all actions or proceedings in which a plaintiff's character is actually in issue as in actions for defamation evidence of the plaintiff's character may be given (Scott v Simpson, L R 8 Q B D 491). In a few cases where the amount of damages depends upon character as in seduction and breach of promise of marriage evidence may be given of the character of the woman seduced or the female plaintiff, but upon the question of damages only. Very v Watkins 7 C and P 308. In general in actions unconnected with character, evidence as to the character of either of the parties to a suit is inadmissible, being foreign to the point in issue, and only calculated to create prejudice. For the same reason, where particular acts of misconduct are imputed to a party, evidence of general character is excluded, but it is otherwise where general character is put in issue, (Doed Faar v Hicks, per Buller J) for evidence of bad character is admitted in some actions with a view to the amount of damages. Thus, in actions of criminal conspiracy, the defendant could adduce evidence of the wife's bad character for chastity, and even of particular acts of adultery committed by her before her intercourse with him; for, by bringing the action the husband put her general behaviour in issue. So, in seduction, the defendant may show the previous bad character of the person seduced. But even in such cases it has been held that the plaintiff cannot give evidence of the good character of the wife or daughter, until evidence has been offered on the other side to impeach it. Bamfield v Massey 1 Camp 460, and if such evidence be not general but go only to a specific instance, it has been ruled that the plaintiff cannot in reply, give evidence to disprove of the specific instance. Camp 519. So, in an action for slander imputing adultery, the plaintiff cannot adduce evidence, in the first instance of good character. 2 Stark 93; Cornwall v Richardson, Ry and M 30, Col Rossed Ev 87.

It is based upon the dissenting opinion of Cr, 25. Therein he observed that the matter to be inquired into was not the reputation of the witness, but that his reputation is merely accessory, and admissible only as evidence of disposition. The judgment of the particular witness is superior in quality and value to mere rumour. Numerous cases may be put in which a man may have no general character—in the sense of any reputation or rumour about him at all, and yet may have a good disposition. For instance, he may be of a shy, retiring disposition, and known only to a few, or again, he may be a person of the vilest character and disposition, and only his intimates may be able to testify that this is the case. One man may deserve that character [reputation] without having acquired it, while another man may have acquired it without deserving it. In such cases the value of the judgment of a man's intimates upon his character becomes manifest. In ordinary life when we want to know the character of a servant, we apply to his master. A servant may be known to none but members of his master's family, so the character of a child is only known to its parents and teachers, and the character of a man of business to those with whom he deals. According to the experience of mankind, one would ordinarily rely rather on the

CHAPTER III.

FACTS WHICH NEED NOT BE PROVED

Fact judicially noticeable      56      No fact of which the Court will take need not be proved      judicial notice need be proved

Principle—There are certain matters which are considered so notorious that they require no proof, such matters are therefore "judicially noticed" that is to say, the Judge takes notice of their existence without the necessity of evidence thereof. English law is dealt with in this manner. It is not so notorious to the public generally, it is rather, in the "breast" of the Judge. (Cockle's known need not be proved, manifest) (or it may be traced far back in the civil and the common law with legal procedure itself. We find it in our own books, and it is applied in every part of our law. It is qualified by another principle, also very old, and often overtopping the former importance—non refert quid notum sit iudici, si notum non sit in forma iudicii. These two maxims seem to intimate the whole doctrine of judicial notice. Thayer Pre Trial, on Ev 277. When a case is presented at the bar for trial, the Court and Jury are presumed to be uninformed concerning the facts involved in the case, and it is incumbent upon the litigant parties to establish blish by evidence facts relied upon by them respectively. There is however a large class of facts which need not be proved since they are "judicially noticed" by the Court and Jury. That is to say there are a great many things of such common knowledge that the Courts ought to be presumed to know them—such as the Declaration of Independence, the earthquake and the great fire of San Francisco in 1906, and other matters of past history, the existence and procedure of their own Court, the public laws, the calendar, the public mortality tables, treaties entered into by their own government, and many other matters of such general notoriety that every well informed man or woman within the limits of the Court's jurisdiction must or should know. If it so happened that the proof of any such facts formed part of a litigant's case, he is excused from proving them as it is said the Court will take judicial cognizance of their existence, or in other words they will be taken as proved. And the importance of the subject of judicial notice can hardly be over estimated, for there is no case in which there are not some matters which will fall within the judicial cognizance of the tribunal before which it is tried, since the very law itself which is administered by the forum is a subject of judicial notice. (Burr Jones Ex § 105)

Facts of which Court must take judicial notice      57 The Court shall take judicial notice of the following facts:—

- (1) all laws or rules having the force of law now or heretofore, in force, or hereafter to be in force, in any part of British India
- (2) all public Acts passed or hereafter to be passed by Parliament, and all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament to be judicially noticed
- (3) Articles of War for Her Majesty's Army, Navy or Airforce *
- (4) the course of proceeding of Parliament and of the Councils for the purposes of making Laws and regulations established under the Indian Councils Act, † or any other law for the time being relating thereto

Explanation—The word "Parliament" in clauses (2) and (4) includes—

- (1) the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,
- (2) the Parliament of Great Britain
- (3) the Parliament of England,
- (4) the Parliament of Scotland and
- (5) the Parliament of Ireland,
- (5) the accession and the sign manual of the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,
- (6) all seals of which English Courts take judicial notice the seals of all the Courts of British India and of all Courts out of British India, established by the authority of the Governor General or any Local Government in Council, the seals of Courts of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction and of Notaries Public, and all seals which any person is authorized to use by any Act of Parliament or other Act or Regulation having the force of law in British India
- (7) the accession to office names titles functions and signatures of the persons filling for the time being any public office in any part of British India, if the fact of their appointment to such office is notified in the Gazette of India or in the official Gazette of any Local Government
- (8) the existence, title and national flag of every State or Sovereign recognized by the British Crown
- (9) the divisions of time the geographical divisions of the world, and public festivals, fasts and holidays notified in the official Gazette

(13) the rule of the road * [on land or at sea]

In all these cases and also on all matters of public history, literature, science or art, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference

If the Court is called upon by any person to take judicial notice of any fact, it may refuse to do so unless and until such person produces any such book or document as it may consider necessary to enable it do so

Scope.—It will be readily seen that the subjects of judicial notice are so numerous and varied that it is next to impossible to classify them or to say further than that they embrace subjects 'judicial legislative political historical geographical, commercial, scientific and artistic in addition to a wide range of matters arising in the ordinary course of nature, or the general current of human affairs, which rest entirely upon acknowledged notoriety for their claims to judicial recognition' (Burr Jones § 105) The matters enumerated in this section are by no means exhaustive in this section certain matters are mentioned of which judicial notice should be taken But the Court can take judicial notice of facts not mentioned in this section (See also Stephen's Dig. Art. 58)

Clause (1)—The English Courts take judicial notice of the Laws of England and Ireland nor that of the Channel Islands nor of Scotland except in the House of Lords nor that of the colonies and India except in the Privy Council and naturally nor that of foreign countries (Cockle's Cas 16) The law has no need includes both public and private Acts of Parliament general customs and some local customs of well known extensive application such as Gavellial and Borough English customs, but generally local or particular customs must be proved (Ibid 16) A judge may refer to authorities to refresh his memory So far as Indian law is concerned the English rule should serve as a guide

Clause (2)—As has been mentioned in clause (1) the English Court takes judicial notice of all Public Acts passed by the Parliament and since 1850 Private Acts also It was customary before 1850 to insert a clause in Private Acts of Parliament declaring that the same should be deemed public and be judicially noticed The effect of this clause was to dispense with the necessity not only of pleading the Act specially but of producing an examined copy or a copy printed by the Printer of the Crown, a public Act requiring neither to be specially pleaded nor proved By 13 and 14 Vict c 12, it was enacted That every Act made after the commencement of this Act shall be deemed and taken to be public Act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such unless the contrary be expressly provided and declared by such Act This provision is now repealed by the Interpretation Act, 1889 52 and 53 Vict c 63, which provides, by s 8, that every Act passed after 1850 'shall be a Public Act and shall be judicially noticed, as such unless the contrary is expressly provided by the Act' So now every personal Act or local Act should be taken notice of by the Indian Courts

Clause (3)—Vide the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911)

Clause (4)—The English Courts will judicially notice the Law of England

Clause (5)—The English Courts take judicial notice of the great privy seal of Great Britain, of royal proclamation, of the signature of the King (Leinster, 4 R P C 470), seal of the Apothearies Company of the Board of Trade seals of district registers and signatures of Commissioners for Oaths of the following facts —

Facts of which Court must take judicial notice

- (1) all laws or rules having the force of law now or heretofore, in force, or hereafter to be in force in any part of British India
- (2) all public Acts passed or hereafter to be passed by Parliament, and all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament to be judicially noticed

CHAPTER IV

OF ORAL EVIDENCE

59 All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence

Proof of facts by oral evidence

Scope—All facts except the contents of a document may be proved by oral evidence. The sworn testimony of a witness should not be ignored and disbelieved unless discredited or broken down by contrary proof or by matter elicited in cross examination which may tend to show that the persons giving such evidence have deliberately perjured themselves, or have made a false and concocted statement or unless the evidence is upon the face of it so absurd or improbable that no person ought to believe it. A W N 1887 189, 26 A 108 (P C)—31 I A 38. It is not correct to hold that, for the determination of the merits of a case, oral testimony unsupported by documentary evidence is of no value. 18 W R 328. The evidence of one witness if reliable is not insufficient to prove a fact. 11 W R 94.

Discrepancies in evidence must be carefully considered and their effect allowed for, but when they can be fairly reconciled by explanation or can be naturally and reasonably accounted for evidence otherwise trustworthy cannot be put aside, although its value may be pro tanto impaired, solely because of their concurrence. U B R (1897—1901) Vol I 162.

60 Oral evidence must in all cases whatever, be direct, that is to say—

Oral evidence must be direct

If it refers to a fact which could be seen it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it, if it refers to a fact which could be heard it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it, if it refers to a fact which could be perceived by any other sense or in any other manner, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he perceived it by that sense or in that manner, if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds.

Provided that the opinions expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, may be proved by the production of such treatises if the author is dead or cannot be found or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable.

Provided also, that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or condition of any material thing other than a document the Court may if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

Direct—The term is used in two senses, as evidence of fact actually in issue as opposed to circumstantial evidence and evidence of a fact actually perceived by a witness with one of his senses or of an opinion actually held by himself (as distinguished from hearsay evidence) (Cockle's Case 3).

Scope—Direct evidence, as opposed to hearsay evidence is generally required. The evidence must be given by witness who perceived directly by one of his senses the fact to which he deposes. Hearsay evidence, that is the evidence of a witness as to a fact which he did not himself perceive, but which he proves was stated by any other person, is not admissible except in a few special cases (Stilkart v Dryden 5 L J Ev 218, Cockle's Case 149), see also 12 B L R App 18, 194 Rang 363, 1924 Lah 733.

Principle—The grounds commonly assigned for the rejection of hearsay evidence are—(1) the irresponsibility of the original declarant, (2) the depreciation of truth in the process of repetition, (3) the opportunities for fraud its admission would open to which may be added the tendency of such evidence to protract legal inquiries, and to encourage the substitution of weaker or stronger proofs Phipson L.J. 189, In the Berkeley Peerage Case 4 Camp 415 Sir James Mansfield C.J. observed "By the general rule of law, nothing that is said by any person can be used as evidence between contending parties unless it is delivered upon oath in the presence of those parties. If material witness happen to die before the trial, the person whose cause they would have established may fail in the suit, but although all the bishops on the bench should be ready to swear to what they heard those witness to declare, and add their implicit belief of the truth of the declarations, the evidence would not be received."

It was not intended by this section to exclude the circumstantial evidence of things which can be seen, heard or felt 12 B L R App 18

OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

61 The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence

Scope—There are two methods of proving a document either by primary or by secondary evidence. When primary evidence is available secondary evidence is not admissible. Where a copy of a document is admitted in the Court below without any objection, objection to the admissibility of the same should not be allowed in the appellate Court 31 C 155

Primary evidence
the Court

62 Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of

Explanation 1—Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document.

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart its primary evidence as against the parties executing it

Number of document are all made by one printing lithography, or photography, each contents of the rest, but, where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original

Illustration

A person is shown to have been in possession of a number of placards, all printed at one time from one original. Any one of the placards is primary evidence of the contents of any other but no one of them is primary evidence of the contents of the original

Every age deed has been executed in duplicate, the document under this section U B R originals or copies executed by all parties certain parties only, are primary evidence against such parties only (Cockle Cas 308)

Secondary evidence

63 Secondary evidence means and includes—

(1) certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter contained

- (2) copies made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves insure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies,
- (3) copies made from or compared with the original,
- (4) counterparts or documents as against the parties who did not execute them,
- (5) oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it.

Illustrations

(a) A photograph of an original is secondary evidence of its contents, though the two have not been compared, if it is proved that the thing photographed was the original

(b) A copy compared with a copy of a letter made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original

(c) A copy transcribed from a copy but afterwards compared with the original, is secondary evidence but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original

Scope—This section is exhaustive of the kinds of secondary evidence admissible under the Act 43 M. L. J. 37, see also 10 Ind. Cas. 852

Clause (1)—Certified copies mean copies signed and certified as correct by official having custody of originals. They are allowed as evidence by various statutes (Cockle Cas 323)

Clause (2)—Vide Illustrations (b) and (c)

Clause (3)—This clause includes copies proved by oral evidence to have been examined with and to correspond with the originals. The witness may either have examined the copy which another person not called as a witness read from the original. All public documents may be proved in the manner, but certified or office copies are generally used when available (Cockle Cas 323). See also 19-4 Nag. 375, 20 L. W. 719

Clause (4)—'Counterparts' or copies executed by certain parties only, are primary evidence against such parties only (Cockle Cas 308)

Illustration (c)—A copy of a copy is inadmissible in evidence 54 Ind. Cas. 941=1 P. L. T. 47, 7 A. 738

It is not open to the appellate Court to consider whether the provisions as to secondary evidence have been complied with 3 Pat. L. T. 397. A statement made by a party or his authorized agent in a previous suit in which he refers to a document which is against his interest, is secondary evidence of that document 53 Ind. Cas. 667. See also, 25 M. L. T. 19. A translation of a Purwana or grant is not secondary evidence of that grant and so it is not admissible in evidence 35 Ind. Cas. 201=4 L. W. 331

Proof of documents by primary evidence

64 Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases hereinafter mentioned

Scope—Secondary evidence is not admissible where loss of primary evidence is not proved. As regards documents the best evidence in the possession or power of the party tendering it must be given. Generally, the best evidence of a document is the original document, which is 'primary evidence' of its contents. Such original must be produced unless its absence is accounted for Macdonnell v Evans 21 L. J. C. P. 141. The original document must be produced

Cases in which secondary evidence relating to documents may be given

65. Secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document in the following cases—

- (a) when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power—
  - of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or
  - of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or
  - of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66, such person does not produce it,
- (b) when the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest,
- (c) when the original has been destroyed or lost, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time,
- (d) when the original is of such a nature as not to be easily movable;
- (e) when the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74,
- (f) when the original is document of which a certified copy is permitted by this act, or by any other law in force in British India, to be given in evidence,
- (g) when the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection

In cases (a), (c) and (d) any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible

In case (b) the written admission is admissible

In case (e) or (f) a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents

Clause (a)—Secondary evidence of a document is admissible when the original is in possession of an adverse or opposite party who refuses to produce it after a proper notice to produce. The object of a notice to produce is merely to give the other party sufficient opportunity to produce the document if he pleases and not that he may have time to consider the terms of the document, and to prepare evidence

of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or

of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66,

(b) when the existence of the original has been proved to whom it is proved or

(c) when the original has been destroyed or lost, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time,

(d) when the original is of such a nature as not to be easily movable;

(e) when the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74,

(f) when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this act, or by any other law in force in British India, to be given in evidence,

(g) when the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection

In cases (i) (c) and (d) any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible

In case (b) the written admission is admissible

In case (e) or (f) a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents

Clause (a)—Secondary evidence of a document is admissible when the original is in possession of an adverse or opposite party who refuses to produce it after a proper notice to produce. The object of a notice to produce is merely to give the other party sufficient opportunity to produce the document if he chooses and not for argument at the time of secondary evidence.

PRESUMPTIONS AS TO DOCUMENTS

79. The Court shall presume every document purporting to be a certificate, certified copy of other document which is by law declared to be admissible as evidence of any particular fact and which purports to be duly certified by any officer in British India, or by any officer in any Native State in alliance with Her Majesty, who is duly authorized thereto by the Governor General in Council, to be genuine

Presumption as to genuineness of certified copies

Provided that such document is substantially in the form and purports to be executed in the manner directed by law in that behalf

The Court shall also presume that any officer by whom any such document purports to be signed or certified held when he signed it, the official character which he claims in such paper

Scope—The registering officer's evidence is not necessary to prove the certificate of registration the genuineness of which is to be presumed under this section 71 Ind Cas 805

80 Whenever any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a record or memorandum of the evidence or of any part of the evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding or before any officer authorized by law to take such evidence or to be a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person taken in accordance with law, and purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate or by any such officer as aforesaid, the Court shall presume—

that the document is genuine, that any statements as to the circumstances under which it was taken, purporting to be made by the person signing it are true, and that such evidence, statement or confession was duly taken

Scope—The statement as to which this section says that certain presumptions shall be drawn are statements or confessions taken in accordance with the law. The section does not render admissible any particular kind of evidence but only dispenses with the necessity for formal proof in the case of certain documents taken in accordance with law. Presumption as to Gazettes newspapers private Acts of Parliament and other documents

English law—The Government Gazettes of London, Edinburgh and Dublin are admissible (and sometimes conclusive) evidence of the public, but not of the private matters contained therein Phipson Ev 296

82 When any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a document which, by the law in force for the time being in England and Ireland, would be admissible in proof of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Ireland, without proof of the seal or stamp or signature authenticating it, or of the judicial or official character claimed by the person by whom it purports to be signed, the Court shall presume that such seal, stamp or signature, is genuine and that the person signing it held, at the time when he signed it the judicial or official character which he claims, and the document shall be admissible, for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland

Scope—The object of this section is to give currency in the Courts of India to the presumptions which with regard to certain in the English Courts. Such documents are as they would be in England and it is no more it would be in an English Court to prove the person signing it held the office which he elum Act 1851 (14 and 15) Vict c 99, the effect of whi of the King's dominions, documents which wi ou r of or of the official character of the person by whom they purport to have been signed are admissible in English law' Cunningham Ev 175, 176 This section enacts that the document shall be admissible in India for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England and Ireland (Woodroffe Ev)

83 The Court shall presume that maps or plans purporting to be made by the authority of Government were so made, and are accurate, but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate

Principle—The general ground of reception is that such documents contain the results of inquiries made under competent public authority and concerning matters in which the public are interested (Phipson, 313)

Accuracy—Accuracy of Amins map means accuracy of drawing and measurement. It has no reference to correctness of boundaries etc. in relation to rights of parties 25 W R 179 Government map is admissible under this section 9 M T 415 But Government chittis made for its private use are not admissible in evidence against private parties for proving the character or tenure of the lands described therein 9 C 741 A thauk bust map is presumed to be accurate under this section 22 W R 519, 5 C 822, 30 C 291 (P C)=7 C W N 193, 34 C L J 205

84 The Court shall presume the genuineness of every book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of any country, and to contain any of the laws of that country and of every book purporting to contain reports of decisions of the Courts of such country

Scope—The general rule, as to the proof of foreign laws, is that the law which is proved by a copy properly authenticated, and the testimony of experts, that is by those ) Lord Chief Justice Denham observed in "There does not appear to be in fact any question raised here as to any executive mode of getting at this evidence for we have both materials of knowledge offered to us. We have the witness, and he states the law, which he says is correctly laid down in these books. The books are produced, but the witness describes them as authoritative, and explains them by his knowledge of the actual practice of the law. A skilful and scientific man must state what the law is but may refer to books and statutes to assist him in so doing." California Civil Pro Code lays down "The oral testimony of witnesses skilled therein is admissible as evidence of the unwritten law of sister state or for foreign country, as are also printed and published books of reports or decisions of the Courts of such state or country, or proved to be commonly admitted in such Courts."

85. The Court shall presume that every document purporting to be a power of attorney, and to have been executed before, and authenticated by a Notary Public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice Consul, or representative of Her Majesty, or of the Government of India, was so executed and authenticated.

Cases—A power of attorney given by the executors under a will to a certain person authorising him to apply for letters of administration did not purport to have been executed in the presence of a Notary Public or any other of the persons designated in this section. 21 M 492. In order to comply with the provisions of this section, the power of attorney must be executed before or be authenticated by one of the persons mentioned in the section. 16 C 776. This section is mandatory. When a document purporting to be a power of attorney and to have been executed before and authenticated by a Notary Public is produced before the Court, an affidavit of identification as to the person purporting to make the power of attorney being the person named therein is unnecessary. 9 C W N 986=33 C 625. Cases—It is doubtful whether the notification in the Calcutta Gazette of the 8th April 1879, by the then Deputy Commissioner of Cooch Behar, regarding the mode of certifying copies of judicial records as correct copies after the Governor General in Council had, under s 431 of the Civil Procedure Code, notified that decrees of Cooch Behar Courts might be executed as if they were decrees of British Indian Courts, was a compliance with the provisions of this section of the Evidence Act when there was a representative of the Government of India resident in Cooch Behar 14 C 546

87. The Court may presume that any book to which it may refer for information on matters of public or general interest and that any published map or chart, the statements of which are relevant facts and which is produced for its inspection, was written and published by the person, and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published

Scope—A Court is justified in referring to books published long before the suit, in which the usage of the institution and its history are described both being matters relevant to the suit 15 M 241

88 The Court may presume that a message, forwarded from a telegraph office to the person to whom such message purports to be addressed, corresponds with a message delivered for transmission at the office from which the message purports to be sent but the Court shall not make any presumption as to the person by whom such message was delivered for transmission

Scope—This section allows the Courts to treat telegraphic messages received as if they were the original sent, with the exception, that a presumption is not to be made as to the person by whom the message was delivered for transmission and, unless accounted for, secondary evidence of their contents is admissible (1901), Vol II 384. The Court is forbidden to make any presumption as to the person by whom the telegram was sent 42 M 885=37 M L J 81

89 The Court shall presume that every document, called for and not produced after notice to produce was attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law

Notes—Where the attesting witnesses of a mortgage deed were dead where it was produced and that it had been returned to the mortgagor, and the Court, though called upon to do so, refused to make the presumption, the Court was held to be in error (1901), Vol II 384. The Court is forbidden to make any presumption as to the person by whom the telegram was sent 42 M 885=37 M L J 81

90 Where any document, purporting or proved to be thirty years old, is produced from any custody which the Court in the particular case considers proper, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such document, which purports to be in the handwriting of any particular person, is in that person's handwriting, and in the case of a document executed or attested, that it was duly executed and attested by the persons by whom it purports to be executed and attested

Explanation—Documents are said to be in proper custody if they are in the place in which, and under the care of the person with whom, they would naturally be, but no custody is improper if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable

This explanation applies also to section 81

(a) A has been in possession of landed property for a long time. He produces from his custody deeds relating to the land, showing his title to it. The custody is proper

(b) A produces deeds relating to landed property of which he is the mortgagee. The mortgagor is in possession. The custody is proper.

(c) A, a connection of B produces deeds relating to lands in B's possessions which were deposited with him by B for safe custody. The custody is proper.

Scope—A document thirty years old i.e. a document dated thirty years back proves itself, if produced from proper custody as an ancient document. Anderson v. Weston 9 L. J. C. P. 194. The rule that ancient documents' or those thirty years old prove themselves or in other words are presumed to have been duly executed applies only to those coming from proper custody, that is, not necessarily from the strictly legal or most proper custody but from any custody consistent with their genuineness and legitimate origin, in which they might reasonably be expected to be found if they are what they purport to be. Bishop of Meath v. Mayor of Winchester 3 Bingham, N. C. 183. Cockle Cas 333. Under this section the Court can presume the genuineness of a document which was not thirty years old either on the date of the suit or on the date of its production but was thirty years old on the date when arguments were heard. 54 Ind. Cas. 368, see also 33 C. L. J. 382, 60 Ind. Cas. 96, 41 M. L. J. 310, 57 Ind. Cas. 786, 61 Ind. Cas. 959, 61 Ind. Cas. 125, 52 Ind. Cas. 314, 49 Ind. Cas. 419, 15 N. L. R. 192, 6 O. L. J. 311, 26 Ind. Cas. 117, 13 A. L. J. 921, 2 L. W. 509, 5 P. W. R. 1915.

No presumption can be made in favour of a copy of a document under this section. 16 N. L. R. 106=55 Ind. Cas. 476 contra 16 L. W. 462, 16 L. W. 839, 29 C. L. J. 577. The fact that a document is more than 30 years old and is registered and that the genuineness of the signature of its executant on it is admitted may go to raise a presumption as to its genuineness. But such a presumption does not exclude the right of the person against whom the document is set up to rebut that presumption by showing that it was not properly attested and was therefore inoperative. 55 Ind. Cas. 501. It is open to a party when producing an old document to rely on the presumption under this section and also on its proof and the Court may presume a deed to be genuine even though it is not satisfied with the evidence tendered to prove its execution. 49 Ind. Cas. 419. In the case of a copy of a document 30 years old, this section empowers the Court to presume that the copy is in the hand writing of the person in whose hand writing it purports to be. 31 Ind. Cas. 579. A Court is entitled to presume under this section that a sale deed more than 30 years old is genuine. 35 Ind. Cas. 598. In practice a Court does not generally decide whether it will make the presumption or not under this section, until all the evidence in the case is before it. 10 A. L. J. 87. Where the Court of first instance presumed a document to be genuine under this section, it was competent for the first appellate Court to hold that it should not be presumed to be genuine and to reject it without calling for further proof of the same. 22 M. ### OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

91 When the terms of a contract, or of a grant, or of any other disposition of property, have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or of such matter, except the document or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

Evidence of terms of contracts grants and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document—position of property, have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or of such matter, except the document or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

Exception 1—When a public officer is required by law to be appointed in writing, and when it is shown that any particular person has acted as such officer, the writing by which he is appointed need not be proved.

Exception 2—Wills admitted to probate in British India may be proved by the probate.

Explanation 1—This section applies equally to cases in which the contracts, grants or dispositions of property referred to are contained in one document, and to cases in which they are contained in more documents than one.

Explanation 2—Where there are more originals than one, one original only need be proved.

Exception (1) The law assumes that any act done in public or any formal act privately performed will be done in due form by the person authorised to perform it Harris v Knight, 15 P D 170

Exception (2)—The probate of a will is in the nature of a public document, for it records the act of the Court in admitting the will to probate Moreover, a copy of the probate can be seen by any one at Court on payment of requisite fees It constitutes the legal proof of the title of an executor and it is conclusive against all the world It is a copy of the will sealed with the seal of the Court granting the probate, and attached to a certificate which states that the will has been proved and registered, and that administration of the goods of the deceased has been granted to one or more of the executors named therein (Vide Powell Ev 258)

92 When the terms of any such contract grant or other disposition of property, or any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, have been proved according to the last section, no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from, its terms,

Proviso (1)—Any fact may be proved which would invalidate any document or which would entitle any person to any decree or order relating thereto, such as fraud, intimidation, illegality, want of due execution, want of capacity in any contracting party, [want or failure] of consideration, or, mistake in fact or law

Proviso (2)—The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved In considering whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document

Proviso (3)—The existence of any separate oral agreement, constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved

Proviso (4)—The existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved, except in cases in which such contract, grant or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered according to the law in force for the time being as to the registration of documents

Proviso (5)—Any usage or custom by which incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description may be proved

Provided that the annexing of such incident would not be repugnant to or inconsistent with the express terms of the contract

Proviso (6)—Any fact may be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts.

(a) A policy of insurance is effected on goods 'in ships from Calcutta to London'. The goods are shipped in a particular ship which is lost. The fact that that particular ship was orally excepted from the policy cannot be proved.

(b) A agrees absolutely in writing to pay B Rs. 1,000 on the first March, 1873. The fact, that at the same time an oral agreement was made that the money should not be paid till the thirty-first March cannot be proved.

(c) An estate called "the Rampore tea estate" is sold by a deed which contains a map of the property sold. The fact that land not included in the map had always been regarded as part of the estate and was meant to pass by the deed cannot be proved.

(d) A enters into a written contract with B to work certain mines, the property of B upon certain terms. A was induced to do so by a misrepresentation of B's as to their value. This fact may be proved.

(e) A institutes a suit against B for the specific performance of a contract, and also prays that the contract may be reformed as to one of its provisions, as that provision was inserted in it by mistake. A may prove that such a mistake was made as would by law entitle him to have the contract reformed.

(f) A orders goods of B by a letter in which nothing is said as to the time of a payment and accepts the goods on delivery. B sues A for the price. A may show that the goods were supplied on credit for a term still unexpired.

(g) A sells B a horse and verbally warrants him sound. A gives B a paper in these words: "Bought of A a horse for Rs. 500." B may prove the verbal warranty.

(h) A hires lodgings of B, and gives B a card on which is written—'Rooms, Rs. 200 a month.' A may prove a verbal agreement that these terms were to include partial board.

A hires lodgings of B for a year, and a regularly stamped agreement, drawn up by an attorney, is made between them. It is silent on the subject of board. A may not prove that board was included in the term verbally.

(i) A applies to B for a debt due to A by sending a receipt for the money. B keeps the receipt and does not send the money. In a suit for the amount A may prove this.

(j) A and B make a contract in writing to take effect upon the happening of a certain contingency. The writing is left with B, who sues A upon it. A may show the circumstances under which it was delivered.

Legislative changes—The words "want or failure" were substituted for the words 'want of failure' by s. 8 of the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act, 1872 (18 of 1872).

Notes—The rule contained in this section is very ancient. Lord Bacon observed: "The law will not couple and mingle matter of specialty, which is of higher account, with matter of averment which is of inferior account in law" (Bacon's Maxims Reg. 23). "It would be inconvenient that matters in writing made by advice and on consideration, and which finally import the certain truth of the agreement of the parties should be controlled by averment of the parties to be proved by the uncertain testimony of slippery memory" (Countess of Rutland's case, 5 Coke 256).

Scoops—Parol evidence is not admissible to add to, vary, or contradict a written agreement or any transaction in writing. Meres v. Ansel, 3 Wilson, 275; Cockle Cas. 339. "Another and a most important rule of evidence is also based upon the fact that the best method of preserving a clear recollection of the details of any transaction is to set them down in writing. It is for this reason that whenever the parties to any contract or grant or other disposition of property have set out its terms and conditions in writing, which they presumably intended to be a record of the transaction the law forbids any attempt to establish any other terms by means of oral evidence. It is not to be found in the document. Hence parol evidence cannot be adduced to vary or contradict the written evidence." Countess of Rutland's case, 5 Coke 256.

Proviso (1)—Parol evidence is admissible to show that a writing is not really the valid transaction which it purports to be Such evidence may therefore be given to prove fraud mistake, illegality, incapacity failure of consideration or other matters affecting the validity of a writing as a document (Dobell v Stevens, 3 L J K B 89, Cockle Cas 341)

Proviso (2)—Parol evidence is admissible to prove any collateral verbal agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, which is separable from it and not inconsistent with its terms and which might naturally be omitted from the writing (L R 6 Ex 70=Cockle Cas 343) There is no rule that there shall be only one agreement upon any subject There may be two or more as in the case if they can consistently stand together and one may be written and the other oral If agreement evidence may be given of the oral the written agreement although it may, at In order that parol evidence may be admissible it must not conflict with, or be inconsistent with the written document, the evidence must not amount in effect to adding additional terms to the writing Angell v Duke 32 L T 320 This proviso applies where the document is of an informal character 7 N L J 25 In order to prove a contemporaneous oral agreement, oral evidence of subsequent conduct can under no circumstances be admitted 4 Loh 258

Notes — There are two sorts of ambiguities, patent and latent. A latent ambiguity is one which does not appear from the words of the document itself, but is created or shown by extrinsic evidence. Obviously, similar evidence should be allowed to explain or remove it. A patent ambiguity is one apparent on the face of the document. Parol evidence is inadmissible to explain such an ambiguity. (Cockle Crs 356) 'A good test of the difference is to put the instrument into the hands of an ordinarily intelligent educated person. If on perusal he sees no ambiguity, but there is nevertheless an uncertainty as to its application the ambiguity is latent. If he detects the ambiguity from merely reading the instrument, it is patent. Thus in illustration (b), the blanks would be patent ambiguities and they could not be filled in by parol testimony as to the intention of the parties, etc. In illustration (a) no one could detect any ambiguity from merely reading the instrument. The ambiguity does not consist in the language, but is introduced by extrinsic circumstances, and the maxim is quod ex facie oritur ambiguum verificatione facti tollitur' Norton Ev 279

Scope — Parol evidence is admissible to show the subject matter to which, or the persons to whom, a written document applies or refers, and such purpose to explain latent ambiguities, or to show the surrounding circumstances, or apparently, to explain the meaning of words or expressions which are meaningless in themselves, by showing what a party to such document intended to say. Baylies v Attorney General, 2 At 239

A sells to B, by deed "my estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas." A has an estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas. Evidence may not be given of the fact that the estate meant to be sold was one situated at a different place and of a different size.

Scope—This section falls under the more general rule of English law that where the words of a document are free from ambiguity and external circumstances do not create any doubt or difficulty as to the proper application of the words, the document is to be construed according to the plain and common meaning of the words, and that in such case extrinsic evidence for the purpose of explaining the document according to the supposed intention of the parties is inadmissible. Cunn Ev 28r. When the language used in a document is plain and applies accurately to existing facts, evidence is not admissible for the purpose of showing that it was not meant to apply to those facts. 29 Ind Cas 201. When a Court is executing an award it is only in cases where the words are ambiguous or capable of more than one interpretation that oral evidence can be given as to their meaning. 78 Ind Cas 80.

95 When language used in a document is plain in itself, but is unmeaning in reference to existing facts, evidence may be given to show that it was used in a peculiar sense.

Illustration

A sells to B, by deed, "my house in Calcutta."

A had no house in Calcutta, but it appears that he had a house at Howrah, of which B had been in possession since the execution of the deed.

These facts may be proved to show that the deed related to the house at Howrah.

Scope—This section and sections 96 and 97 lay down the rule as regards latent ambiguities. Parol evidence is admissible to show the subject matter to which, or the persons to whom a written instrument applies or refers, and for such purpose to explain the latent ambiguities. Such parol evidence may be of the surrounding circumstances, or apparently, of statements of intention made by parties to a document. Doi v Needs, 6 L J Ex 59, Cockle Cas 355. Where the description of property sold is such that one portion of it applies to the whole of the house but the boundaries given below apply only to a portion of the same and both read together do not apply correctly either to the whole house or to a portion of it, a case of latent ambiguity arises. Extrinsic evidence is admissible for the purpose of solving the question whether by the description of the property taken as a whole the intention was to convey the whole house or only a portion of it. 66 Ind Cas 442. See also 1913 S 42, 71 Ind Cas 589.

96 When the facts are such that the language used might have been meant to apply to any one, and could not have been meant to apply to more than one, of several persons or things, evidence may be given of facts which show which of those persons or things it was intended to apply to.

Illustrations

(a) A agrees to sell to B for Rs 1000 "my white horse." A has two white horses. Evidence may be given of facts which show which of them was meant.

(b) A agrees to accompany B to Haidrabad. Evidence may be given of facts showing whether Haidrabad in the Deccan or Haidrabad in Sind was meant.

Scope—When there are two or more persons or things and each of them exactly answers to the description in the will, then all manner of parol evidence is admissible (Poulet E., 563). When an instrument appears on its face to be free from ambiguity, but upon the endeavour being made to apply it to the persons or things indicated, it transpires that the words are equally applicable to two or more things, this is called a latent ambiguity. In such a case extrinsic evidence is admissible to resolve it. The principle that when an instrument contains an ambiguity

Scope—This section being merely an enabling provision cannot be held to prohibit the reception of evidence as to a fact in issue or a relevant fact admissible independently thereof. 27 M. 329. The rule of exclusion of oral evidence, embodied in s. 92 of the Act, is limited in its operation to parties to the instruments, which is sought to be contradicted or varied, and to the representative in interest. This section enables strangers to an instrument to prove the real nature of the transaction by parol evidence. 2 C.L.J. 338. This section gives free hand to persons who are not parties and by necessary implications when read with section 92, gives similar freedom to the executants of documents.

Saving of provisions of Indian Succession Act relating to wills.

100. Nothing in this Chapter contained shall be taken to affect any of the provisions of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865)* as to the construction of wills.

Scope—Act X of 1865 and Act XXI of 1870 have been repealed and re-enacted by Act 39 of 1925. So the provisions of this chapter are applicable to all instruments other than wills and to all wills which are not made in accordance with the provisions contained in that Act.

PART III*Production and Effect of Evidence*CHAPTER VII*OF THE BURDEN OF PROOF.

101. Whoever desires any Court to give judgment as to any legal right or liability, dependent on the existence of facts which he asserts must prove that those facts exist.

When a person is bound to prove the existence of any fact, it is said that the burden of proof lies on that person.

natural method. The burden of proving a case is naturally upon the person who puts it forward. The burden of proof in any action is fixed by the pleadings upon the shoulders of the one party or the other. If the pleadings consist of the allegations of certain facts by the plaintiff, and their denial by the defendant, the burden of proof is on the defendant. It is not upon the plaintiff because it is no necessary for him to prove his case on account of an admission upon the trial does not affect the burden of proof.

Burden of proof—Before a Court can proceed to hear a case it is obviously, necessary to determine which party shall begin, or upon whom the burden of proof of the whole case lies. The general rule is that the party who alleges any matter in issue must prove it. This would be simple enough if there were only one fact in issue but there may be several facts in issue, the burden of proof of some being on one party and of others on the other party. The position is practically this, that the burden of proof lies at first on the party against whom judgment would be given if no evidence at all were adduced. When such party has given sufficient evidence to entitle him to judgment if no further evidence were given, the burden of proof shifts to the other party and may be repeatedly so shifted. In a criminal case there is generally no difficulty, as all the allegations are invariably made by the prosecution on whom the general burden of proof invariably lies. So the burden of proof of any particular fact in issue is upon the party who alleges the affirmative of such fact. This rule as to the burden of proof applies generally to negative averments. (Cockle Cas 123—124) See also 35 C 1051, 9 W R 192, 39 C 245, 47 M 337 (P C) = 46 M L J 546, 75 Ind Cas 733, 3 U P L R 44.

In determining a substantive fact to be in issue, the form of the issue is immaterial. Seward v Leggatt, 10 Q B 440. In the same case the burden of proof or onus of proof falls on the party from whom the issue arises. As soon as he brings evidence against which he is contradicted, the burden rolls over to the other side. Per Bowen L J in Per Bowen L J 10 Q B 440. In the same case

Brett M. R. says 'But then, it is contended (I think fallaciously) that if the plaintiff has given prima facie evidence which, unless it be answered will entitle him to have the case decided in his favour, the burden of proof is shifted to the defendant; as to the decision of the question itself...I cannot assent to it. It seems to me that the proposition ought to be stated thus. The plaintiff may give prima facie evidence either by contradictory evidence or by leading the jury to find the question in his favour either by contradicting the plaintiff's evidence or by leading the jury to find the evidence satisfied in favour of the plaintiff with the answer. If they are, they must find for the plaintiff, but if upon a consideration of the facts, they come clearly to the opinion that the question ought to be answered against the plaintiff, they must find for the defendant. Then comes the difficulty: Suppose the jury, after considering the evidence, are left in real doubt as to which way they are to answer the question put to them on behalf of the plaintiff, in that case, also, the burden lies on the plaintiff. And if the defendant has been able by the additional facts which he has adduced to bring the minds of the whole jury to a real state of doubt the plaintiff has failed to satisfy the burden of proof which was upon him.' So the burden of proof fixes upon the party who has the duty of first going forward with the case. If he fails to introduce any evidence at all, or if he fails to introduce sufficient evidence to justify a submission of a case to the Court, the case without any evidence being introduced by the other party, must go against him. If he introduces enough evidence to justify a submission of the case to the Court, the case may still be, as it were, hanging in the balance. The Court may or may not find from the evidence introduced that he has proved his case. If however, he has introduced sufficient evidence to make out what is known as a "prima facie case," then in the absence of evidence to controvert such a case, the Court would be bound to find in his favour.

Scope—The term "burden of proof" is used in two sense as regards (1) the whole case, (2) particular facts. Section to deals with burden of proof of the first class and this section deals with burden of proof of the second class. The burden of proof of any particular fact in issue is upon the party who alleges the affirmative of such fact. It is only necessary to add, and to emphasise, that the substance and not the mere form of the pleading is to be considered. The position can not be altered nor can the Court be misled by the ingenious manipulation of language. This rule as to the burden of proof applies generally to negative averments unless by reason of their complexity or difficulty of proof or by virtue of some statutory provision the burden is upon the person denying the allegation, as will be seen below (Cockle Cas 123). The difference between this section and s 101, consists in this. In section communicated with some of his friends and relatives. It is a conclusion which the Court draws from the probabilities of the case. It is quite clear, therefore, that when no such probability exists, the presumption cannot arise.

But this presumption will not arise if the person in question left his home under circumstances which rendered it improbable that he would communicate with his friends. There is no presumption as to the exact time during the seven years, when the person in question died. When that question is material it must be a subject of distinct proof by the party interested in fixing the time, for there is no presumption as to when, during the seven years, the person in question died (Forrell Ev 412). It is a term of law or practice that is unworthy of belief. An accomplice is not a juror, and the jury should be all of them, not a part of them, which lays down the rule. Scope—Where the fact giving rise to such a presumption as may be drawn under this section, is undisputed and no explanation negating the presumption is offered, the Court is justified in laying the onus proper where but for the presumption, the onus could not be laid. But where explanation, negating the presumption is forthcoming, the Court is not in a position to draw the presumption until it has heard the evidence in support of the explanation and, therefore, must ignore the presumption for the purpose of determining where the onus proper lies, on the principle "when conflicting evidence on a point covered by a presumption of law is to be gone into, the presumption of law is functus officio as presumption of law. Such a presumption therefore cannot shift "the burden of proof" in the strict sense of that term and the most it can effect is a shifting of "the burden of evidence" the burden of going forward with new evidentiary matter—and s 4 of the Act indicates that it is for the Court which is taking evidence, to decide whether such a presumption is strong enough to produce even that limited effect. 1 N L R 169. of a continuous nature gives rise to rebuttable presumption within logical limits that it existed at a subsequent time or has previously existed. The limits of time within which the inference of continuance possesses sufficient probative force to be relevant must obviously vary with each case—always strongest in the beginning, the inference steadily diminishes in force with the lapse of time at a rate proportionate to the quality of permanence belonging to the fact in question, until it ceases or perhaps is supplanted by a directly opposite inference. To put the matter shortly it will be inferred that a given set of facts whose existence at a particular time is once established in evidence continues to exist as long as such facts usually exist 36 C L J 336

Illustration (e)—There is a well known maxim of law omnia presumuntur rite esse acta, this is an inference of reasonable probability arising out of the experience of mankind. The law assumes that any act done in public or any formal act privately done will be performed in due form by the person authorised to do it (Powell Ev 391). Under this section it is presumed that official acts have been regularly performed. But in raising such a presumption the Court has taken into regard to any facts or circumstances indicating that it might have been stolen. Person—A minor is not estoppel from setting up his minority As judicially interpreted the Contract Act makes contracts entered into by a minor void and the Court should not be compelled to pronounce them valid by the provisions contained in the Evidence Act It is not apparently the case that the word "person" in the section does not include a "minor" or "certified lunatic" or other person under a disability to contract owing to imbecility of judgment But it might be held that such a person could not be held to have intentionally caused anything When the law of contract declared that an infant would not be liable upon a contract or in the Statute of Fraud in connection with a contract he cannot be made liable on the same contract by means of an estoppel in other words there can be no doubt about the general law that the principle of estoppel which is a provision of adjective law cannot be invoked to defeat the plain provision of a Statute 71 Ind Cas 161, 20 C W N 418, see also 9 A L J 105, 8 A L J 1058, Bom L R 975 In the latter case it was also held that "person" includes minor or lunatic. ## CHAPTER IX

OF WITNESSES

118 All persons shall be competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them, or from giving rational answer to those questions by tender years extreme old age disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind

Explanation—A lunatic is not incompetent to testify, unless he is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them

Comment—Evidence must be given by legally competent witnesses. The normal man is competent and presumed to be so. The law of competency is therefore practically the law of incompetency consisting of rules of exclusion

Formerly there were several grounds of exclusion of witnesses the chief being (1) incompetency from interest and (2) incompetency from mental incapacity. On the former ground not only were parties themselves and their husbands and wives were in pari jure with either party or otherwise succeeded. Successive statutes have abolished this fact of interest in the proceedings to affect credit

Scope—Under this section all persons are competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are incapable of giving evidence or understanding the questions put to them by reason of tender years extreme old age disease whether of body or mind or any other cause of the same kind. Even a lunatic if he is capable of understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers is a competent witness. The competency of a person to testify as a witness is a condition precedent to the administration to him of an oath or affirmation, and is a question distinct from that of his credibility when he has been sworn or has affirmed. In entering into inquiries as to witness's religious belief or as to the knowledge of the consequences of false hood in this world or the next. It has to ascertain in the best ways it can, whether from the extent of his intellectual capacity and understanding he is able to give a rational account of what he has seen or heard or done on a particular occasion. If a person of tender years or of very advanced age can satisfy these requirements, his competency as a witness is established. Queen Empress v Lal Sahsi, 11 A 183. According to English law every sane person is a competent witness in both civil and criminal cases, except a child who does not understand the nature of an oath. Powell Ev 197. But in India, where a person is competent to testify according to the provisions of this section, but is unable owing to his tender age, to comprehend the nature of an oath or affirmation, s 13 of the Oaths Act relieves the Court of the necessity of administering an oath or affirmation to him, and the evidence of such a person recorded without oath or affirmation may be admitted. 10 O C 337-7 Cr L J 89. See also 16 B 359, 14 B L R. 204 (F. B), 11 C P. L. R Cr 16, contra 16 M 105, 10 A 207, 11 A 183.

How to ascertain competency—By this section, the Legislature has not prescribed an inflexible rule of universal application to the effect that, before a child of tender years is questioned, the Court must by preliminary examination test his capacity to understand and to give rational answers and must form an opinion as to the competency of the witness before the actual examination commences. 18 C W N 147-41 C 406, contra, 11 C W N 51, 20 Bom L R 365.

Tender years—There is no fixed period of legal discretion under which an infant is an incompetent witness. The rule by which an infant under seven years of age cannot commit a crime, because the law presumes him conclusively not to have sufficient intelligence for the act, has no analogy in the law of evidence. (Pattison J in R v Williams, 7 C & P 320). Age is immaterial, and the Court can act on the evidence of a child of tender age and demeanour and the evidence given bears no marks of tutorage. 6 Lah L J 474. A Court should ascertain first of all by some simple questions whether a child is competent to understand and answer questions. 1923 P 91.

Deaf and Dumb—Deaf and dumb persons were formerly regarded as idiots, and therefore incompetent to testify but the modern doctrine is that if they are of sufficient understanding they may give evidence either by signs or through an interpreter or in writing. (Powell Ev 214)

Explanation—A lunatic is one that had understanding but by disease grief or other accident has lost the use of his reason. As long as the suspension of the intelligence continues the lunatic is incompetent to testify, but his competency is restored during a lucid interval. Moreover, the disability does not extend to cases of monomania as to some immaterial matter, nor where the hallucination permits expected from him (R v

119 A witness who is unable to speak may give his evidence in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible, as by writing or by signs, but such writing must be written and the signs made in open Court. Evidence so given shall be deemed to be oral evidence.

Explanation (1)—The exceptor of a bill of exchange may deny that the bill was really drawn by the person by whom it purports to have been drawn

Explanation (2)—If a bailee delivers the goods bailed to a person other than the bailor, he may prove that such person had a right to them as against the bailor

The communication, being made in furtherance of a criminal purpose is not protected from disclosure

This being a fact observed by B in the course of his employment, showing that a fraud has been committed since the commencement of the proceedings it is not protected from disclosure

Legislative changes—The words within brackets have been added by Act 18 of 1872

Principle—The rule is established for the protection of the client, not of the lawyer, and is founded on the impossibility of conducting legal business without professional assistance and on the necessity, in order to render that assistance effectual or securing full and unreserved intercourse between the two. The privilege may be waived by the client, therefore, but not by the adviser (Phipson L. 170).

Scope—A legal adviser, (whether barrister, attorney, pleader or vakil) will not be allowed without the express consent of his client, to disclose oral or documentary communications made or obtained in professional confidence (Phipson L. 169). The law in India relating to professional communications between a solicitor and a client is the same as in England and in interpreting this section the High Court may rightly refer to English cases. The use of the word 'disclose' in this section shows that the communication to be privileged must be of a confidential character between the solicitor and the client. The solicitor learns in the course of his dealings with his client. He must be a matter communicated to him in the course of his professional advice. The client must then state the name of the person for whom he claims the privilege. Where one client mentions the name of another client in a communication made to the solicitor in the course and for the purpose of professional employment by him, and the latter consults the solicitor afterwards on business relating to his own affairs, then unless the name of the latter is communicated to the solicitor confidentially for the purpose of being advised by him, on the express understanding that it the world, the solicitor is bound to disclose it. The solicitor is not at liberty to disclose the contents of the communication without the consent of his client. This section protects from disclosure the communication made in respect of the confidential character of the communication, but also its general purport, unless it is made in an interview between a solicitor and his client. Where in an interview between a solicitor and his client, the solicitor makes a statement to him in the course of his professional employment the solicitor is not bound to disclose the statement, unless the statement is made in confidence, and it was stipulated by or on behalf of his client that it was not to be disclosed. 18 B 263, see also L. English law—A witness, if a stranger cannot be compelled to produce his title deeds or documents in the nature of title deeds on account, it is said, of the mischief which, in the present complicated state of the law of real property, might result if title to estates were subject to compulsory disclosure Mr Best suggests the reason to be the mischief which might ensue from an erroneous decision of the Judge as to the nature of the documents (Phipson Ev 179) A person who is not a party to the action cannot be compelled to produce his title deeds or other documents referring to his title to any property If one person wants to see another person's title deeds or documents he should himself bring an action against such person for discovery Co lle Cas 303, Pickering v Wages 1 L J K B (O S) 110 A mortgagee also cannot be compelled to produce his security including title deeds deposited with him except on payment of his principal and interest Chichester v Marquis of Donegall L R 5 Ch 307 A witness is not bound to produce any document which he swears will tend to criminate him Roe v New York Press 75 L J 31

Production of documents which another person has in possession could refuse to produce

131 No one shall be compelled to produce documents in his possession which any other person would be entitled to refuse to produce if they were in his possession unless such last mentioned person consents to their production

Notes—By section 6, secondary evidence can be given when a document is in the custody of a person who is legally bound to produce it and who refuses to do so In the case, therefore of a document protected under this or the preceding section secondary evidence of its contents could not be given (Cun Ev 366)

132 A witness shall not be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue in any suit or in any civil or criminal proceeding upon the ground that the answer to such question will criminate, or may tend directly or indirectly to criminate such witness, or that it will expose, or tend directly or indirectly to expose, such witness to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind

Provided that no such answer, which a witness shall be compelled to give, shall subject him to any arrest or prosecution, or be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer

English law—No man is bound to criminate himself, nemo tenetur seipsum rodere Hence, a witness whether a party to a suit or not cannot be compelled to answer any question, whether put viva voce or in the form of a written interrogatory, the answer to which may expose, or tend to expose him to a criminal charge, penalty, or forfeiture of any kind If the witness, after claiming privilege is compelled to answer, his evidence will not be admitted against him at a subsequent trial for the criminal offence (R v Garbet 1 Den 236) Powell Ev 222

Scope—It seems that the Indian Legislature while departing from the rule laid down in English cases have accepted the principle laid down in P v Garbet cited above A witness has been made compellable to answer relevant questions but he is given the protection mentioned in that case Where a person is charged with an offence with which he is alleged to have incriminated himself in his deposition in a case the fact that he was the person who gave the deposition should be proved 2 Weir 794

Relevant to the matter in issue—This section does not in terms deal with all criminating questions which may be addressed to a witness but only with questions as to matters relevant to the matters in issue Irrelevant questions should not be asked of a witness as to matters with the rest of the Act, lead to the conclusion that the protection is only afforded to answers to which a witness has objected or has been constrained by the Court to give 3 M 271 12 B 440, 23 B 213 Taking a thumb impression of a witness by the Court is not equivalent to asking a question and receiving answer within the purview of the proviso to s 132 and therefore such a thumb impression may be proved against the person giving it in a criminal trial 16 C W N 500=15 C L J 399

133 An accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person, and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice

Accomplice

The amount of criminality is a matter for consideration and when a person is only an accomplice by implication or in a secondary sense this evidence does not require the same amount of corroboration as that of a person who is an actual perpetrator with the principal offender. In dealing with the question what amount of corroboration is required in the case of testimony given by an accomplice the Court must exercise careful discrimination and consider all the surrounding circumstances in order to arrive at a conclusion whether the facts deposed to by the person alleged to be an accomplice are borne out by those circumstances or whether the circumstances are of such a nature that the evidence purporting to be given by an alleged accomplice are supported in essential and material particulars by evidence aliunde as to the facts deposed to by that accomplice 28 C 339 = 5 C W N 517 see also 15 Bom L R 283, Rat Un Cr C 750, 2 Weir 809 N To justify the Court in setting aside the conviction, it is necessary to show not only that there is no corroboration, but that the Judge taking all the evidence together was wrong in acting on it 16 C W N 669 It is the invariable practice of Courts to require corroboration by an independent witness of so much of the evidence of an accomplice as goes to identify the accused person as the offender 4 Bom L R 401 See also 7 C W N 55 57 P L R 1902 = 5 P R 1902 Cr L B R 187-189 322 6 L B R 4 25 M 143, 5 C P L R 1 Cr Prior to the Evidence Act the rule not of law but of practice was that a conviction could not be based on the unsupported evidence of an accomplice 31 P R 1866 Cr 125 P R 1866 Cr 174 P R 1866 Cr 27 P R 1867 Cr Rat Un Cr C 844 74 P R 1860 Cr 11 P R 1867 Cr, U B R (1892 96) Vol 1 103, 2 C W N 55 5 P R 1902 17 P L R 1912 10 B 319, 24 Ind Cas 158 U B R (1897 1901) Vol 1 173, 9 A 528, Rat Un Cr C 102, L B R (1872 1892) 54 8 A 306 33 C 1353, 8 A 120, 1 M 394 1 L B R 29, 16 P R 1896 Cr contra 1 M 394, 35 M 247, 35 M 397 1 M L J 397 (F B)

Principle—Accomplice evidence is held untrustworthy for three reasons, (1) because an accomplice is likely to swear falsely in order to shift the guilt from himself, (2) because an accomplice is a participant in crime, and consequently as an accomplice he is likely to be influenced by the suggestion of an accomplice, and (3) because an accomplice is likely to be influenced by the expectation of an immunity from those with whom he acted in crime. There is often danger that, for the purpose of saving themselves rather than stating the truth, the accomplices of a crime will make a stronger case against the prisoner and more favourable to themselves than the real truth will warrant 14 B 115

Accomplice—The term accomplice signifies a guilty associate in a crime when the witness sustains such a relation to the criminal act that he could be indicted with the accused he is an accomplice. 27 M 271 Where an accomplice is an involuntary one his statement is not tainted 2 Weir 809 N A spy is no

and when a person is only an accomplice this evidence does not require the same amount of corroboration as that of a person who is an actual perpetrator with the principal offender. In dealing with the question what amount of corroboration is required in the case of testimony given by an accomplice the Court must exercise careful discrimination and consider all the surrounding circumstances in order to arrive at a conclusion whether the facts deposed to by the person alleged to be an accomplice are borne out by those circumstances or whether the circumstances are of such a nature that the evidence purporting to be given by an alleged accomplice are supported in essential and material particulars by evidence abundant as to the facts deposed to by that accomplice 28 C 339 = 5 C W N 517, see also 15 Bom L R 288, Rat Un Cr C 750, 2 Weir 809 N. Principle—Accomplice evidence is held untrustworthy for three reasons, (1) in order to shift the guilt from the perpetrator in crime, and consequently as a violation of an oath, and (3) because of the expectation of an immunity for those with whom he acted criminally. There is often danger that, for the purpose of saving themselves rather than stating the truth, the accomplices of saving themselves rather than stating the truth the accomplices will make out a stronger case against the prisoner and more favourable to themselves than the real truth will warrant 14 B 115

If the fact proposed to be proved is one of which evidence is admissible only upon proof of some other fact, such last mentioned fact must be proved before evidence is given of the fact first mentioned unless the party undertakes to give proof of such fact, and the Court is satisfied with such undertaking.

If the relevancy of one alleged fact depends upon another alleged fact being first proved the Judge may, in his discretion either permit evidence of the first fact to be given before the second fact is proved, or require evidence to be given of the second fact before evidence is given of the first fact.

Notes—As soon as the witness has taken the oath or affirmed he will be examined by the counsel for the party who called him as a witness thus is examination in chief. Next he will probably be cross examined by the other party. Lastly, he may be re examined by the party who called him (Powell Ev 525).

138 Witnesses shall be first examined in chief, then (if the adverse party so desires) cross examined, then (if the party calling him so desires) re examined

Order of examinations

The examination and cross examination must relate to relevant facts, but the cross examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination in chief

The re examination shall be directed to the explanation of matters referred to in cross examination, and, if new matter is, by permission of the Court, introduced in re-examination, the adverse party may further cross examine upon that matter

Principle—Long forensic experience has evolved a body of rules of practice which undoubtedly tend to elicit the truth, and thus materially assist the tribunal in ascertaining the weight which should be attached to the evidence of any witness (Powell Ev 525).

Examination—The first rule which regulates the examination in chief only such issue, everything else will be rigorous under the Act. It is the duty of a logical order every relevant fact so as the witness can depose. This task is more difficult than may at first sight appear. The timid witness must be encouraged, the talkative witness repressed, the witness who is too strong a partisan must be kept in check and yet the counsel must not suggest to the witness what he is to say. An honest witness, however, should be left to tell his tale in his own way. In criminal cases, the duty is probably the duty, the prisoner, for he tells in favour of it. The counsel must not unduly press for conviction (Powell Ev 526).

"We may here observe that it is to an affirmative proof that an examination in chief is mainly addressed, and the proof is that of the issue to which the party producing the witness has by his pleadings in the cause challenged his antagonist, and this consists in avoidance of all diverting and collateral matters. The expression affirmative is used in the sense of something which is affirmed on either one side or the other. In this view a negation by a defendant of the case of opinion, which the witness might himself draw from the facts before him. Testifying as to facts, the witness can of course only do so according to the extent of his knowledge or recollection. He is not required to speak with such certainty as to exclude all doubt from his mind. "If" says Professor Greenleaf "the fact is impressed on his memory but his recollection does not rise to positive assurance, it is still admissible, to be weighed by the jury, but if the impression is not derived from the recollection of the fact, and is so slight as to render it probable that it may have been derived from others, or may have been some unwarrantable deduction of fact from fact." To the expression of Mr Taylor in his memory" (Goodeve will be found limited to more positive evidence and writing, a witness is in its determination, the experience to be derived from science, art or trade, witness skilled, in such matters or as they are termed experts are admitted to give as evidence the results of their own craft bearing on the issue as in questions of foreign law or usage skilled or competent persons are admitted to pronounce authoritatively and as matter of evidence, what that law or usage is. So in actions for criminal conversation or for breach of promise of marriage the terms of attachment on which the parties lived towards each other may be proved upon belief. Ibid p 195

In the case of experts—which is the other exception to the rule requiring witnesses to depose on actual knowledge,—their testimony, with the exception of the case of legal experts, is not so much of the facts themselves at issue (of which, in deed, they might probably be wholly ignorant) as of what science or their peculiar art or calling would pronounce concerning them under corresponding circumstances. Thus it is everyday's experience to receive as evidence the opinions of medical men as to the cause of disease or death—the probable consequences of wounds,—or the propriety or effect of any given course of medical treatment. So in the case of ancient handwriting, antiquarians have been allowed to fix its date by conjecture. (Good Ev 203)

Cross examination—Cross examination is the examination of a witness by the party opposed to the party who called him, and who examined, or was entitled to examine, him in chief. It is the rule that if a competent witness is intentionally called and sworn for the purpose of giving evidence the right of cross examination exists although no testimony is actually given. According to the English rule where a witness is called to depose to a particular fact, he becomes a witness for all purposes, and may be fully cross examined upon all matters material to the issue, in the direct examination. sp 357. Fletcher v.

Order of examinations

The examination and cross examination must relate to relevant facts, but the cross examination need not be confined in the facts to which the witness testified on his examination in chief

The re examination shall be directed to the explanation of matters referred to in cross examination, and, if new matter is, by permission of the Court, introduced in re-examination, the adverse party may further cross examine upon that matter.

Principle—Long forensic experience has evolved a body of rules of practice which undoubtedly tend to elicit the truth, and thus materially assist the tribunal in ascertaining the weight which should be attached to the evidence of any witness (Powell Ev 525)

Examination—The first rule which regulates examination in chief is this.—In examination in-chief only such questions are to be put which are relevant to the issue, and the answers must be admissible in law, and in proper chronological order, to which the witness can depose. As the task is more difficult, the witness must be encouraged, the talk must not be too strong a partisan must be kept to the witness what he is to say. An honest witness must be encouraged to tell his tale in his own way with as little suggestion from counsel as possible. In criminal cases, the duty of counsel for prosecution is wider. It is the practice and probably the duty, of a prosecuting counsel to ask a witness questions favourable to the prisoner, for he must lay all the material evidence before the Court whether it tells in favour of the prisoner or not, and not unduly press for conviction (Powell Ev 526)

"We may here observe that it is in an affirmative proof that an examination-in-chief is mainly addressed, and the proof is that of the issue to which the party producing the witness has by his pleadings in the cause challenged his antagonist, and this consists in avoidance of all diverting and collateral matters. The expression affirmative is used in the sense of something which is affirmed on either one side or the other. In this view a negation by a defendant of the case of the plaintiff would have to be regarded as an affirmation of the former. A, the plaintiff, avers that he sold goods to B the defendant while B says that he did not. The examination on the part of B of his witnesses, and in support of his defence, would be as much an examination in chief as that by A of his witness" — Goodeve Et 194. A witness when under examination must speak of facts within his knowledge. Except in certain exceptional cases, his opinion or belief could not be admissible. Nor does this rule exclude only that which would ordinarily fall under the head of belief, such matters, for instance, as one believed because a narrator of credibility had averred their existence. It would extend even to inferences in the nature of opinion, which the witness might himself draw from the facts before him. Testifying as to facts, the witness can of course only do so according to the extent of his knowledge or recollection. He is not required to speak with such certainty as to exclude all doubt from his mind. "If" says Professor Greenleaf "the fact is impressed on his memory but his recollection does not rise to positive assurance, it is still admissible to be weighed by the jury, but if the impression is not derived from the recollection of the fact, and is so slight as to render it probable that it may have been derived from others, or may have been some unwarrantable deduction of witness' modification" Taylor in Goodeve limited to Ev 195 . . . . .

more positive evidence and writing, a witness is in its determination, the experience to be derived from science, art or trade, witness skilled, in such matters or as they are termed experts are admitted to give as evidence, the results of their own craft bearing on the issue as in questions of foreign law or usage skilled or competent persons are admitted to pronounce authoritatively and as matter of evidence, what that law or usage is. So in actions for criminal conversation or for breach of promise of marriage the terms of attachment on which the parties lived towards each other may be proved upon belief. Ibid p 196

In the case to depose on legal experts, might probably would prove everyday's the cause of priety or effe handwriting, Ev 203)

Cross examination — Cross examination is the examination of a witness by the party opposed to the party who called him, and who examined, or was entitled to examine, him in chief. It is the rule that if a competent witness is intentionally called and sworn for the purpose of giving evidence, although no testimony is actually given, where a witness is called to depose to a particular purpose, and may be fully cross examined in the direct examination 357, Fletcher v. are to impeach the in chief, to suit the facts already stated by the witness to detect and expose discrepancies, or to elicit suppressed facts which will support the case of the cross examining party. Great latitude is permitted in cross examination, and cross examiner will not be stopped by the Court unless the question is manifestly irrelevant and calculated neither to weaken the examination in chief nor to impeach the credit of the witness. In order

But irrelevant questions which neither contradict or qualify the result of the examination in chief nor impeach the credit of the witness, are not allowed even in cross-examination. Where a question asked in cross-examination appears to be irrelevant it will not be excluded if the cross-examiner undertakes to show that it is really material (Powell Ev pp 531-533)

"Cross examination, though very powerful, is also a very dangerous engine. It is a double edged weapon, and as often wounds him who wields it, as him at whom it is aimed. To wield it in the hands of the raw advocate is most damage on his cause of clenching the nail examination-in chief examination There-

When the examination in chief has resulted in clear, conclusive, or unimpeachable evidence it may be prudent for the adverse party not to cross examine, for, in such a case, he may by so doing, instead of weakening the evidence, merely strengthen and confirm it. So too, he will generally not cross examine a witness, whose evidence he admits, or which possibly can not injure his case. Reckless cross examination, moreover often lets in evidence which before was not admissible (Powell Ev 531)

Re examination—The object of re examination is to explain the meaning of the expressions used by the witness in cross examination. The re examination is subject to the same rules as the examination-in-chief. No leading questions may be asked for the witness is the witness of the party who examined him in chief. As to the introduction of new matter, see the end of the section. The Court etc See what form the exam

Cases—An accused person must be allowed to cross examine witnesses called by another co accused for his defence, if the case of the latter is adverse to that of the former. 21 C 401, but see 12 W R Cr 75 which was decided before this Act. But the view expressed in 21 C 401 is in accordance with English law vide Lord v Colvin, (1855) 24 L J, Ch 517, R. v Burdett, Dears C C 431. One defendant can also cross-examine another co defendant's witness if his defence is adverse. 1 M H C R 546. In criminal cases an accused has the right to cross examine the prosecution witness when the charge is framed. If he waives that right he cannot afterwards slum that right. 7 C 28=8 C L R 328, 20 C 469, contra 2 A 253, 32 C 292. In the latter two cases it was laid down that the right continued till the end of the case. After a refusal of an application by the accused for re summoning the prosecution witnesses for further cross examination, the accused applied for summoning some of those witnesses as witnesses on his behalf. On their appearing the Magistrate refused to allow the accused to cross examine them and the accused thereupon declined to examine them as his witnesses. Held, that the refusal by the Court to allow the accused to cross-examine the witnesses, who were in attendance in Court has resulted in a mis-trial of the case 1 C W N 19, see also 5 C W N 447

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the right of counsel to demand in cross examination that a witness should repeat the story which he has told in the examination-in-chief 85 P L R 1914=22 Ind Cas 724. A Magistrate is not entitled to refuse the application of the accused made after the framing of the charge, to recall the witnesses for the prosecution, on the ground that they have already been cross examined before the framing of the charge in the understanding that they would not be required for further cross examination after the charge 6 C W N 424, see 41 C 299. Where a witness has not been asked a single question in examination-in-chief there even the opposite party has the right to cross examine 6 B L R App 88. In a criminal case it must be proved that either the accused cross examined the prosecution witnesses or was given sufficient opportunity to cross examine them 19 B 759, see also 9 W R 587, 6 W R 181, 12 C L J 124 (F B). Generally it is not the province of the Court to examine witnesses and as a rule the Court should leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as is provided for in this section 11 O L J 333=82 Ind Cas 154 (1).

It certainly implied by this section that a party must have had an opportunity to cross examine and does not mean that merely a right to cross examine a witness without an opportunity being offered for cross examination is sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law 73 Ind Cas 339=24 Cr L J 595

139. A person summoned to produce a document does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it and cannot be cross examined unless and until he is called as a witness

Scope—It is the rule that, if a competent witness is intentionally called and sworn for the purpose of giving evidence, the right of cross examination exists although no testimony is actually given. Rev v Brooke, 2 Stark 472, Phillips v Eamer, 1 Esp 355, 6 B L R App 88. But there are certain exceptions to the general rule. The rule does however, extend to a witness who is simply subpoenaed to produce a document to be identified or proved by another witness. In such a case he need not be sworn. Summers v Moreley, 2 Crompt and M 477, Perry v Gibson, 1 A & E 48, Rush v Smith 1 C M and R 64, Davis v Dale 4 Car, and P 335, Griffith v Ricketts, 7 Hare 300, Reed v James, 1 Stark, 1327

Until he is called as a witness—i.e. until he is sworn intentionally. If he is unnecessarily sworn he cannot be cross examined (Rush v Smith, 1 C, M and R 94), nor where he is sworn by mistake (Wood v Mackinson, 2 M and R 273; Clifford v Hunter, 3 C and P 16, Reed v James 1 Stark, 1327)

Witnesses to character

140. Witnesses to character may be cross examined and re examined

Scope—According to English practice it is not usual to cross examine, except under special circumstances witnesses called merely to speak to the character of a prisoner, but there is no rule which forbids the cross examination of such witnesses (Woodroffe, 863). The Indian rule is also the same as the use of the word "may" suggests that it is not the usual practice though the right exists (Norton Ev 325)

141. Any question suggesting the answer which the person putting it

wishes or expects to receive is called a leading question

Leading questions—"A question" says Pentthum "is a leading one, when it indicates to the witness the real or supposed fact which the examiner expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer. Is not your name so and so? Do reside in such a place? Are you not in the service of such and such a person? you not lived so many years with him? It is clear that under this form of information may be conveyed to the witness in disguise. It may be used to lead him to give the desired answers to the questions about to be put."

examiner, while he pretends ignorance and is asking for information, is in reality giving instead of receiving it." A leading question is one which suggests to the witness the answer desired, or which embodying a material fact, admits of a conclusive answer by a simple negative or affirmative (Taylor § 1404) "It is very clear that a question is leading which suggests to the witness the answer which he is to make, or which puts into his mouth words which he is to echo back. But if it merely suggests a subject, without suggesting an answer or a specific thing, it is not leading. It has often been declared that . . . and admits of question which . . . such questions . . . real objection . . . use which may

142 Leading questions must not, if objected to by the adverse party, be asked in an examination in chief, or in a re-examination, except with the permission of the Court.

The Court shall permit leading questions as to matters which are introductory and undisputed, or which have, in its opinion, been already sufficiently proved.

Principle—There is no rule of evidence more familiar to the practitioner than the one which forbids leading questions on direct examination of witness. Leading questions may be used to prepare a witness to give the desired answers to the questions about to be put to him, the examiner, where he pretends ignorance as in asking in chief or in re-examination. But witness may often be presumed to him, and that leading or suggestive allow the party to extract only so be favourable or even put a false

Scope—Counsel when examining in chief must not ask leading. But questions the rule is not an inflexible one. In the first place, a question is not objectionable as leading when it is only introductory to what is material, or relates to matter as to which there is no dispute. In most cases it is necessary to prove a certain number of unconnected facts in order that Judge or Jury may understand the position of the parties and the case.

As to those matters, leading on the other side, and such in a direct manner. But when the such questions merely as "what happened next?" This rule prevents, at least in some measure, the possibility of any collusion between a prosecutor, or party, and his witness. Leading questions may also be put to contradict evidence already given by a witness on the other side, e.g., if the plaintiff has sworn that the defendant said "The goods need not all be equal to sample," the plaintiff that the effect?" and there permission of the viva voce examination be put except in a

If objected to etc.—If the answer will be taken in the Judge's notes the evidence after wards on the score of its hearsay estimation. Sometimes the Judge himself will interfere to permit a leading question or a series of leading questions being put, but it is the duty of the opposing counsel to take objection, and it is only through want of practical skill that the objection occurs. At the same time, it is to be observed that if evidence is elicited by a series of leading questions unobjected to, the effect of the evidence so obtained is very much weakened, for it can scarcely escape the notice of the Judge. It is advisable therefore for a counsel, examining in-chief or on re-examination, not to put leading questions except of course as to those points on which they are expressly permitted by the Act (Norton Ev 325)

When they may be asked 143 Leading questions may be asked in cross-examination.

143 Leading questions may be asked in cross examination

Comment.—If any presumption is to be entertained as to the bias of witnesses, it is the witness who is unfavourable rather than favourable to the cross-examiner, hence the reasons for the rule excluding leading questions do not apply to cross-examinations. But although it is the undoubted rule that leading questions may be asked in cross-examination, the rule is subject to the qualification that the Court in its discretion may restrict the right, where the witness shows a bias in favour of the cross-examiner. If the privilege were not thus subject to the control of the Court serious injustice might result as one secretly hostile might conceal his bias in order to be called as a witness, and would only need an intimation from the cross-examining counsel to say, whatever might be most favourable to him. This privilege of submitting leading questions on cross-examination is always therefore, subject to the sound discretion of the Court (Burr Jones § 824). Thus on Hardy's trial a witness for the prosecutor on evincing a favourable disposition towards the prisoner was asked a leading question by the counsel for the defence, but Buller, J. refused to allow the question to be put, saying — You may lead a witness upon a cross-examination to bring him directly to the point as to the answer, but you can not go the length of putting into the witness's mouth the very words which he is to echo back again. R. Hardy, 24 How St. Tr. p. 659 cited in Powell Ev 532. But in a latter case, Alterson B. observed "But you may always put a leading question in cross-examination whether a witness be unwilling or not." Parkin v. Moon 7 C. & P. 408.

Scope—This does not mean that a witness may be asked questions on irrelevant topics for the mere purpose of contradicting him or of proving contradictory statements. For, unless they come within the exceptions mentioned in s 153, his answers to questions tending to shake his credit cannot be contradicted, nor by section 155, can former contradictory statements be proved unless that part of the witness's evidence, which they counteract, was itself liable to be contradicted (Cun Ev, 378)

147 If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto

Scope—The word "such," it is presumed, refers to the last clause of the preceding section and not to the word "any" in earlier part of that section. None but relevant questions can be asked in cross examination ante section 138, clause 2. But relevancy is of two fold, character, it may be directly relevant in its bearing on elucidating or disproving, the very merits of the points in issue. In such a case, the answer may criminate the witness, or the character of the witness, or can be put in the story. Where questions are put to a witness not for proving or disproving the point in issue but exclusively and merely to show what is the character of the witness the Court is to decide whether the question is to be answered or not (Norton Ev 328)

148 If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it, and may if it thinks fit, warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations:—

- (1) such questions are proper if they are of a character such that the imputation conveyed by the opinion of the Court as to the character of the witness would affect the matter to which he testifies;
- (2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote, in time or of such a character, that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a degree, the slight opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies;
- (3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence;
- (4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Scope—Witnesses may be cross examined as to specific facts though no pertinent to the issue which tend to discredit the witness or impeach his moral character and credit when there is reason to believe that such examination will tend to the ends of Justice, but that a cross-examination of this character ought not to be allowed when it seems unjust to the witness and uncalled for by the circumstances of the case. According to this view it may as a rule be safely left to the trial Judge

Darby v Ouseley, 11 H & N 1

Principle—A witness may be questioned as to his previous written statements be defeated if the writing is not produced, or it may be to test his memory and here the very object would or it may be to test his memory and here the very object would from principle is to impeach his credit by contradicting his present statement with that supposed to have been made by him to some other person common justice requires that before his credit is attacked he should have an opportunity of declaring whether he ever made such statement to that person and of explaining in the re-examination, the nature and particulars of the conversation under what circumstances it was made from what motives and with what designs. The former account, given by him in conversation may have been partially heard, or misunderstood, or partly forgotten or intentionally misrepresented. Philips and Arnold Vol II p 505

Scope—There is hardly any more familiar practice in judicial procedure than that of impeaching witnesses by proof of their former statements which are inconsistent with their present testimony. Since such an attempt is a direct attack upon the testimony of the witness and may result in serious consequences it is important that the practice should be so regular that the witness may have full opportunity to admit, deny or explain any statement which is assailed. It has frequently been

There is often no better way of doing this than by ascertaining the accuracy of his evidence as to surrounding circumstances, though they are not so immediately connected with the facts of the case as to be themselves irrelevant. While, on the one hand, important corroboration may be given in the case of a truthful witness, a valuable field for cross examination and exposure is offered in the case of a false witness. In order to prepare the ground of their corroboration it is necessary to elicit these surrounding circumstances in the first instance from the witness himself, and for this the section makes provision (Cun Ev 383). This section, in effect, declares evidence of certain facts to be admissible, and if it had not been inserted the judge would have had to and it, and he might has been against the

But it is doubtful whether he is entitled, except for his particular purpose, to question the witness as to other and independent matters contained in the same series of writing 8 C 739 (745)

Case—2 Ind Cas 535

162 A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to Court, notwithstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall be decided on by the Court.

The Court, if it sees fit, may inspect the document, unless it refers to matters of State, or take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility.

If for such a purpose it is necessary to cause any document to be translated, the Court may, if it think fit, direct the translator to keep the contents secret unless the document is to be given in evidence, and if the interpreter disobeys such direction he shall be held to have committed an offence under section 166 of the Indian Penal Code.

Comment.—If a person served with a subpoena admits that he has the documents required with him, he must produce them. He may be asked what documents he has with him and he is bound to answer the question without being sworn, and produce the documents. The witness produces the document to the Court and not to the parties, and the Court decides whether it is to be used or not. The witness can, of course, take any legal objection to producing the document. If a witness attends on a subpoena tecum, with a document which he properly produces, evidence will be admissible and refuses to produce the evidence will not be admissible. A person cannot, of course, be compelled by subpoena to produce documents which are not in his possession or under his control, (Powell Ev 653). If the Court decides to summon a Government official for the production of certain documents it should only do so after careful consideration and once the summons had been issued production should ordinarily be insisted on if the party who obtained the summons so desires. 45 Ind Cas 898

163. When a party calls for a document which he has given the other party notice to produce, and such document is produced and inspected by the party calling for its production, he is bound to give it as evidence if the party producing it requires him to do so.

Scope.—The production of papers upon notice does not make them evidence in the cause, unless the party calling for them inspects them, so as to become acquainted with their contents, in which case he is obliged to use them as his evidence at least if they be in any way material to the issue. The reason for this rule is, that it would give an unconscionable advantage to a party, enable him to pry into the affairs of his adversary, without at the same time subjecting him to the risk of making whatever he inspects evidence for both parties. (Taylor § 1817). If a party gives notice to produce a document and inspects it, he is bound to produce it. The law will not allow him to then make use of it or not, as he pleases. (Cun Introduction to Ev § 117). If the other party and inspects the document, it is evidence for both the parties. This section is applicable to accounts produced under the procedure for discovery or only to accounts produced after the trial has begun. 72 Ind Cas 459

B seeks to produce the document itself to contradict the secondary evidence given by A or in order to show that the agreement is not stamped. He cannot do so.

Scope—If a party, after a notice, declines to produce a document when formally called upon to do so, he will not afterwards be allowed to change his mind and therefore, if he once refuses, he cannot when his opponent has proved a copy and is about to have it read produce the original and object to its admissibility without the evidence of an attesting witness. Neither after such refusal will he be permitted to put the document into the hands of his opponent's witness for the purpose of cross examination, or to produce and prove it as part of his own case. (Taylor § 1818) A party who after notice, declines to produce his document cannot afterwards change his mind and produce it as part of his own case or put it in the hands of his opponent's witnesses, for the purpose of cross examination. If his adversary being entitled to give secondary evidence prove a copy, he is bound by it. (Norton Et 341)

165 The Judge may, in order to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts, ask any question he pleases in any form at any time of any witness, or of the parties about any fact relevant or irrelevant, and may order the production of any document or thing, and neither the parties nor their agents shall be entitled to make any objection to any such question or order, nor, without the leave of the Court to cross examine any witness upon any answer given in reply to any such question.

Provided that the judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant, and duly proved.

Provided also that this section shall not authorise any Judge to compel any witness to answer any question, or to produce any document which such witness would be entitled to refuse to answer or produce under sections 121 to 131, both inclusive, if the question were asked or the document were called for by the adverse party, nor shall the Judge ask any question which it would be improper for any other person to ask under section 148 or 149, nor shall he dispense with primary evidence of any document, except in the cases hereinbefore excepted.

Scope—The object of the questions which the Judge is here empowered to put is to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts. There is no relevancy. The section applies whether the case is civil or criminal. Under this section a Judge may ask any question of a witness about any fact relevant or irrelevant to the issues in the case. See also 10 B 185.

549 Even though a document is not produced at the first hearing of a case the Court can call for the document under this section. The Court's power is established by legal bounds of the case. See also 10 B 185.

THE INDIAN FATAL ACCIDENTS ACT, 1855

ACT NO XIII OF 1855

RECEIVED THE G G'S ASSENT ON THE 27 TH MARCH, 1855

An Act to provide compensation to families for loss occasioned by the death of a person caused by actionable wrong

WHEREAS no action or suit is now maintainable in any Court against a person who by his wrongful act, neglect or default, may have caused the death of another person, and it is oftentimes right and expedient that the wrong doer in such case should be answerable in damages for the injury so caused by him, It is enacted as follows

Notes—Where the loss was not occasioned by any act, neglect or default of the Railway, the company should not be made liable 90 Ind Cas 1076=A I R 1925 Lah 635

1. Whenever the death of a person shall be caused by wrongful act, neglect, or default, and the act neglect or default is such as would (if death had not ensued) have entitled the party injured to maintain an action and recover damages in respect thereof the party who would have been liable if death had not ensued, shall be liable to an action or suit for damages, notwithstanding the death of the person injured, and although the death shall have been caused under such circumstances as amount in law to felony or other crime

* Every such action or suit shall be for the benefit of the wife, husband, parent, and child, if any, of the person whose death shall have been so caused, and shall be brought by and in the name of the executor, administrator, or representative of the person deceased, and every such action, the Court may give such damages as it may think proportioned to the loss resulting from such death to the parties respectively for whom and for whose benefit such action shall be brought, and the amount so recovered, after deducting all costs and expenses, including the costs not recovered from the defendant, shall be divided amongst the before-mentioned parties, or any of them, in such shares as the Court by its judgement or decree shall direct.

Notes—

General in Council and Regulations made on or after the fourteenth day of January, 1887.

General Rule of Construction

5. (1) Where any Act of the Governor-General in Council is not expressed to come into operation on a particular day, then it shall come into operation on the day on which it receives the assent of the Governor-General.

(2) * Where any Act of the Governor-General in Council is reserved, under section 68 of the Government of India Act, 1915, for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure thereon, then, if no later date is expressed, it shall come into operation, if assented to, by His Majesty, on the day on which that assent is duly notified.

(3)† Unless the contrary is expressed, an Act of the Governor-General in Council or Regulation shall be construed as coming into operation immediately on the expiration of the day preceding its commencement.

Notes—A Statute takes effect from the first moment of the day on which it is assented, unless another be expressly named, in which case it comes into operation immediately on the expiration of the previous day. But where a particular day is named for its commencement, but the Royal assent is not given till a later day, the Statute comes into operation only on the later day. Burn v Carvalho, (1834) 4 New, 1893, Maxwell pp 739-740.

6. ‡ Where this Act, or any Act of the Governor-General in Council or Regulation made after the commencement of this Act, repeals any enactment hitherto made or hereafter to be made, then, unless a different intention appears, the repeal shall not—

- (a) revive anything not in force or existing at the time at which the repeal takes effect; or
- (b) affect the previous operation of any enactment so repealed or anything duly done or suffered thereunder; or
- (c) affect any right, privilege, obligation, or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under any enactment so repealed; or
- (d) affect any penalty, forfeiture, or punishment incurred in respect of any offence committed against or under any enactment so repealed; or
- (e) affect any right, privilege, obligation, or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under any enactment so repealed.

And any such investigation, legal proceeding, or remedy may be instituted, continued, or enforced, and any such penalty, forfeiture or punishment may be imposed as if the repealing Act or Regulation had not been passed.

WHEREAS it is expedient to adopt the law relating to the use of a Government Seal to the present form of the Government of India, It is enacted as follows —

Preamble

Whenever it is required by any Regulation of a Local Government, or by any Act of the Governor General of India in Council, that the seal of the East India Company shall be affixed on behalf or by the authority of the Government to any instrument or document, it shall be lawful, if the seal is to be affixed on behalf or by the authority of a Local Government, to affix in lieu of the seal of the East India Company a seal bearing the designation of such Local Government, or, if the seal is to be affixed on behalf or by the authority of the Government of India, a seal bearing the inscription "Government of India", and such instrument or document so sealed shall to all intents and purposes be as valid and effectual as if the seal so used had been that of East India Company.

THE GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT, 1890. ACT NO VIII. OF 1890.

RECEIVED THE G G S ASSENT ON THE 21ST MARCH, 1890

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Guardian and Ward

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate, and amend the law relating to guardian and ward; It is hereby enacted as follows

Consolidate and amend the law — The previous Acts which were in force were Act XL of 1858 (Bengal Minors Act) and Act XL of 1864 (Bombay Minors Act) The only difference between Act XL of 1858 and this Act is imperative whilst Act VIII of 1890 is permissive Under the the former was entitled to institute or defend any suit connected with the estate of a minor unless he had obtained a certificate or unless the estate was of small value. Under the present Act, the Court has the power of appointing a next friend or guardian for any suit for or against a minor, but it is not necessary that the person so appointed should be a guardian under the Act 19 C 301. A person appointed a guardian by a Will need not take out probate, in order to obtain a certificate of guardianship under the Act.

How guardians are appointed.—No precise words are necessary to appoint a guardian, that the children are to be person, or that he is to have or that he is to take care to see Habes, Mosley, 109, Miller B P C 302, see also 21 C W es Sen 89

6 In the case of a minor who is not an European British subject, nothing Saving of power to appoint in this Act shall be construed to take any power to appoint a person or property, or both,

Notes—According to Hindu law a father is not prohibited from appointing by writing or otherwise a guardian of his minor children 7 A Hindu mother has no authority on of her will 21 M 401=8 M 1 arceners of Mitakshara to appoint a testamentary guardian 41 M 461=31 il guardian himself minor's person 66 Under Hindu law and any provision his nephew is not

7. Where the Court is satisfied that it is for the welfare of a minor that an order should be made—

(a) appointing a guardian of his person or property, or both or
(b) declaring a person to be such a guardian,
the Court may make an order accordingly

(2) An order under this section shall imply the removal of any guardian who has not been appointed by will or other instrument, or appointed or declared by the Court

When an order is made appointing or declaring a person to be a guardian, the provisions of this Act shall apply as if the order had been made under the provisions of this Act

Welfare of the Minor—In considering whether an order should be made appointing a guardian for a minor the welfare of the minor is the paramount consideration that it is for the welfare of the minor of appointment should be made If made 11 Ind Cas 478=231 P L 953, 18 C W N 160, 16 Ind Cas 900, Johnstone v Beattie, 10 Cl & F 42, 29 A 210, 84 P R 1894 From the earliest time the State is considered to be the guardian of the infants and this principle is given effect to by the earliest regulations When the state assumes this duty it is bound to bring up the boy in the same manner as his natural father or guardian would have done that is, in the tradition of the family to which after becoming a major he has to revert. 5 Pat L T 415=2 Pat L R 200=81 Ind Cas 1045=1924 Pat 755 The key note of the Act lies in the introductory words of this section, the proceedings are to be taken for the benefit of the minor and not for an ulterior purpose, such as 702=15 C W N 457, 67 Ind 11 Ind Cas 418=18 A L J 71,

Clauses (a) and (b)—This section makes a distinction between appointing a guardian and declaring a person to be one A when, for he has been appointed under some independent instrument such as a will. By the declaration the Court merely gives effect to the appointment. 11 Bom L R 384=2 Ind Cas 484

Appointing a guardian—The Act does not authorise the appointment as guardian of a person not claiming by his own application nor proposed in accordance with the terms of the Act. 135 P R 1893. Where a minor is a member of a joint Hindu family and the property is joint and undivided, held, that it was competent to a Court to appoint any person guardian of the minor's interest in that property. 46 P R 1909=39 P L R 1909=56 P W R 1909=1 Ind Cas 745. In appointing a guardian the Court must consider whether such appointment is necessary. A I R 1916 Lah 393, see also 40 M 672=34 Ind Cas 766=36 M L J 504, 16 C W N 444, 19 Ind Cas 783, 28 Ind Cas 507, 54 Ind Cas 418=18 A L J 71, 26 Ind Cas 524, 68 Ind Cas 474.

Declaration of guardian—This section is inapplicable to non-cupative wills. The heir of a minor may be appointed as the guardian of the minor's property though not of his person as such heir is interested in the proper management of the minor's property to which he hopes to succeed. 54 P R 1898. A person, who is to succeed to the property of a minor on his death has an interest adverse to the minor, and if he is not a blood relation of the minor, he is not fit to be appointed guardian. 19 Ind Cas 783. If appointed by the latter's declaration, the guardian must administer the property of the minor, to its provisions as regards the minor's person and property.

Order appointing a guardian—So far as the infant is concerned he is put in the position of a ward as soon as the Court sets out in clis (a) and (b), and the provision is merely an additional precaution to protect the effect of the order requiring security is to suspend the guardian's right to give security. But as soon as an order is made under this section the infant becomes a minor and remains a ward irrespective of any act of the guardian until he attains the age of 21 years. 4 C L J 112, see also 9 M L J 24, 8 C 967, 14 C 338, 15 C 40, 14 C 55, 17 C 347 (P C). A guardian can be appointed in respect of trust property in the hands of a minor. 39 A 288, contra 42 Ind Cas 3, 40 M 672, 1 Pat 432.

Joint Hindu family—Under the Act it is not competent to Court to appoint a guardian of the property of a minor who is a member of a joint Hindu family. 17 A 522=A W N 189, 119 20 A 400=A W N 1898, 94 A W N 1896, 30, 165 P L R 1906, 2, A 407 (416) P C 43 P R 1909=1 Ind Cas 745, 3 B 431, 8 B 395, 30 B 152, 37 M 139, 21 Ind Cas 848, 40 Ind Cas 145, 43 Ind Cas 865, 45 Ind Cas 90, 46 Ind Cas 815, 19 C 301. This rule applies to the case of a minor belonging to an Aliyas santhana family, where the only right of the infant is in the property. 4 M L T 462=32 M 139=1 B 152. If the co-parceners are minors and the guardian is appointed by one of the group arrives at the age of majority the guardianship of the person so appointed by Court must cease. 10 Bom L R 279=32 B 259, 57 Ind Cas 678. The High Court under its general jurisdiction has power to appoint a guardian of the property of a minor who is member of a joint Hindu family. 3 Bom L R 411=1 Ind Cas 887.

DUTIES, RIGHTS, AND LIABILITIES OF GUARDIANS

General

20 (1) A guardian stands in a fiduciary relation to his ward and, save as provided by the will or other instrument, if any, by which he was appointed, or by this Act, he must not make any profit out of his office

Fiduciary relation of guardian to ward

(2) The fiduciary relation of a guardian to his ward extends to and affects purchases by the guardian of the property of the ward, and by the ward of the property of the guardian immediately or soon after the ward has ceased to be a minor, and generally all transactions between them while the influence of the guardian still lasts or is recent

Notes—“This section lays down certain general propositions based on the fact that guardianship is a trust, and that the relationship between guardian and ward is one uberrimæ fidei, not only while it lasts, but even after it has ceased to exist.”—Statement of Objects and Reasons. See also 30 B 591, 54 Ind Cas 925=157 P R 1919, 14 Ind Cas 674=33 P L R 1912 13 B 61. An Official Trustee cannot be appointed guardian of the property of a minor 1978 Bom 69

21 A minor is incompetent to

Capacity of minors to act as guardians own wife member or child of another minor member of that family.

Scope of the Section.—The second minor argument is based on section 21 of the Guardians and Wards Act, which impliedly assumes that a minor is (a) competent to act as guardian of his wife and child (b) that he is competent to be the managing member of an undivided Hindu family and that (c) he is as such manager competent to be the guardian of the wife or child of another minor member of that family. This last clause has got its own implication that while any other minor is competent to be guardian of his wife or child, a minor who is a junior member of an undivided Hindu family is not competent to be guardian even of his own wife or child. I am very doubtful whether a minor can at all be the managing member of a Hindu family though he is the senior male member. ‘Guardian’ in section 21 is evidently intended to include the guardianship of both person and property. It does seem anomalous that a minor could be made guardian of the persons of his wife and children, that is, entitled to the custody of their person and the management of their property, while his own person is subject to the custody of the legal guardian of his person and his properties which are under the management of the legal guardian of his properties. But this particular section 21 cannot, in my opinion, be held to derogate from the rights of the legal guardian of a minor’s own person. I might venture to suggest that the Legislature should amend section 21 by omitting the portion following

his conjugal

guardian all matters connected with the guardianship his ward, be subject to the control of the Government, or of such authority as that Government, by notification in the official Gazette, appoints in this behalf.

Notes—Where the Collector is authorised by the Board of Revenue, as Court of Wards, to raise a loan on mortgage of the ward's properties, he can delegate his powers to the manager acting under him. The maxim delegatus non potest delegare any particular implied from the Court as guardian of the property of a minor has got special powers under this section and section 29 which limits the power of a guardian does not apply to a Collector. 96 Ind Cas 17=28 Bom L R 628.

Guardian of Property

27. A guardian of the property of a ward is bound to deal therewith as carefully as a man of ordinary prudence would deal with it if it were his own, and, subject to the provisions of this chapter, he may do all acts which are reasonable and proper for the realization, protection, or benefit of the property

Notes—This section does not authorise a guardian to make an arrangement as regards the minor's immovable property which is against the interest of the minor 7 Ind Cas 214 A guardian appointed under this Act cannot ratify the unauthorized acts of another guardian 54 Ind Cas 311 It is not an act of ordinary prudence on the part of the guardian within this section to admit that his wards were liable for debt which could not be legally recovered owing to the lapse of time 23 O C 72

28 Where a guardian has been appointed by will or other instrument, his power to mortgage or charge, or transfer by sale, gift, exchange, or otherwise immovable property belonging to his ward, is subject to any restriction which may be imposed by the instrument, unless he has, under this Act, been declared guardian and the Court which made the declaration permits him by an order in writing notwithstanding the restriction to dispose of any immovable property specified in the order in a manner permitted by the order

District Judge declining to compel a person in possession of a minor's property to hand it over to the guardian and referring the guardian to a separate suit 40 P L R 1912=13 Ind. Cas 326=115 P W R 1912. A Court of revision may look into the evidence to determine whether irregular in the exercise of its jurisdiction. Held, irregular suit practically to contest effect that the plaintiff is not bound by the provision of this Act 27 P W R 1916=33 Ind. 7. The expression 'orders made under this Act' does not cover the case of a guardian under s 41 (3) and a separate suit will lie to contest the propriety of the guardian under s 41 (3) 36 M L J 189=51 Ind Cas 236.

49 The costs of any proceeding under this Act including the costs of maintaining a guardian or other person in the civil jail, shall, subject to any rules made by the High Court under this Act, be in the discretion of the Court in which the proceeding is had.

50 (1) In addition to any other power to make rules conferred expressly or impliedly by this Act, the High Court may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Act—

- (a) as to the matters respecting which, and the time at which, reports should be called for from Collectors and subordinate Courts,
- (b) as to the allowances to be granted to, and the security to be required from guardians and the cases in which such allowances should be granted,
- (c) as to the procedure to be followed with respect to applications of guardians for permission to do acts referred to in sections 28 and 29;

- (f) as to the circumstances in which such requisitions as are mentioned in clauses (a) (b) (c) and (d) of section 34 should be made
- (g) as to the preservation of statements and accounts delivered and exhibited by guardians,
- (h) as to the inspection of those statements and accounts by persons interested,
- * "(ff) as to the audit of accounts under section 34 A, the class of persons who should be appointed to audit accounts, and the scales remuneration to be granted to them,"
- (i) as to the custody of money and securities for money, belonging to wards,
- (j) as to the securities on which money belonging to wards may be invested,
- (k) as to the education of wards for whom guardians not being Collectors, have been appointed or declared by the Court, and,
- (l) generally for the guidance of the Courts in carrying out the purposes of this Act

2) Rules under clauses (a) and (i) of sub section (1) shall not have effect until they have been approved by the Local Government nor shall any rule under this section have effect until it had been published in the official gazette

51 A guardian appointed, by, or holding a certificate of administration from a Civil Court, under any enactment repealed by this Act shall save as may be prescribed, be subject to the provisions of this Act, and of the rules made under it as if he had been appointed or declared by the Court under Chapter II

Notes—The word guardian in this section when read with definition thereof in s 4 (2) can only mean a guardian who was such at the time when the Act came into force 17 B 268

52. In section 3 of the Indian Majority Act 1875 for the words, "every minor of whose person or property a guardian has been or shall be appointed by any Court of Justice, and every minor under the jurisdiction of any Court of Wards" the following shall be substituted, namely—

"every minor of whose person or property, or both, a guardian other than a guardian for a suit within the meaning of Chapter XXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure, has been or shall be appointed or declared by any Court of Justice before the minor has attained the age of eighteen years and every minor of whose property the superintendence has been or shall be assumed by any Court of Wards before the minor has attained that age"

Notes—The order of a District Judge acknowledging a person as the guardian of a minor is a declaration of such guardianship within the meaning of s 7 and the age of majority in such a case is therefore 21 under section 3 of the Indian Majority Act as amended by this section 9 M L J 24, see also 6 L R L Cas 6, 29 A 672-4 A L J 507-A. guardian to pay into Court the balance due from him on settlement of his accounts, 55 Ind Cas 587. An order refusing to remove a guardian is final and is not open to appeal 42 A 514=18 A L J 624=56 Ind Cas 208. The order under section 34 of the Act directing the guardian to pay into Court a certain sum of money as being the balance due to him on an examination of accounts is not open to appeal 4 Lah L J 272, 67 Ind Cas 309, see also 1923 Lah 89. Where an order of a District Judge under this Act has not been appealed against the order becomes final and is not therefore liable to be contested by suit or otherwise 85 Ind Cas 667. Where the District Court refuses to take action under s 45 acting on the erroneous view that it has no power to compel the guardian to furnish fresh accounts and to pay the amount due after deleting objectionable items, the order of the District Court is not appealable 22 P L J 585.

48 Save as provided by the last foregoing section, and by section 62<sup>1/2</sup> of the Code of Civil Procedure an order made under this Act shall be final, and shall not be liable to be contested by suit or otherwise.

Notes—It is doubtful what is the decree of conclusiveness which is attached to an order under this section 24 M L J 49=16 Ind Cas 943=1913 M W N 365. Where an application for appointment for non appearance and an application for a second substantive application for an appointment. Where the District Judge refused such an application that appeal lies to the High Court again 1913 Cas 985. No appeal lies against an order of a person in possession of a minor's property.
